How a Doctor Practised To Deceive

By MORTON MINTZ
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The former medical director of a major drug company says the job taught him "the meaning of loneliness and alienation."

In an unusual, 25-page document, the physician, Dr. A. Dale Console, said that after 6½ years "I reached a point where I could no longer live with myself. I had compromised to the point where my back was against a wall and I had to choose between resigning myself to total capitulation or resigning as medical director."

Finally, on July 1, 1957, he left the firm, E. R. Squibb and Sons, and entered the private practice of psychiatry in Princeton, N.J.

Subsequently, he testified about the drug industry before the late Sen. Estes Kefauver's Senate anti-trust subcommittee. Last March he was scheduled to testify before Sen. Gaylord Nelson's monopoly subcommittee but, because of illness, had to submit a written statement.

Learn Ways to Deceive the FDA

On his resignation:

I bear no malice toward Squibb. Actually, I regret the need to implicate Squibb at all, but if my testimony is to carry any weight I must choose between mentioning them or remaining silent . . . I came to the belief that Squibb was, if anything, more ethical than most.

Why he resigned:

I believe that the best answer can be found in my unfinished essay on "The Good Life of a Drug Company Doctor." Toward the end I said:

"These are only some of the things he must learn to rationalize. He must learn the many ways to deceive the FDA (Food and Drug Administration) and, failing in this, how to seduce, manipulate, or threaten the physician assigned to the new drug application (for marketing) into approving it even if it is incomplete.

"He must learn that anything that helps to sell a drug is valid even if it is supported by the crudest testimonial, while anything that decreases sales must be suppressed, distorted and rejected because it is not absolutely conclusive proof.

"He must learn to word a warning statement so it will appear to be an inducement to use the drug rather than a warning of the dangers inherent in its use . . .

"He will find himself squeezed between businessmen who will sell anything to justify it on the basis that doctors ask for it, and doctors who demand products they have been taught to want through the advertising and promotion schemes contrived by businessmen.

"If he can absorb all this, and more, and still maintain any sensibilities he will learn the true meaning of loneliness and alienation."

Inability to Admit His Limits

On doctors:

Probably the greatest fault of the average practitioner is his inability to understand and to admit to the limits of his own competence.

Unfortunately, many physicians enter into the fantasy entertained by their patients and fulfill their own infantile wishes to be omnipotent and omniscient. The average physician is not about to step off the throne that makes him God.

A heavy prescriber is a physician who writes more than 100 prescriptions per week. This is the prime target of the detail man (salesman) and in this group we probably have the least discriminating physicians in the country.

I find it difficult to believe that anyone can write that

FISHBOATS ARRESTED; TOO CLOSE TO ALASKA

JUNEAU, Alaska (UPI) — A Coast Guard cutter seized two Japanese fishing boats today in Norton Sound on Alaska's west coast.

Coast Guard headquarters here said the cutter Storis seized the vessels because they had dropped their net too close to shore. The Storis was escorting the boats to Nome where the skippers will be arraigned.

The Storis was en route to search for an air force plane missing in the Bering Sea when it was diverted to investigate a report that several Japanese fishing vessels were operating in Norton Sound.

Saigon Seeking U.S. Support Against Coalition Government

By DAVID HOFFMAN

SAIGON (WP) — President Nguyen Van Thieu's government has asked the Nixon administration to publicly oppose any coalition government with the Communists in South Vietnam prior to the 1971 elections here, reliable South Vietnamese sources reported Friday.

According to these sources, Saigon has asked also that after Presidents Nixon and Thieu confer Sunday on Midway Island, the United States publicly advocate:

- That the 1971 presidential elections be held with the current South Vietnamese government intact and in power. The elections, however, still might be supervised by a quasi-independent International Control Commission, probably with Communist representation.
- That the elections be governed by—or at least be "within the framework of"—South Vietnam's 1967 constitution. Article four of that constitution outlaws "every activity designed to publicize or carry out communism."
- That as part of any peace settlement, Hanoi publish and agree to a timetable under which the North Vietnamese army would be withdrawn from the South. U.S. forces would withdraw within the time frames specified for the North Vietnamese army, and in comparable quantities.

NONE AGREED TO

South Vietnamese officials admitted frankly Friday that not one of their government's requests has been agreed to by the U.S. mission here. Nor were officials optimistic that agreements would be forthcoming. Nevertheless, the requests are considered significant because they underscore Saigon's doubts and worries on the eve of Thieu's first face-to-face meeting with President Nixon.

As described by South Vietnamese, the official American position on Midway runs as follows:

It would be preferable to conclude the conference without issuing a joint communique. All details concerning future South Vietnamese governments, the timing of presidential elections, the possible amendment of South Vietnam's 1967 constitution are negotiable and should not be

Russia Rebuffs Attempt To Heal Rift With China

Brezhnev devoted 10 pages of his 77-page speech, which lasted for two hours and 20 minutes, to a detailed assault on Peking policies and on Chinese leader Mao Tse-tung in particular.

Apparently answering Romanian President Nicolae Ceausescu's appeal Thursday for no anti-China polemics, he said it had been the intention of the Soviet delegation to refrain from attacking Peking at the summit.

"However, the events of recent times and above all the character of the decisions taken by the ninth congress of the Chinese Communist party (held earlier this year) force us to deal with this question," he said.

"A new situation has arisen which is exerting a serious negative influence on the entire international situation and on the conditions of the anti-imperialist struggle.

Communist sources said the Romanian delegation was conferring on its strategy following Brezhnev's speech.

Brezhnev charged that Peking is waging "a political struggle" against the Communist movement, trying to split and undermine it.

In a reference to recent Sino-Soviet border fighting, he said China has moved from criticism of the policy of peaceful coexistence "on to the organization of armed conflicts, to a policy undermining the cause of peace. . ."

Ottawa, Peking Tie Near

By COLIN McCULLOUGH
Special to The Times

PEKING — The Chinese are preparing to send an ambassador to Sweden in the next few days, it was learned here today, and it seems possible his arrival in Stockholm, almost coinciding with the arrival there of External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp from Ottawa, will result in negotiations over Canada's recognition of China reaching a speedy conclusion.

The Chinese side in the negotiations has been represented by Liu Chi-tsai, a minor diplomatic officer who has been acting as charge d'affaires since the Chinese foreign ministry ordered all heads of missions back to Peking for consultations during the cultural revolution more than a year ago.

LEADS TALKS

The Canadian side, which is higher ranking from the protocol point of view, includes the ambassador to Sweden, Arthur Andrew, counsellor Robert Edmunds and Blair Seaborn, head of the Far East division of Canada's external affairs department. Seaborn arrived in mid-day to lead the talks.

Sources in Ottawa today said it is "unlikely" Sharp would meet the Chinese envoy face to face but that Ambassador Andrew was handling negotiations.

The new Chinese ambassador to Sweden will presumably arrive with instructions from Premier Chou En-lai and, with Sharp in Stockholm at the same time, the talks should proceed quickly.

Diplomats in Peking assume that political questions between Canada and China were resolved easily, otherwise the talks would have broken off some time ago, and that the negotiations are now centring on trade and the necessary, but mundane, housekeeping problems involved in setting up embassies.

ONE-CHINA POLICY

The most important political point concerns the status of Formosa, but there would have been little point in Ottawa initiating talks in the first place unless it was willing to accept Peking's consistent and well-known one-China policy.

Since Formosa has the same policy—with the Nationalists claiming they are the legitimate government of China—Canadian recognition of Peking would force Chiang Kai-shek either to

Snoopy Tossed By Short?

SPACE CENTRE, Houston (UPI) — Apollo 10 moonship commander Thomas P. Stafford said today that officials still do not know what caused the wild gyrations in America's lunar lander when it was hovering 12 miles above the lunar surface last month.

"We don't know what happened," Stafford said. "We had a malfunction in the system. I hate to say a short, but we don't know what the trouble was . . . but there definitely was a malfunction."

Stafford's comments came in the pilots' first public report on the trail-blazing flight.

He said the lunar module, nicknamed "Snoopy," was flying "solid as a rock and then suddenly everything took off."

The gyration occurred while Stafford and Eugene A. Cernan were preparing to start their return rendezvous with John W. Young, who was flying the command ship in a higher lunar orbit. Stafford said he controlled the ship in eight seconds.

Despite the problem, the eight-day moon orbiting flight of Apollo 10 was a spectacular success and project officials said it cleared the way for Apollo 11 to land on the moon this summer.

Apollo 11 is scheduled for launch July 16, but an official go-no-go decision for that date will not be made until next Thursday.

PARADE RECALLS D-DAY LANDINGS

Friday night Victoria's Canadian Scottish, vets of D-Day and the 1939-45 war in Europe, marched again to commemorate the events of 25 years before.

Striding along Government with the modern regiment, snapping a fast eyes right at the reviewing stand, standing silent as the wreaths were laid, they looked again like the warriors they were.

break off relations with Canada or to keep his embassy in Ottawa and accept the principle of Two Chinas. The latter course would completely undercut Formosa's foreign policy.

The Stockholm discussions concerning trade may be more difficult that at first suspected. Canada has set limits on the importation of certain sensitive goods produced in China, including textiles, and the Chinese may want quotas revised upward. Probably they will also want to settle various problems such as labelling and inspection affecting the export of certain food products to Canada.

TRADE PACT

These matters would probably be part of the trade protocol that would include the sale of wheat. The present three-year wheat agreement expires in July but apparently no talks have been held for a new contract. Despite the purchases of wheat from France and Australia, there is no reason to think the Chinese will not be interested in signing an agreement with the wheat board, but it is probably the talks will await conclusion of the recognition negotiations.

Indications are that these are proceeding well. One sign is that the New China News Agency, whose officially approved articles are a barometer of Peking leadership thinking, has mentioned Canada only briefly and in reasonable terms.

The recent Air Canada strike received only passing reference and the Ottawa decision to withdraw some troops from NATO was praised.

Still another sign is the imminent departure of the Chinese ambassador to Sweden.

After waiting more than a year, the Chinese foreign ministry began sending ambassadors abroad last month. Albania, France and, today, North Vietnam have received ambassadors. Pakistan, Cambodia, Rumania, Tanzania, Guinea and Congo Brazzaville expect to have top Chinese diplomats soon.

Provided the Stockholm talks continue smoothly during the next two weeks, it is very likely Canada will have an official representative in Peking in time for the celebrations of the 20th anniversary of the founding of the People's Republic of China Oct. 1.

Whether he will be an ambassador depends on how quickly an embassy establishment can be put in order.

It is anticipated that Ottawa will want to have a staff about 12 to 16 people, including the trade section. There is no embassy available here that could house that many people. This means a new embassy would have to be built but Norway, Sweden and other countries are just now considering plans to have new embassies erected and it is estimated that will take three years.

Temporary but suitable accommodation can be found in the diplomatic area. Beside the Norwegian embassy is a modern yellow brick building which is vacant. It could serve as an ambassador's residence.

And about two blocks away is a new and empty seven-storey building which is reported to have been built for the diplomatic community. Two floors could be occupied by the Canadian government offices.

. . . COALITION

spelled out. The joint communique, if issued, should conform with Mr. Nixon's May 14 eight-point proposal for ending the Vietnamese war and break little fresh ground.

The Vietnamese, by contrast, have been pressing for details and insisting on a joint communique. The fear here is that if the five-hour discussion ended in official silence, the traditionally skeptical Vietnamese people would suspect a major schism between Saigon and Washington.

Accordingly, it is understood, U.S. Ambassador Ellsworth Bunker delivered a draft communique to President Thieu on June 5. As of late Friday Thieu was reportedly studying the document, and sources suggested that amendments were possible until the 11th hour.

COMMUNIQUE STUDIED

During his recent tour of South Korea and Taiwan, Thieu came down hard against a coalition government and special elections not provided for by South Vietnam's constitution. On May 28, Thieu said in Seoul:

"The people of South Vietnam have already exerted their right of self-determination and have chosen freedom. What remains is to preserve the right of self-determination against external pressures and the use of force."

Many experienced Thieu watchers believe that when, as he often does, the South Vietnamese leader refers to "external pressures," he refers not only to the Communists but also to war-weary Americans who believe Thieu should make further concessions.

In a joint communique issued from Taipei on June 3 with President Chiang Kai-shek, Thieu added:

"The existing popularly elected and legitimate government of the Republic of Vietnam must be respected . . . the absurd demands by the Communists for the organization of a coalition government must be resolutely rejected."

U.S. diplomats and South Vietnamese officials agree that Thieu's hard-line comments were aimed primarily at his audience of powerful domestic hawks. Thieu spoke tough, one Vietnamese analyst said, to avoid antagonizing his generals and to document his personal opinions in case Americans force him to make unpopular concessions.

DIVERSITY OF FORCES

Two declarations issued Friday and Thursday in Saigon illustrate the diversity of political forces acting upon Thieu on the eve of Midway.

On Thursday evening, a new group called the Committee for the Formation of the Force for National Progress surfaced in the capital. Its declaration of aims called for an immediate cease-fire, formation of a "reconciliatory government" whose members would be acceptable to Communists and a neutralist foreign policy. To put it mildly, Saigon was shocked.

At least 15 of the declaration's 29 signers were Buddhists associated with the militant An Quang Pagoda—a nesting place for South Vietnamese doves.

Friday afternoon, the South Vietnamese Senate unanimously approved another declaration urging the rejection of all external pressures for a coalition government and special unconstitutional elections. The senators apparently agreed, however, that Viet Cong who agree to renounce violence and abide by the constitution should be reintegrated into South Vietnamese political society.

WEATHER SYNOPSIS

An onshore flow of moist air spread cloud over the entire south coast overnight while northern and central sections of the province remained clear. A weak upper disturbance produced cloudiness and isolated thunderstorms in the southern interior. Northern districts will continue mainly sunny today and Sunday but the southern interior will have variable cloudiness and widely scattered afternoon and evening thundershowers. South coastal areas will be cloudy today except for afternoon sunny periods but will have decreasing cloudiness and slightly higher temperatures on Sunday.

The Weather and You

By CARL RIBLET Jr.

There is no escaping it, when the weather is excessively humid in the summertime, you feel lousy, or uncomfortable, at the least. If the temperature is high, you feel even worse.

The reason is that your body can't get rid of all the heat it builds up. You sweat, and the sweat doesn't evaporate from your skin. Your clothes get damp, and they stay damp. That's not so bad if you're wearing a cotton shirt and slacks, but synthetic fibres don't let you cool off as easily.

In dry weather, you feel lighter, peppier and you probably enjoy life more because the evaporation of your perspiration helps your body to lose excessive heat. A heavily humid day of 85 with a temperature of 85 will have you gasping, but a relatively dry day of low humidity with a temperature of 90 will have you feeling that it really isn't very hot after all.

. . . DOCTOR TO DECEIVE

number of prescriptions and still take time to discriminate. In this group we also have the physicians most likely to raise a howl of protest over the prospect of taking away one of their toys.

On drug testing:

I remember clearly an occasion when we were making preliminary studies of a drug that was being produced in very small quantities by a laboratory operation.

We sent a highly placed authority enough of the drug to treat two patients and were somewhat puzzled by the fact that he sent us favorable data on three patients. We blacklisted him.

To put the incident in its proper context, I must confess that blacklisting him consisted of taking his name out of the file of reliable investigators who could serve as adequate guides to important decisions.

His card was transferred to another file that indicated that he could be used as a proof-mill when and if we should have need of one.

We did not report it to FDA and the secret was kept "within the family." To the best of my knowledge, it still is.

There wre proof-mills that would deliver data at so much per head and in extreme cases we used them. There were drugs that were declared useless after clinical trial by experts that subsequently became marketable using the testimonials of less experienced physicians to prepare a new drug application (for marketing).

I have adequate reason to believe that other firms were less fastidious than we were and purchased favorable reports.

50% Chance Will Get Right Drug

On patients:

While it is shocking, it is probably true that the chances that an average patient will get the right drug, in the right amount, at the right time is in the order of 50 per cent . . . The unluckiest patient of all is the one who needs no drugs since, if he has a complaint, it is almost impossible to get out of the average practitioner's office without a prescription.

Selling to foreign countries:

The overseas divisions (of Squibb) held not only the notion that the safety and efficiancy of a drug varied with the patient's nationality, but also that the advertising and promotion of drugs depended on the nationality of the physician.

Physicians in any of the countries south of the border were considered less sophisticated than U.S. physicians and a "simpler" approach had to be used.

I recall one absurd proposal intended for the South American markets. It was proposed that we add to our injectible penicillin a substance that would produce the taste of garlic when it was absorbed.

This, it was said, would impress the patient and would lead him to anyone who believes in placebo medication and the mumbo-jumbo of the art of medicine. The proposal has no place in modern concepts of a science of therapeutics.

Enthusiasm Means More Sales

The detailman:

Enthusiasm about the product he is selling plays an important role in how many sales he makes. The members of my staff and I were only a part of the manpower used to whip up enthisiasm over a humdrum concoction.

In addition, innumerable prizes ranging from cutting boards to sets of manogrammed glasses are given to those detailmen who reach or exceed a pre-set quota of sales.

Since I was the confidant of many of the detail men I learned that many of them had convinced, or confused, a doctor to prescribe one of our products by telling the doctor that they were only one step away from winning a prize.

On research:

Many research programs were instituted not because they promised a worthwhile drug, but because they promised profit . . . in my opinion about 20 to 25 per cent of the total research and development budget was spent on worthwhile projects.

Puritan Ethics Behind Pot Ban

By STUART AUERBACH

WASHINGTON (W.P.) — One of the federal government's chief science advisers has blamed the nation's "puritan ethics," not scientific evidence, for the legal bans on the use of marijuana.

"The evidence that marijuana is addictive is not conclusive at all; quite the opposite as far as I can make out," Dr. Philip Handler told a House appropriations subcommittee in testimony released Friday.

Dr. Handler, an eminent biochemist from Duke University, testified as chairman of the board of the National Science Foundation. On July 1 he will become president of the National Academy of Science, chartered by Congress 116 years ago to advise the government on scientific matters.

OUR SOCIETY

"It remains a scientific problem to decide whether or not marijuana is or is not dangerous to our society," Dr. Handler said.

"Very obviously," he continued, "if alcohol were discovered tomorrow for the first time, we would consider it in exactly the same light and wonder whether or not our society should accept it."

Dr. Handler's comments were similar to these made in 1967 by Dr. James L. Goddard, then the commissioner of the Food and Drug Administration, that touched off a nationwide controversy.

In his testimony, Dr. Handler debunked the claims of police officials who say that marijuana use leads to the "hard," more dangerous narcotics.

"This is not necessarily because of the physiological consequences of marijuana," said Handler. "It may well be the personalities of those who sought the marijuana in the first place."

He called the scientific evidence "inadequate" to decide on the long-term physical or mental damage from marijuana use.

"But persons under the influence of marijuana are as mentally unreliable as those who drink to excess," he said.

Slime on Portage Inlet Called Harmless Algae

Green slime covering large parts of Portage Inlet is a kind of algae but it is not dangerous to health.

This comment was made Friday by Laurel Benham, senior health inspector for the Greater Victoria Metropolitan Board of Health.

He said everyone is hoping that if and when the sewerage programs in View Royal and Sanich have eliminated all known types of nutrient-producing discharges, this will decrease or eliminate the algae.

But he added that sewage was not the only cause of algae. There is herring weed, the inlet is shallow and all the natural conditions encourage algae growth.

Algea was a natural phenomena and occurs in lakes and streams where there is sewage seepage or no excessive run-off. Existing temperature conditions and climate were now right for it to grow.

He said Portage Inlet, being so shallow, can expect excessive weed and slime growth.

Meanwhile, the Portage Inlet and Gorge Waterway Association has drafted a five-year plan to clean up the area. It will be presented at the annual meeting at 8 p.m. Tuesday in Craigflower elementary school.

All of the proposals have been made in the past by various individuals and organizations, but nothing has happened.

The association executive, headed by Dr. John Rogers, will ask the general membership to consider asking for public and government support in drawing up a development plan under the control of one responsible body.

Feasibility studies are needed in five areas:

- Alteration of the width of the channel under Gorge Bridge to restore original water levels;
- Shore and bottom dredging;
- Removal of excess eel grass;
- Harvesting algae and a permanent solution to the algae problem;
- Installation of storm drains, catch basins and small dams where necessary to prevent flow of refuse and sediment into Gorge.

"I think everyone will agree that basically we are not going to get this cleaned up until we get sewers," he said.

The association's annual meeting will also include election of officers.

CRITICIZES SOVIETS

As Brezhnev was speaking the text was released of Friday night's speech to the summit by Australian Communist leader Laurie Aarons, who said the Soviet-led intervention in Czechoslovakia in August had harmed the entire Communist movement.

The Australian party leader told the delegates of 75 Communist groupings Friday night that his delegation could not sign the major conference document as it stood, and put forward a series of major amendments.

The document, on the unity of the world Communist movement and the struggle against imperialism, is divided into four sections and is intended to be a blueprint for future action against imperialism.

THE LEGEND OF THE ENGAGEMENT RING

In ancient Egypt, a Pharaoh fell in love with a beautiful young princess. Because of her youth, the princess's father refused consent to a marriage. The Pharaoh agreed to wait until the princess was of age but decided to show his devotion in the meantime.

He called in the royal jewelers and told them to search the land for the most precious stone in existence. He had it mounted in a ring of gold and, as he slipped it on her finger, said: "Until I claim you as my bride, wear this as a reminder of my devotion. The gem is priceless and so is my love."

So, down through the ages, the engagement ring has served as a pledge of true love and as a symbol that two people have chosen to spend their lives together.

Candles Recall Dark Day

WASHINGTON (AP) — When it was over they came through the darkness down the slopes of the great cemetery at Arlington to place candles—hundreds of them—on the granite ledge near the foot of Robert Francis Kennedy's grave.

They had come—more than 5,000 persons—to mark the first full year since an assassin's bullet took the New York senator's life.

Senator Edward M. Kennedy stood next to Ethel, his brother's widow. Hatless and wearing a simple all-white dress, she was in the centre of the long row of Kennedy kin as the memorial mass began Friday night.

Near the end of the line, standing a few paces from Vice-President Spiro T. Agnew, was Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis. A few yards behind her, across a hedge and a marble terrace, was the grave of another American leader, her first husband, President John F. Kennedy.

Pickets Say They're Not on Strike

VANCOUVER (CP) — Labor history of sorts was made Friday when Teamsters, who have shut down Kaiser Resources Ltd.'s giant coal strip mine project in southeastern British Columbia, agreed to carry signs saying "Teamsters NOT on strike against Kaiser."

The twist in labor - management relations came in B.C. Supreme Court chambers after Kaiser said Teamsters picketing a Kaiser sub - contractor, Fred Sowchuk Trucking Ltd., had prevented some 650 miners and construction workers from using private access roads to the mine site.

Kaiser lawyer Ben Trevino told Mr. Justice Ernes Hinkson Teamsters had picketed entrances to a Sowchuk truck parking area which straddled the road, and at times blocked the road.

He also claimed the picketing was illegal because Kaiser was not involved in the dispute between Sowchuk and the Teamsters. The case was adjourned late Friday after a 1½-hour meeting between lawyers when both sides reached the agreement.

Kaiser agreed to adjourn its injunction application indefinitely.

WANT INCREASE

The drivers for Sowchuk want a $1-an-hour increase over two years on their present hourly base rate of $2.75 and better working conditions.

At a Kaiser - related project, the roadbed for a railway south of Vancouver to the Roberts Bank deepsea port, through which will flow the coal in Kaiser's $600,000,000, 10 - year contract with Japanese steel mills, a strike by 10 operating engineers continued.

Members of Local 115 of the International Union of Operating Engineers Thursday struck Cattermole Trethewey Constractors Ltd., in what a Cattermole official said was a jurisdictional dispute with the International Woodworkers of America.

The official said the engineers were certified in April as representatives of Cattermole employees but this doesn't take effect until December, when the IWA agreement runs out.

Irate housewives, protesting high meat prices, Friday continued to picket selected retail outlets they claimed jacked up prices after a strike - lockout situation closed 100 supermarkets on Monday.

HANDS OUT BOOK

P. E. Gibson, general manager of Canada Packers Ltd., here, which was Friday's target for the Concerned Consumers, talked with their spokesman and later handed out copies of a government $1 booklet on how to buy and cook meat.

A picket, Mrs. Maria Whitford said she bought porterhouse steak in Edmonton three weeks ago for $1.29 a pound. "Here it's $1.79 to $1.95—surely it doesn't cost 70 cents to get it across the border."

Seven hundred meatcutters and 3,000 grocery clerks were still locked out at Vancouver-area supermarkets. Both want a $1-an-hour wage increase and a four-day, 36-hour work week, main stumbling block in the dispute.

Butchers current base rate is $3.80 an hour while clerks start at $2.35.

Federal inspectors, after Corporate and Consumer Affairs Minister Ron Basford warned Thursday in Ottawa that he will make public the name of any grocery price - gougers, made checks of retail outlets in Vancouver.'

One inspector who checked the same items at several stores Friday found them to be "good and reasonable."

In the telephone industry where a strike vote of 6,000 plant, clerical and traffic employees is scheduled later this month, officials of the B.C. Telephone Co. said Friday new security measures have been instituted because of a bomb threat two weeks ago and partly for protection in case of a strike.

Manholes opening into telephone circuit areas underground have been welded shut, officials of the B.C. Federation of Telephone Workers claimed, and persons entering company head offices must present photographic identity cards.

Bert Johns, a federation executive, had accused the company of using "scare tactics and starting rumors of wildcat strikes."

The federation membership has rejected a 17 per cent conciliation recommendation over two years. Operators' base rate is $1.75 an hour while linemen get $4.06.

WILSON—UNION DEADLOCK SEEN

LONDON (AP) — Prime Minister Wilson and British trade union leaders today appeared at a standstill in their dispute over the Labor government's proposed anti-strike legislation.

Wilson believes he has massive public support for his bid to curb wildcat strikes which he says are undermining the nation's drive for economic recovery. He had pledged to get the bill through Parliament before mid-July and feels he can't back down now.

Organized labor, however, voted 25 to 1 Friday to fight the bill which would fine strikers who violate agreed grievance procedure.

At the first emergency assembly of the Trades Union Congress in 49 years, the delegates rejected the Labor government's proposal and voted to set up their own machinery to bring a measure of discipline to Britain's chaotic labor relations.

Fraud Charge Laid

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP)—Daniel S. Hamilton, 50, of Sorrento, near Kamloops, Friday was committed for trial after a preliminary hearing on five charges of fraud. Charges were laid after a widow told police she had put $22,000 into a joint account with Mr. Hamilton after he had promised to marry her. She said more than $16,000 was taken from the account without her knowledge.

While Others Get Passports Canadians Sit Home and Fume

OTTAWA (Special) — While Britons and Americans enjoy sleek, efficient passport service, Canadians can only hope.

U.S. citizens can get theirs in three days after applying, Britons a week, but many Canadians have been waiting weeks and months for theirs.

But the harried Canadian passport office hopes to be back to normal in processing applications from itchy-footed Canadians within a month, says the external affairs department.

The busy office is aiming at a process period of three to five days for applications which would bring the system back to normal within a month.

HUGE BACKLOG

In the meantime Canadians are fuming as the office tries to deal with a backlog of 20,000 applications.

Last week the office dealt with 1,000 of the backlog and hopes to have it cleared away in about three weeks.

According to Richard Purser of The Times Washington Bureau, it takes only three to five days in the U.S. from the time a person applies until he receives his passport in the mail.

Even when the Canadian passport office gets back to normal the three to five-day processing period will not include mailing time.

A U.S. citizen must make a personal application at any one of 11 passport centres across the country. Or he can apply to the clerk of any of the 2,300 courts across the country.

When it is an ordinary application without complications, the passport is mailed out the next day.

SPECIAL PERMIT

In Britain, says Tim Traynor of The Times London Bureau, it normally takes only a week to get a passport.

And a special permit, substituting for a passport and used for short stays in certain countries, is issued on the day of application.

In both the U.S. and Britain, there is a substantial amount of decentralization of passport-issuing offices.

But the picture is gradually brightening in Canada. Last week the passport office processed more than 14,000 applications, nearly double the number for the corresponding week last year.

A spokesman for the external affairs department said the peak of applications has passed and the office received 400 fewer letters last week than the week before.

The office now has two shifts of employees working and is even considering a third which would make it an around-the-clock operation.

'DARN GOOD'

The department spokesman pointed out the cause of the big delay was not the tougher regulations introduced last January.

The office was prepared to cope with them, but not a 30-per-cent increase in applications. It had only anticipated an increase of 15 per cent.

One Ottawa resident who waited a month for her passport, partly due to her own misunderstanding of the new application form, wasn't angry with the delay.

"It's darn good for the country," she said, referring to the ease with which James Earl Ray, convicted of the murder of Martin Luther King, acquired a Canadian passport.

The tougher passport restrictions were introduced to cut down on criminals and spies using Canadian passports which had become an international joke.

MAYORS CRITICIZED FOR FORCED LABOR IDEA

The president of the Victoria Labor Council said Friday he is amazed that Canadian mayors want municipalities to be allowed to force welfare recipients to work for their cheques.

"The mayors should be leading the way to take people off welfare by upgrading their skills, not by forcing them to work for their welfare," said Jack Grove.

He was commenting on a resolution passed Thursday by the Canadian Federation of Mayors and Municipalities convention in Ottawa. An Edmonton alderman who supported the move said "beggars cannot be choosy".

Groves said a person who is not capable of taking his place in the economy should be given the opportunity to be trained for work, not forced to work.

There were many reasons for any person being on welfare, but forcing them to work for their welfare money "is not relieving it one bit."

What about those who refuse to be trained for work?

Groves said they needed psychiatric treatment because they were sick. A person wasn't born that way, although they might be raised that way. It is natural for people to look after their own well-being.

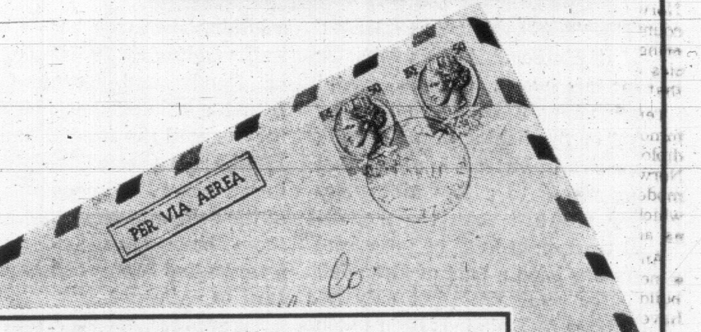
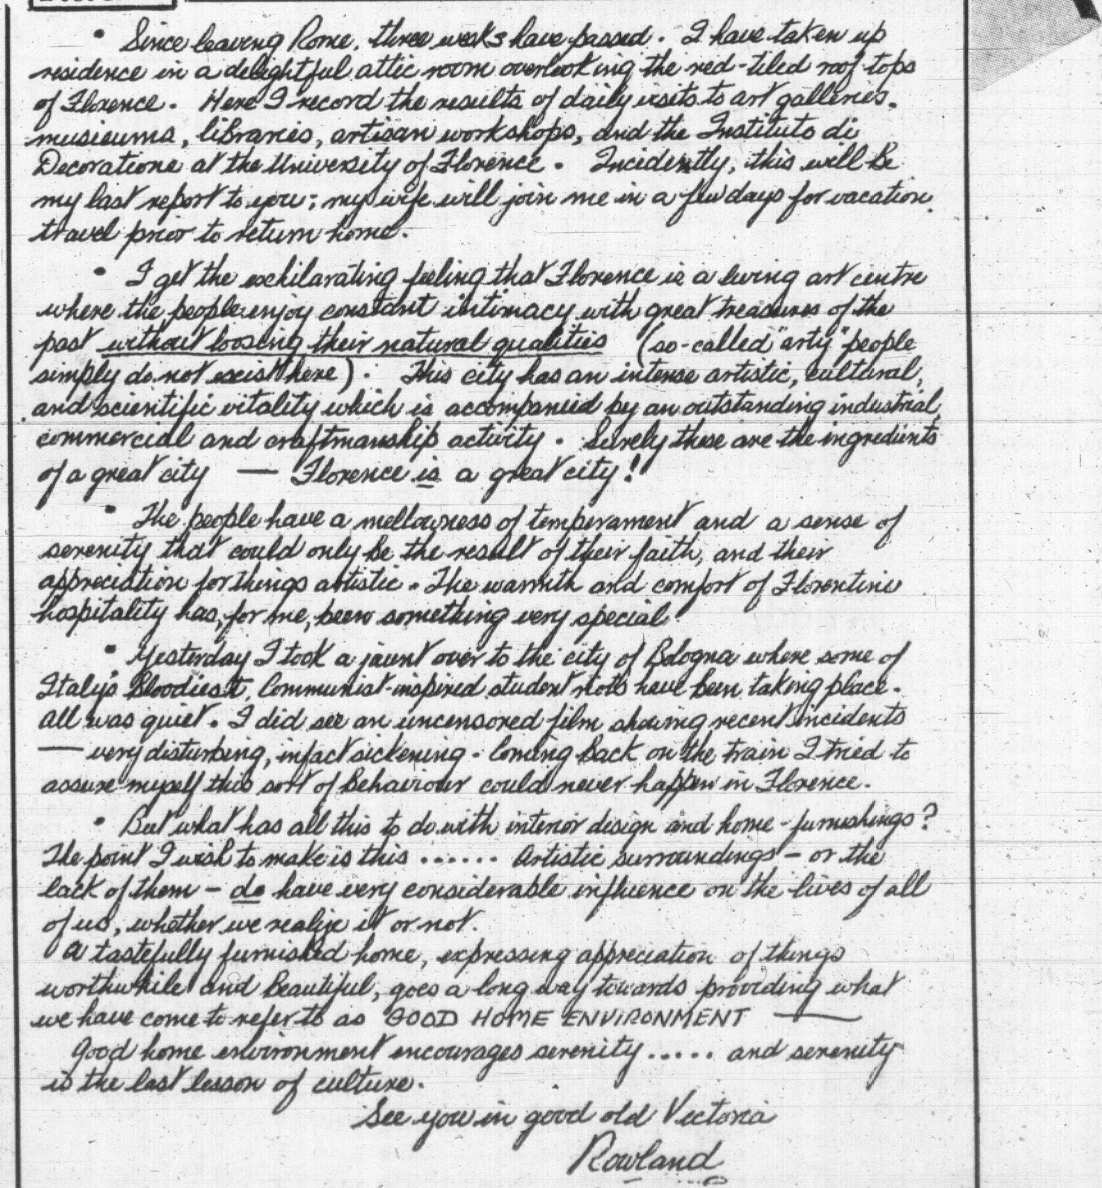
MAIL FROM EUROPE

★ This is the fourth in a series of observations just received from ROWLAND deM. BROWN, I.D.I., Interior Designer with Standard Furniture.

★ Rowland has been studying in the artistic centres of Europe



Florence



• Since leaving Rome, three weeks have passed. I have taken up residence in a delightful attic room overlooking the red-tiled roof tops of Florence. Here I record the results of daily visits to art galleries, musiaums, libraries, artisan workshops, and the Instituto di Decoratione at the University of Florence. Incidently, this will be my last report to you; my wife will join me in a few days for vacation travel prior to return home.

• I get the exhilarating feeling that Florence is a living art centre where the people enjoy constant intimacy with great treasures of the past without loosing their natural qualities (so-called "arty" people simply do not exist here). This city has an intense artistic, cultural, and scientific vitality which is accompanied by an outstanding industrial, commercial and craftmanship activity. Surely these are the ingredients of a great city — Florence is a great city!!

• The people have a mellowness of temperament and a sense of serenity that could only be the result of their faith, and their appreciation for things artistic. The warmth and comfort of Florentine hospitality has, for me, been something very special.

• Yesterday I took a jaunt over to the city of Bologna where some of Italy's bloodiest, Communist-inspired student riots have been taking place. All was quiet. I did see an uncensored film showing recent incidents — very disturbing, in fact sickening. Coming back on the train I tried to assure myself this sort of behaviour could never happen in Florence.

• But what has all this to do with interior design and home-furnishings? The point I wish to make is this ...... Artistic surroundings — or the lack of them — do have very considerable influence on the lives of all of us, whether we realize it or not.

A tastefully furnished home, expressing appreciation of things worthwhile and beautiful, goes a long way towards providing what we have come to refer to as GOOD HOME ENVIRONMENT

Good home environment encourages serenity ..... and serenity is the last lesson of culture.

Selecting the Targets

IT IS GRATIFYING THAT VICtoria's Mayor Hugh Stephen, apparently alone among the delegates to the mayoral convention in Ottawa this week, rose above their parochialism and recognized the value of Finance Minister Benson's new anti-inflationary curb on commercial building construction. Mr. Stephen is convinced that "the battle against inflation is our most important national objective." And one part of that battle is to relieve the pressure of a too heavy demand for labor and materials which drives costs upwards.

The new aspect of Mr. Benson's budget recommendations is that necessary curbs should be exerted only in the localities where the inflationary pressures have reached a dangerous level, and not in the many other places in the country where purchase demands are not so heavy. On the regional basis, then, only 22 cities of over 50,000 population in Ontario, Alberta and British Columbia will be affected by the move to hold up depreciation allowances—and hence tax reductions—for two years.

The dire prediction of Calgary's Mayor Leslie that his city would become a depressed area because of the new regulation is, of course, an untenable exaggeration. It was paralleled by criticism from other mayors whose communities will be affected, but was in sharp contrast to Mr. Stephen's attitude that it is fruitless to "holler against inflation as citizens of Canada," but then reject anti-inflationary measures when they are applied with local effect. Mayor Dennison of Toronto appears to have missed the whole implication of the new regional type of attack on inflation when he says "it should apply to all cities." That could mean that in cities where it was necessary to stimulate commercial building the restraint on construction would be applied even though it was doing harm.

Much more statesmanlike was Premier Smallwood's recognition of the "great new principle" whereby localized control of inflation could be exerted, and the approving comment of some national authorities, such as Mr. Douglas Sherbaniuk, director of the Canadian Tax Foundation, on this first federal use of the regional fiscal principle.

Some critics opposed the move on the grounds that cutting back on building in one city would not help building in another which needed it. But this is to misconstrue the intent of the legislation, which is not primarily to transfer stimulation from one city to another but to try to cool the heated economies of the over-active communities.

Mr. Benson, in this aspect of his budget, had the complicated task of trying to retard the very active construction industry sufficiently to reduce its inflationary tendencies, but at the same time to avoid discouraging construction of badly needed housing, hospitals and schools. The compromise he has produced, while of course not by any means a complete answer to the problem, bears promise. In particular, his method establishes a precedent in regionalized application of federal anti-inflationary policies, and we may expect to see more of such moves in the future.

Drawing the Line at Sea

WITH THE ANNOUNCEMENT of External Affairs Minister Sharp this week, Canada moved further along the way to broader control of the fishing grounds lying off our coasts. Extension of national fishing rights to a line nine miles farther seaward than the conventional three-mile limit of territorial waters has been a part of Canadian policy for some time, but only recently have formal steps been taken to delineate the limits. One of the problems has lain in the treatment of large bays and indentations along the coast, for in such cases the usual rule of drawing a baseline from headland-to-headland would enclose more than the specified 12 seaward miles.

These lines are now being announced after long delay. This week's statement in Ottawa clarified the 12-mile fishing limit along the west coast of Vancouver Island and of the Queen Charlotte Islands, as well as off Nova Scotia. It was a similar boundary announced earlier which the Japanese fishing vessel Koyo-maru recently infringed.

But a greater problem awaits solution. The large bodies of water in the Gulf of St. Lawrence, the Bay of Fundy and Queen Charlotte Sound are important fisheries and they exceed the normal limit of the 12-mile rule. Queen Charlotte Sound, in particular, is important because of the salmon runs in that area, and there have been strong protests from United States fishermen in regard to enclosure.

It appears, however, that Canada will shortly push ahead with legislation preliminary to claiming these three fishing areas. As with most such moves, by any country, the proof of the regulation lies in the success with which it can be enforced. But the importance of fisheries conservation, and Canada's large investment in the protection of the migratory fish which use our rivers, require that firm regulations be imposed. There will be exceptions under the rule of "historic right" which makes concessions to traditional users of the fisheries, but it is well that Canada has at last moved to stabilize and clarify the whole matter of sovereignty in regard to coastal fishing.

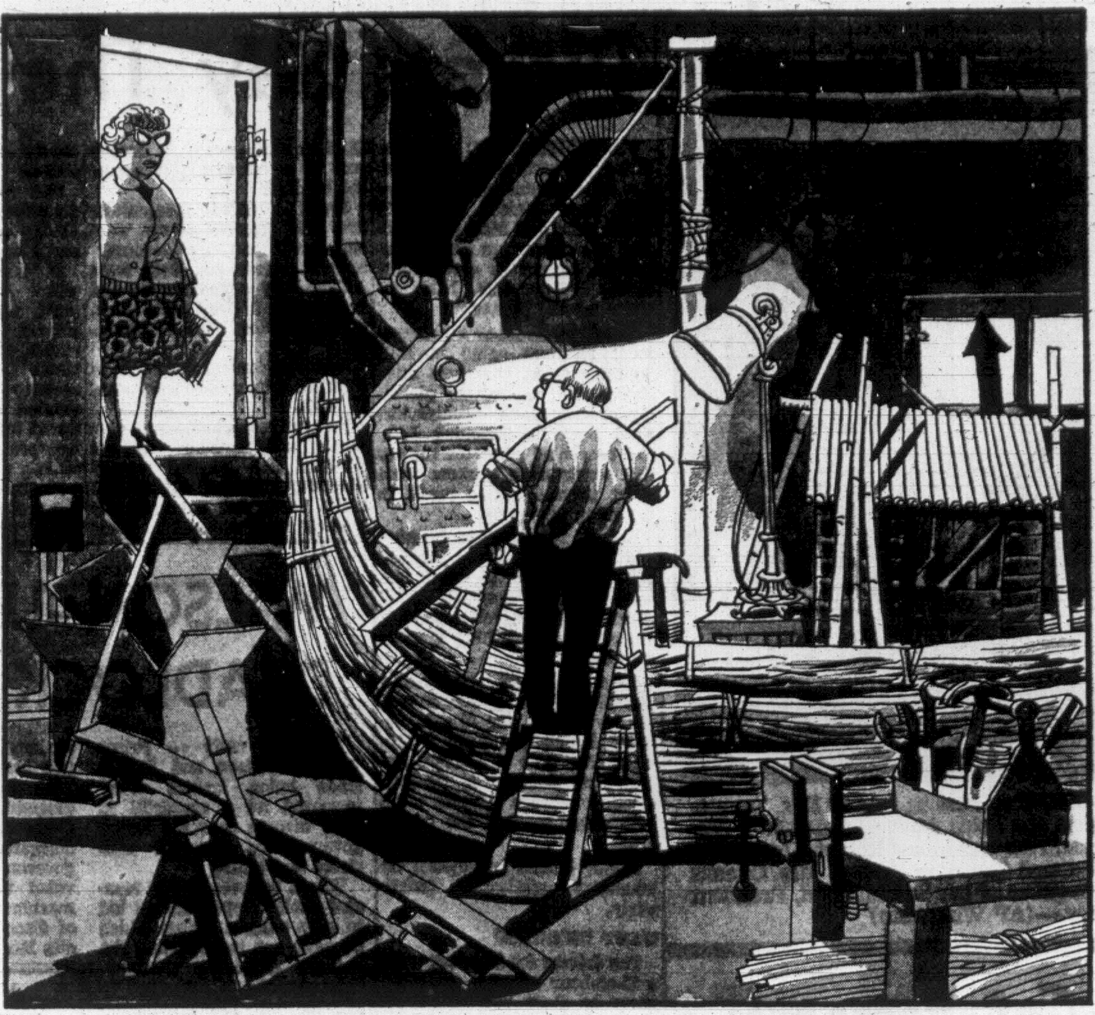
Hidden Costs

THE SIZE OF GROCERY BILLS is a common concern today. Food purchases are our most frequent reminder of what inflation means to family budgets. The cost-conscious shopper is aware of most increases when they occur, but some are almost impossible to detect. These arise from disguised reductions in quantity, or "packaging to price."

The difficulty in assessing these changes is compounded by the fact that odd-weight packages and unusual units of measurement are common. Also, the reduction in content is often made without changing the package size, or by redesigning the container to give it the appearance of being at least the same size as the old container.

Mr. A. Q. Mowbray, author of a 1967 book entitled "The Thumb on the Scale," says packaging to price "is cheating the consumer at the rate of untold millions of dollars each year". He adds that it is "all but impossible for the housewife, unless she is a lightning calculator, to compare prices."

Obviously the buyer is entitled to some protection against such practices, and that is why consumer legislation has come into being in recent years in both the United States and Canada. It may be unfortunate that government must enter this field, that the market can not be left to police itself, but only governments have the power to deal adequately with the situation. Voluntary consumer protection groups provide only an ancillary service. Already in the U.S. there are complaints that the Fair Packaging and Labeling Act passed in 1967 does not go far enough and that enforcement is lacking. Mr. Basford and his new department of consumer affairs in Ottawa clearly have their work cut out for them.



"No, I'm not particularly interested in listening to Mr. Benson's budget speech . . ."

Bug Control

Ottawa Citizen

The dangers to democracy, stemming from the use of electronic eavesdropping, have been vividly described to a Commons committee by Prof. Edward Ryan of the University of Western Ontario. His warning should be heeded.

In a country such as Canada with deep democratic roots, there is a tendency to pooh-pooh the idea of such threats. But such overconfidence should not blind us to the need for vigilance.

The problem, in essence, is that there have been rapid and startling technological break-throughs which make the art of spying extremely simple and yet far-reaching.

As Mr. Ryan pointed out, telephones can be tapped, offices bugged, files photographed, physical movements recorded, and other information collected without the victim being protected by the law.

Such wire tapping is being done by the police, without judicial authorization or supervision, throughout Canada. Admittedly, this is aimed at organized crime. But the danger to society is real.

Authorities have often urged that crime syndicates have access to the latest technology and that it is necessary that law enforcement authorities be similarly armed.

But the point is not that police be denied use of electronic surveillance or recording devices. It is that the use be controlled and sanctioned by the judicial authorities to make sure that these are not used to invade the privacy of unsuspecting and defenceless people.

Suitable federal legislation is needed to ensure that use of such devices is made only on a judge's warrant and that the privacy of law-abiding citizens is not sacrificed at the altar of fighting crime.

WHILE WAITING FOR THE MAIL

By BRUCE HUTCHISON

Mrs. Noggins and the Minister of Non-Communication

MY FRIEND, Mrs. Noggins, has permitted me to announce a blessed event in her family.

Hutchison

"My youngest, Judy, 'ad 'er first, a boy, last September in Toronto," Mrs. Noggins said. "But I didn't 'ear about it till yesterday, on account of a slight delay in the post office. Since Eric Kierans improved it with modern business methods and computers and all you can get a baby quicker than a letter, and with less trouble, too.

"Well, I sent my grandson a nice silver spoon right away and with luck it should reach 'im in time fer Christmas when Judy's twins are due to arrive. But make no mistake, Kierans knows exactly wot 'e's doin' all right.

Kierans Fixed That One

"The gover'mint was all fer communicatin' with the people but it got nothing in the mail but bitter complaints from everybody and Kierans fixed that quick. While 'e's in charge, the evil of communication won't raise its ugly 'ead. If there's to be any communicatin', says Kierans, the gover'mint alone will do it. You can't trust such a delicate matter to the ignorant public.

"That suited Trudeau fine after 'e burned 'is fingers by communicatin' the NATO policy so, in gratitude, 'e didn't fire Kierans after all for opposin' it. Wot's all the squabblin' about, says Trudeau. Kierans agrees with the cabinet on everything but essentials. And besides, as minister of non-communication 'e's doin' a swell job.

"As fer NATO, says Trudeau, Canada is a loyal member that will never desert its allies, except to withdraw its troops. By leavin' the responsibility of defendin' ourselves entirely to the Americans we'll assert our independence so the whole world will see it plain. Our good neighbors will understand, when we kick 'em in the teeth, that we're only disguisin' our friendship and demonstratin' our sacred sovereignty till the shootin' starts and we need their 'elp. Then, you may be sure, they'll come a-runnin', like Trudeau says.

It Makes You Proud

"In the meantime, the more dependent we are on them the more independent we'll be. That's logic. Nothing less can be expected from a patriotic nation. It makes you proud of bein' a Canadian at this moment of world crisis.

"Oh, sure, we may lose all our friends in the States and Britain and Europe but that doesn't matter when we've got our new friend, good old Mao in Peking. There's a man you can recognize and trust, as all 'is next-door neighbors agree. Vive Tibet libre!

Nothing Personal

"Anyways, these things don't interest our Parliament. It's 'aving too much innocent fun watchin' Diefenbaker destroy Stanfield. There's nothing personal in the revolt against my revered leader, says Dief. It's only that in honor I can't let 'im succeed where I failed. The final task of my long public life is to wreck the Conservative party fer its own good and you may be certain that I won't shirk my painful juty.

"The knives quiverin' in Stanfield's back are only symbolic, you know, and don't 'urt much. Of course the gover'mint is warmly sympathetic to 'im because the latest suicide of the opposition 'elps to distract the voters from the small problem of prices. Bread can never compete with circuses for public attention and Dief is the greatest ring-master of all time.

"And wot do prices matter when we've got boundless prosperity, thanks entirely to a wise government and a reliable printin' press in the Bank of Canada? The country is so rich that no one but a millionaire can afford to buy beef any more and the rest of us is rapidly approachin' the enlightened civilization of Italy on a diet of macaroni.

Minor Thing Like Food

"We've got the most efficient agriculture and the finest meat in the world but we can't expect to eat our best products because they're reserved fer our foreign customers. It's more important to 'ave three cars in every garage and colored television in every room than a roast in the oven. That's wot the gover'mint calls its priorities, you know, and nacherally a minor thing like food ranks very low on the list in any Just Society. The nation would rather go 'ungry than rejuce its livin' standard.

"Now that a sensible set of priorities is firmly arranged we're goin' to put a communication satellite in orbit before we can move a letter from Toronto to Vancouver. Yes, sir, Kierans may not be in the post office but 'e's in outer space and 'avin the time of 'is life. Communication, it's wonderful.

"All the same, I'd kind of like to 'ear about my daughter's twins before they're old enough to go to college on a free scholarshiop and join the riots against the stingy Establishment."

Letter to the Editor

Prices Down

In Ottawa Supermarkets in two months' time brought their prices down as a result of the following:

A few women organized a high-price protest meeting. One thousand turned up. It was agreed to boycott buying at supermarkets for one month. Supermarkets were practically empty all over Ottawa and district. Tags began appearing in them with "Special today" etc. The boycott continued the second month.

Prices went down with great rapidity and have, in most cases, remained.—(Miss) D. A. Moore.

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y.

By WILLIAM R. FRYE

Vietnam War Policies: The Paths Diverge at Midway

PRESIDENTS Nixon and Thieu meet on Midway Island tomorrow to begin a process of American disengagement from the Vietnam war. From Sunday on, the United States and South Vietnam will set out on divergent paths. The differences between Washington and Saigon are deep and apparently unbridgeable. They reach to the heart of the matter: the objectives for which the war is being fought and the terms on which peace could be made.

Frye

The United States wants a compromise peace settlement, leaving the Communists — and all others — free to seek whatever influence they can win in the political marketplace. South Vietnam wants military victory, with the Communists forcibly barred from political power.

Thieu has crushed the public expression of pacifist sentiment in South Vietnam, jailing its spokesmen and making the advocacy of "soft" compromise a crime. He thus has the appearance, and perhaps some of the substance, of public support for continued war.

Settle for Appearances

Nixon does not. Much American opinion is unwilling to "take" any longer the casualties the war involves — as witness the reaction to the costly capture, and subsequent abandonment, of "Hamburger Hill."

A majority of Americans still hope to win for the South Vietnamese a free opportunity to manage their own affairs. (Some Americans would settle for a persuasive appearance of self-determination.) They are not prepared to fight for more.

The Communists have offered at Paris a plan for peace that hints at willingness to give that much. The Reds seem willing to shift their drive for domination of South Vietnam to the political arena.

They propose, as always, to rig the rules to assure a Communist victory. But they imply that this feature of their plan may be negotiable and that their real goal, at this stage, is to keep Saigon from rigging the rules to guarantee their defeat.

Thieu insists on barring them entirely. His stand on coalition, on amendments to the constitution, and on new postwar elections shows that he is not prepared to engage in a political free-for-all whose outcome would be in doubt.

His position recalls the remark attributed to Stalin: "The trouble with free elections is that you don't know how they are going to come out."

To prevent the Reds from imposing their will by force of arms is one thing. To prevent them from seeking power by peaceful means is quite another.

The latter position is indefensible before world opinion, and is not supported by most Americans.

It is, of course, unnegotiable at Paris. It amounts to a refusal to make peace on terms that are, or are likely to be, available.

Nixon's objective at Midway must be to show Thieu that if he insists upon fighting for something more than free self-determination, he must be willing and able to do so alone.

This means that Nixon must seek Thieu's acquiescence either in peace on American terms or in a time-table for a substantial American troop withdrawal.

The best result would be a reversal of form by Thieu and an acceptance of compromise peace. This would transform the prospects at Paris and make a settlement this year a very real possibility.

Nothing Thieu has said to date, however, suggests any such reversal. On the contrary, the very tactics which the United States has pressed upon him in the political arena at home — the formation of a broader base of support — have, paradoxically, hardened his stand, because the political allies he has recruited have come very largely from the hawkish Right.

Seem Like Agreement

The prospect, therefore, is for American withdrawal. In order to ease the transition to self-reliance and help preserve the anti-Communist bargaining position at Paris, the disengagement can be undertaken in phases. It can also be made to appear as an agreed Washington-Saigon policy.

But whatever the appearance, it will in fact be a crossroads at which Washington and Saigon take different roads. It will mean that the Paris talks will be reduced to an effort to elicit voluntary reciprocal withdrawals from the North Vietnamese. A political settlement would be postponed to the distant future.

This seems to be what Thieu wants: to rule out a compromise peace and to fight on for military victory — alone if necessary.

If so, it is either a very brave or a very foolish stand. Thieu may well be running a greater risk of defeat than he would by taking his chances with a compromise political settlement. But it is his choice; and at Midway, the die is due to be cast.

Nature Rambles

By FREEMAN KING

NOW that the early summer is upon us, go out to Francis Park. You'll see a change in the appearance of the forest and rocky outcrops.

The delicate flush of the Douglas and grand firs is worth admiring, though you will not find any cones this year for it is apparent that nature has given the conifers a rest from seed-producing. This possibly means more needles and a heavier growth of wood.

The bracken ferns now make a deep shade so that the early spring blooms are almost forgotten, yet they are quietly preparing their seeds for the future survival of the species.

The little spit-bugs are now out in abundance and their small, frothy homes can be seen everywhere. Examine one and see how it is made; it is a home, and protection against its predators.

The broom with its golden blossoms is perhaps at its best now and the bees are busy collecting nectar from them.

On the rocks the stonecrop with its golden star-shaped flower is in bloom and makes a very pleasing sight, while in the shade the coral roots with their scaley stems and dainty flowers make this little orchid well worth the effort to get a picture.

The perfume of the wild roses is unmistakable as you wander along the open trails. Releasing perhaps the most delicate of all the perfumes of the woods, the twinflowers are now breaking into bloom.

Down along the marsh trail the osier dogwoods are in full bloom, as well as the Pacific crabapples.

Stop and look at the spikes of the skunk cabbage, see how the seeds in their orderly rows are swelling. They look something like a bottle brush, while the leaves are growing, in some places, to five feet in length.

When in this area look closely along the ground and you will find the tiny St. John Wort with its very fine delicate yellow bloom. Close by will be the Brooklime with its tiny blue-white flower.

Most of the birds have now brought their young out and it is fascinating to see some of them darting under the oaks catching the loopers that hang on their threads of silk.

Overhead the ravens are teaching their young to fly. There are many squawks and calls of distress from the young as they try their first flight from limb to limb.

Behind Closed Doors, A Struggle for Power

By ANTHONY WESTELL

Westell

OTTAWA — The summit conference on the constitution goes behind closed doors next week to open negotiations on the gut issues dividing Ottawa and the provinces— money and power.

The prime minister and the provincial premiers have been happy to hold previous sessions in the glare of publicity to make like statesmen discussing such politically peripheral issues as a bill of rights and to strike valiant poses as defenders of the taxpayers.

But now they have to come to the crunch on the real division of powers, and all their political instincts persuade them to retreat into the backroom where they can talk frankly and explore bargaining positions without fear that their words will be used against them by opponents.

The core of the Canadian constitution—the British North America Act—are the sections authorizing the raising of revenues by the federal and provincial governments and dividing responsibilities between the two levels.

The federal government is empowered to impose any form of taxation and has broad and loosely defined areas of responsibility in which to spend the money. The provinces are restricted in the methods of taxation they may use and confined in their responsibilities.

Unequal Division

When Quebec, Ontario and other provinces demand a new constitution, or a re-interpretation of the existing one, they are seeking essentially to change this unequal division of power.

The federal government has specific areas of jurisdiction—national defence, for example—which are not challenged. The problem arises in the ill-defined areas which border or overlap on provincial jurisdictions.

Most English-Canadian constitutional authorities have interpreted the BNA Act to mean that Ottawa can raise revenues as it pleases and spend them in any way which does not have the effect of regulating areas of responsibility specifically reserved to the provinces.

This is known as the federal spending power, and it gives Ottawa enormous influence in setting national priorities.

Health services, for example, are primarily a provincial jurisdiction. But when Ottawa decided that Canada should have a hospital insurance program, it used its broad tax powers to raise money which it then offered to pay the provinces if they would set up programs meeting Ottawa's standards.

This technique of the shared-cost program was acceptable for many years to the English-speaking provinces, which expected national leadership from Ottawa.

It was never really acceptable to Quebec. Most French-Canadian experts have interpreted the constitution to mean that the federal government may not spend money in any way which invades or encroaches upon provincial jurisdiction.

Provincial Concern

This view outlaws most shared-cost programs, and even throws doubt on Ottawa's right to pay family allowances because welfare is primarily a provincial concern.

Quebec governments have not always been able to insist on this view and have very often had to accept federal money which they regarded as tainted.

When Lester Pearson was prime minister, he tried to solve the conflict between English-Canadian and French-Canadian views by the so-called opting out formula. Under this arrangement, Quebec took tax room to raise its own revenues while English-speaking provinces accepted grants from Ottawa.

But this was only a temporary arrangement. It placed Quebec in a special status which Prime Minister Trudeau regards as undesirable and untenable.

And the fact of the matter is that Ontario, under Premier Robarts, has come to share the French-Canadian view of the constitution and the limits which it should put on the federal spending power.

He no longer accepts national leadership from Ottawa and insists—at least as vigorously as Quebec's Jean-Jacques Bertrand—that the federal government shall no longer use its taxing and spending powers to encroach on provincial responsibilities.

Terrible Invasion

Robarts made his position plain in the controversy over medicare. This was only the last in a long series of federal initiatives by way of shared-cost programs, most of which had been accepted and even welcomed by Ontario. But Robarts has made the medicare initiative sound like some terrible new invasion of provincial rights.

The closed conference on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday (the 13th) will be discussing the federal spending power, and ways to control it.

Ontario, Quebec and some other provinces want to narrow the federal government's power to levy taxes, to leave more elbow room for themselves. They want also to confine the federal spending power to protect their own jurisdictions.

Ottawa has already abandoned the shared-cost formula for enforcing national priorities, and in fact wants to get out of some programs in which it is already a partner with the provinces.

It has also promised to be more careful in future in respecting provincial jurisdictions (while asking in return that the provinces stay out of its fields, such as foreign affairs).

Ottawa on the other hand must retain enough taxing and spending power and freedom of action to fulfill its responsibility for guiding the economy.

It also points out that all the provinces, including Quebec, support the system of equalization payments, under which the federal government collects revenues in the wealthy provinces to pay them to the poorer provinces to guarantee a minimum standard of public services — a use of the federal spending power to which objection is taken in other contexts.

Accepted By All

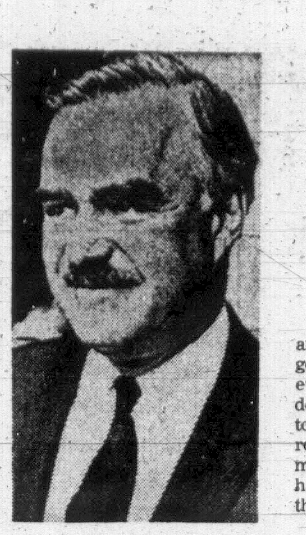
Ottawa can make the argument also that removal of regional economic disparities is a national priority accepted by all the premiers. But if the federal government is to raise and channel development funds into the poorer regions, it obviously must have broad taxing and spending powers which encroach on provincial concerns.

Trudeau is ready to place proposals for limiting the federal spending power before the provinces.

But it is not clear whether he is seriously proposing changes in the constitution or simply — in this and other initiatives—showing the provinces the enormous difficulties in the process.

After all, it was the provinces, led by Robarts in 1967, which insisted that constitutional change was necessary and urgent. Trudeau was quite prepared to carry on with the BNA Act.

There is reason to believe that if the provinces now find it impossible to agree on what sort of constitution they want, if they are divided next week on how to share up the power which they want to take away from Ottawa, if they begin to lose interest in the whole process of reform, the prime minister will shed no bitter tears.



ROBARTS

'The Problems of Our Cities Will Be Dominant in Politics'

(From a speech delivered earlier this week by Prime Minister Trudeau, in Ottawa, to the Canadian Federation of Mayors and Municipalities.)

We know that the programs and activities of the federal government are exerting an ever growing influence on the development of our cities and towns; and that many of the responsibilities assigned to municipalities are coming to have serious implications for the country as a whole.

Anyone whose knowledge of Canada was based on the text of the British North America Act would never suspect this overlap in the interests of the federal and municipal governments. Indeed he would hardly be aware of the existence of municipalities.

In 1867 Canada was a rural society based on an agricultural economy. The largest city boasted a population of barely 100,000 and, at that, it was twice as large as its two nearest rivals.

The Fathers of Confederation drafted a Constitution which reflected the conditions of their time. We cannot blame them for not foreseeing the rapid growth in the number and size of our cities, and in the complexity and cost of running them.

Two-Thirds Listed As Urban Residents

A century later two thirds of our population are classified as urban residents and our two biggest cities have larger budgets and more residents than most of our Provinces.

By 1980, the Economic Council tells us, out of a total population of about 25 million, eight out of ten will be urban residents. Of these, 15 million will live in 30 major cities, each of which will be larger than one or more of our present provinces.

Twenty years later over half our population will probably live in five metropolitan areas. It is easy to foresee that the problems of our cities will play a more and more dominant part in our politics, as they are doing in the United States.

In the perspective of history this is not a new phenomenon. In classical times wealth and power were concentrated in a few cities. This enabled city dwellers to develop art and science, and to create such concepts as democracy and representative government.

Cities Mainspring Of Civilizations

The great accomplishments of Greece, Rome and the Renaissance were made possible by the amenities of city life. We should remember that although the city sometimes appears to be a monster, it has been the mainspring of our civilization.

The increasing concentration of population and wealth in our cities and towns is at the same time their pride and their problem.

It has enabled them to become centres of economic growth and to offer their residents unmatched opportunities for education and culture; but it has also confronted public authorities with a whole new dimension of social problems and responsibilities.

As members of an urban, industrial society we make more demands on our governments than would a rural community. If we are to live in an environment which is healthy and aesthetically pleasing, in which the air and water are free from pollution, we require extensive public planning and regulation.

We depend on governments to provide all kinds of recreation facilities—parks, sports grounds, libraries, theatres and galleries. We need costly public utilities and transportation systems.

We want housing that is well designed and can be constructed and maintained at a reasonable cost. An adequate up-to-date educational system has become more important and more expensive.

Single Level Can't Meet All Demands

No single level of government can be expected to satisfy all these demands. There have always been, and there will always be, many aspects of urban development which are best left to local initiative, to local preference and to exclusive local control.

Others may best be handled on a regional basis by the provinces. Still others are necessarily a matter of concern to the Parliament of Canada.

This interpenetration of responsibilities is not always easy for voters to understand, or for the three levels of government to administer.

But you cannot solve a problem by simply ignoring the existence and interests of one level of government; nor can you solve it by passing the buck, upward or downward.

It is precisely because we find ourselves in 1969 with a constitution which reflects in many sections the conditions of 1867, that the federal and provincial governments have undertaken a comprehensive review.

So far we have not been discussing the few existing provisions which deal with municipalities, but at our meeting in June we will be considering certain aspects of the constitution, such as the federal spending power, which have important consequences for your governments. The future role of municipalities within our federal system may well become an important part of the review.

Trends Give Rise To Many Questions

The trends which I have been describing give rise to a whole series of related questions, each of which may require considerable study and discussion. Here are three:

- Consider, for instance, the growing "federal government presence" in our cities which results from federal control of airports, harbours, railways and a host of other departments and Crown Corporations. Can we devise a system which will ensure that the economic and social effects of this presence will further the objectives of urban development?
- When a locally enacted policy has an important impact on the national economy, is there an appropriate method to bring to bear the national interest, as expressed by the Parliament of Canada?
- Do the enormously increased responsibilities and financial requirements of municipalities call for any changes in the Constitution?

I am raising these questions because I believe they demand the attention of everyone who is concerned about government in Canada, whether at the federal, provincial or municipal level. I do not think that any individual or organization has worked out satisfactory answers to them.

Society Greedy For Short-Run Payoffs on Science

By JOSHUA LEDERBERG

The deterioration of the "environment" has not been one of my important scientific preoccupations until very recently.

When journalistic criticisms like Rachel Carson's "Silent Spring" first appeared, I tended to shrug them off as hysterical exaggerations, perhaps even motivated in part by the notoriety they generated.

I had, however, not often looked very deeply into the scientific foundations of these damning recriminations. The more deeply I pursue on my own inquiries, however, the more alarmed I become. There appears to be an almost endless list of foolish gambles with an intrusive exploitation of our common environment. They are not usually malevolent by intention, but this is no balm to our concerns.

They do mainly share a common fallacy—the mistaken view that the atmosphere and the rivers and oceans are infinite reservoirs that human activities cannot disturb. We have become too powerful now to take refuge in naive ignorance about what really does happen after we throw the switches.

The immediate irritant that provokes these remarks comes from a casual conversation with a staff colleague who had recently operated a filling station. He mentioned that one of the oil companies had proudly introduced a new gasoline additive that contained the metal nickel.

This was corroborated by an abstract in the Transaction of the Society of Automotive Engineers that cited many wonderful properties of "nickel isodecylorthophosphate"; "A unique and effective multifunctional gasoline additive which ... reduces abnormal deposit-induced ignition; prolongs exhaust valve life; functions as an effective carburetor de-icer and rust inhibitor and modifies combustion chamber deposits."

The abstract said nothing about the modification of people by nickel compounds, nor even about the chemical forms that nickel would probably take when it left the auto exhaust.

But there is a substantial body of medical literature on nickel dust and on the particular compound, nickel carbonyl, which is readily formed by the reaction of nickel with carbon monoxide.

These compounds are insidious causes of cancer of the nose and lungs, as shown both by the occurrence of these cancers among nickel refinery workers and by experimental studies on laboratory mice. The nickel compounds are especially treacherous, for they often require over 20 years of chronic exposure before they reveal their cancer-inducing effect in man.

The president's science advisory committee pointed out in its 1965 report on the environment that "widespread use of automobiles has made motor fuels the single most effective way to expose almost all our people to air pollution from combustion-resistant substances, such as metals."

It recommended that fuel additives be subject to compulsory registration, a procedure now scheduled for action this year, with legal protection of proprietary data.

In fact, we must go further, as we have begun to learn with pesticides, and require reasonable proof of safety before such products can be wantonly cast into our breathing space. Failing specific regulations under law, we must open the courts to private civil claims for collective damages for imprudent assaults on the common environment.

The larger issue was addressed by a committee of the American Association for the Advancement of Science in a 1965 report: We live in an area of large-scale "technological application before the related basic scientific knowledge was sufficiently developed to provide an adequate understanding of the effects of the new technology on nature."

Society is greedy for short-run payoffs—which are potentially enormous—on its investments in science. That greed, if it continues to foster a scientifically ignorant and interceptive technology, responsive to narrow goals and blind to larger human needs, can have no end other than a terminal cosmic bellyache.

'Before I Begin to Speak . . . I Want to Say Something'

By MICHAEL KERNAN

WASHINGTON — The American Booksellers Association tried every trick from the Plant Lady of Television to Marshall McLuhan, but it could not disguise the fact that the soul of its convention here last week is the trade exhibits.

Tiny Tim had it pegged right: the pop singer with the face of a halloween witch and the voice of a terrified child did a brief interview and then went right down to the hall where all the booths were and spent the day signing autographs. People lined up halfway around the room to see him in the Doubleday exhibit.

The book world has been described as tweedy and diffident, but the group that circulated through the hall filling shopping bags with assorted giveaways was strictly narrow-lapel and breezy.

TINY TIM
. . . down the hall

Exhibits relied heavily on closed circuit TV, slides and other audiovisual aids including a TV cartoon called Dr. Grosslap, a booth built into an airline counter with uniformed salespeople and latest books listed as "arrivals" on the readerboard, and a felt banner announcing something called a bookazine.

Even the good gray Times was there extolling commercial possibilities: "The New York Times helps you sell more books." And besides, one could get free good humors, lifesavers, fans, grapejuice and photos of Orson Welles as Macbeth.

The Plant Lady should have known better than to try to follow a show like that.

She is Thalassa ("making things grow") Cruso, who has been labeled by practically everyone the Julia Child of the plant world because she appears on ETV and demonstrates how to make indoor plants happy.

Her personality is what puts her over,—being crisp and British and cultivated. She is a transplanted archaeologist who worked with Sir Mortimer Wheeler and of course is a graduate of the London School of Economics.

"We start with very simple things," she said, "like how to make up the soil for a potted plant. Now, you can't tell someone living in a high-rise to go and get a good garden loam. You might as well tell him to go get some camel droppings."

At the luncheon, speakers came on inexorably, and it turned out that every one of them has written a book. First was Ralph ("The Crime Confederation") Salerno, who promised that he has given us a new view of organized crime—not as a cops and robbers story but as a business conglomerate.

"Illegal gambling alone is a 20 million dollar industry," he said. "The government spent 30,000 dollars to investigate organized crime, which is 10 per cent of what it spent to investigate the sex life of the rhesus monkey."

He scored those who fear the beginnings of a black mafia in the ghetto: 'why didn't you get that excited when there was a white mafia there?"

McLUHAN
. . . funnyman

Next came Peg ("I didn't come here to argue") Bracken, a writer whose "eye is on the sparrowlike details that hover like vultures over our daily life." She who discussed humor writing. If McLuhan, she asserted, was ever to write a cookbook he should be told that for ham salad the medium is the mayonnaise.

McLuhan ("cliche to archetype"), speaking in his turn, exhibited equal skill at humor. "Before I begin to speak," he announced, "I want to say something."

He then sprayed over the audience a glittering shower of philosophical one-liners:

- "Jokes are grievances."
- "The TV child is a cyclops, he uses only one eye, and books that are designed to be read from 4.6 inches away are useless to him."
- "Diaper backward spells repaid. Think about it."
- "The NASA people are 18th century types; the stuff they put out is cheap science-fiction. They're still trying to visualize space when space is an aduditory thing."
- "The Beatles are like Kafka's cockroach."
- "Affluence creates poverty."
- "Literacy consists of separating the eye from the other senses."

A McLuhanism, one concluded, should not mean, but be, which leads us back to Tiny Tim and the trade exhibits. His new book is called "Beautiful Thoughts," but he simply left his message to its own medium and spent his time in the palpable world of things. There is a lesson in there somewhere.

Hearing Aids On Trial

VICTORIA: In the past a great deal of criticism has been leveled against the hearing aid industry. This has been due primarily to high prices, poor service and the fact that a free trial period was non-existant. In many cases a person dissatisfied with the hearing aid was unable to obtain either satisfaction or refund.

This situation has new been corrected by a company manufacturing hearing aids in Victoria.

By dealing directly with the manufacturer a saving of fifty per cent is realized on a high quality hearing aid with two weeks free trial, thus eliminating cause for dissatisfaction.

LABOR NEGOTIATIONS

A report to telephone customers

The cost of labor is one of several factors which influence the cost of providing telephone service. The B.C. Telephone Company believes it has a responsibility to inform its customers of the facts involved in its efforts to arrive at a new working agreement with the Federation of Telephone Workers of B.C.

The following report is made to help meet that responsibility.

settlement recommended

B.C. Tel and the Federation of Telephone Workers began negotiations in October, 1968 and in three months of direct talks and two months of meetings before a federal conciliation officer dealt with 103 of the 132 items before bargainers.

The Company could not accept, however, the Federation demand for a 25-per-cent across-the-board wage rate increase in one year, nor all of the additional 16 per cent in other demands.

Wage differences, together with other items were placed before a federal conciliation board early in April. The board included Chairman Prof. Joseph C. Smith of the University of B.C. Law Faculty; G. S. Cumming, a Vancouver lawyer, as Company nominee; D. D. Stupich, NDP MLA for Nanaimo, as nominee for the Federation's plant and traffic divisions; and M. J. Alton, a representative of the United Steelworkers of America, as nominee for clerical division.

In its report, issued May 9, the board recommended a two-year contract expiring December 31, 1970. Its recommendations on vacation and other employee-benefit improvements were unanimous. Its recommendations for wage increases for the plant and traffic divisions were unanimous.

These recommendations included the following:

—A 17-per-cent across-the-board increase in wage rates in two stages, with 10 per cent retroactive to Jan. 1, 1969, and the remaining seven per cent effective Jan. 1, 1970.

—A reduction, effective Jan. 1, 1970, to 37½ hours from the present 40-hour work week, without reduction in take-home pay, for the Company's 2,600 plant employees. This would result in hourly wage rates at Jan. 1, 1970 being 24.8 per cent higher than at the end of the previous contract Dec. 31, 1968.

For the clerical division, the conciliation board recommended the same 17-per-cent wage rate increase in two years—and this was accepted by the Company. A minority report submitted by the clerical nominee sought an additional five per cent in wage considerations and a reduction to 35 from 37½ hours in the work week, which would increase clerical hourly wage rates by 30.7 per cent by Jan. 1, 1970.

company has accepted

B.C. Tel's Board of Directors, after careful examination of the alternatives, agreed reluctantly to accept the unanimous and majority recommendations of the conciliation board.

It did not accept the minority recommendation for the clerical division. Information obtained from an objective and independent source indicates conclusively that B.C. Tel clerical salaries, including the recommended 10 per cent adjustment effective Jan. 1, 1969, are ahead of the weighted average for nearly every clerical job of the top 24 employers in British Columbia.

The recommended terms acceptable to the Company, together with other fringe-benefit items already accepted by the Company, represent an increase of 24.2 per cent, or more than $15,000,000 in payroll costs over the two years.

Federation negotiators recommended against acceptance of these terms and the membership rejected the settlement package.

So that you may see what was rejected, the following sets out examples of wage rates proposed in the settlement package recommended by the conciliation board and accepted by the Company. It must be kept in mind that today infrequently, if ever, are our employees subjected to layoffs.

(Rates shown are top rates in 1968 and those recommended by the board for 1969 and 1970)

	1968		Jan. 1/69		Jan. 1/70
Classification	hourly	yearly	hourly	yearly	hourly	yearly

Typist	$2.16	$4,234	$2.38	$4,656	$2.53	$4,954

these benefits are included

Fringe benefits cost B.C. Tel 27½ cents for each $1.00 of straight time payroll. Among these are pensions, death benefits and sick leave fully paid for by the Company; up to 10 paid holidays; medical insurance, rest periods, vacations and other items.

Vacation provisions include two weeks after one year's service; three weeks after five years; four weeks after 15 years and five weeks after 24 years, effective from Jan. 1, 1969; and four weeks after 14 years and five weeks after 23 years, effective Jan. 1, 1970.

The Company also agreed to increase its contributions to medical insurance payments to $5.00 monthly from $2.50 for married employees and to $6.25 monthly from $2.50 for married employees with dependents.

Overtime work provisions include time and one-half for the first two hours of "continuing" overtime and double time thereafter; and double time for all "called out" overtime. In addition, the Company has agreed to pay plant employees in money, rather than in a combination of money and time off, for all overtime worked.

highest paid in canada

B.C. Tel employees for some time have been the highest paid telephone workers in Canada. The settlement proposed preserves and enhances that employee position as illustrated by a comparison of top monthly wage rates as of Jan. 1, 1969. In this comparison, the figures for B.C. Tel include the 10 per cent increase recommended to be retroactive to Jan. 1, 1969 in the settlement package offered:

Classification	B.C. Tel	Alberta	Sask.	Man.	Ontario	N.B.
Cable Splicer, Central Office Maintenance Man	$788	$681	$662	$659	$674	$557

Operator	$422	$382	$373	$347	$376	$337
Service Representative	$509	$441	$424	$459	$504	$385
Intermediate Steno	$473	$407	$403	$420	$441	$383
Typist	$388	$334	$366	$308	$368	$325

we cannot accept this

The plant section of the Federation sought to have a shorter work year, rather than a shorter work week as recommended unanimously by the conciliation board.

This would have all 2,600 plant employees continue to work a 40-hour week, but receiving three additional weeks off — in spring, fall and winter — in lieu of a 37½-hour work week.

This is unacceptable to the Company, not because of cost which would be about the same as with the 37½-hour work week which the Company has agreed to accept, but because it would impair seriously maintenance of high standards of customer service.

It would mean every plant employee with one year's service would get five week's vacation in four pieces — and there are nearly 1,100 such plant employees in the Company today. The remaining more than 1,500 would get from six to eight weeks' vacation in four pieces.

The impossibility of scheduling a work force to cover such vacation periods for employees scattered throughout British Columbia is obvious and any attempt at it would bring serious deterioration in customer service. We cannot and will not tolerate this.

Furthermore, if such a system became effective throughout the Company, chaos would result.

we must be responsible

B.C. Tel, as a major employer in British Columbia and as a regulated utility which must justify all its expenses to the regulatory authority, recognizes clearly that it must take a responsible position in its labor negotiations.

It must be fair with its employees, but also must protect the interest of its customers, its investors and British Columbia as a whole.

The Company also recognizes that it can rely only so far upon growth in business to generate additional revenues required to meet cost increases.

The settlement package proposed by the federal conciliation board — unanimous in almost every respect — is, in the Company's view a very generous one for our employees.

The Company has accepted those terms with reluctance. It cannot and will not accept further demands.

At the same time, we are prepared to maintain telephone service for our customers in event the Federation members decide to strike.

They'll be aiming for a bullseye on the ground at Comox air base this weekend in an inter-club accuracy competition but they already have one miss. Fifth from the left, she's Peggy Wright, 20, waitress at a city hotel who has about 15 parachute drops to her credit and is the only active woman member of the Victoria Parachute Club. Other members competing, (from left), are Ken Earl, Jean Louis Tremblay, Peter Stoffers, Barry Larsen, Al Eimer, George Bissendon, Chris Gordon, Dale Wood, Garey Downey and instructor Roger Foley. About 50 jumpers, some from Duncan, Nanaimo and Port Alberni, are expected at the competition which includes individual and team events. Host club is the Comox Sky Divers.

Duncan Artist Featured

Sixteen bright, large, "abstract-realist" paintings by a young Dutch artist were displayed today at Gallery 69.

The gallery at 3280 Douglas opened at 2 p.m. and 70 invited guests viewed the first show. Owners hope to "show works by young painters, who cannot display in the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria."

"The Art Gallery is booked solid for two years," said one owner.

The artist, Will Julsing, has shown his work at other commercial galleries in Victoria but this is his first one-man show.

He studied art in Holland for five years and travelled extensively in the Northwest Territories and Eastern Canada before moving to Duncan a year ago.

All of his paintings are what is called in art circles "bold, bright and colorful." The artist himself described them as "abstract-realist—but I can't talk about them—I just paint them."

Two paintings, side by side, feature John Lennon and Yoko Ono. The owners are sending Lennon a telegram, telling him about the paintings.

Air Crew Captured

LAGOS (Reuters) — The Nigerian Air Force announced today that the crew of a transport plane it shot down Thursday has been captured. An official statement said Nigerian planes had intercepted the plane—suspected of running arms to Biafra—over Eket, 30 miles southeast of Calabar.

Crowd Pays Tribute To Kelly's 43 Years

Former teachers and former pupils—about 500 of them—gathered Friday night for a farewell gabfest in honor of retiring principal Clive Kelly.

A teacher at Esquimalt High School for the last 43 years and principal for 29, Kelly has spent his entire teaching life at the school which he has seen grow from an enrolment of 70 to almost 700

Former pupils now in the public eye who attended the reunion include Esquimalt Mayor Ray Bryant, three other Esquimalt aldermen who graduated from the school, Ray Hadfield, superintendant fo the Motor Vehicles Branch, and Tayo Takata of Don Mills, Ontario, son of the man who operated the old Japanese Tea Gardens on the Gorge.

Representing former teachers at the school were former principal Gwen Hewlings and ex-vice-principal William Reid, now director of higher education with the provincial education department.

After school's dismissed the Kellys will travel in Canada then abroad.

Volkswagen leaps into the present.

Alas.

The end of an era.

Now you can buy a Volkswagen Fastback, Squareback or Notchback sedan that you can drive without shifting. (Is nothing sacred?)

Instead of a stick shift, a chrome-consoled selection lever.

Instead of a four-on-the-floor, a discreet PRN321.

It had to happen.

But the reason it took so long to happen wasn't that we were stubborn. It's just that we weren't satisfied with the automatic transmissions available. So we built our own.

It took ten years, but what we ended up with is an automatic transmission looked upon by some engineers as a work of art. In fact, so much design and research went into the works there's even a patent pending on part of it.

It's so beautifully balanced a model airplane engine is powerful enough to turn it.

It's the lightest automatic transmission in its class.

It's the one with the fewest moving parts. And it's been tested for over 2 million miles from the Arctic to the Equator. (To make sure that the VW automatic transmission would last as long as the VW.)

Of course, it costs a little more to get a Volkswagen 1600 with an automatic transmission.

But then, that's the price you pay for progress.

Check the Yellow Pages under Automobile for the name of the Volkswagen dealer nearest you.

'Tiny Tribute' Offered To Winston the Historian

Reviewed by Charlotte S. M. Girard

CHURCHILL . . . special insight

One of the many facets of Winston Churchill's brilliant personality was his interest in history. This led him, over 60 years, to write 25 historical books. As this writing was combined with a political career, with articles and lecture tours, Churchill had to rely on assistants for a good deal of his research.

One of these assistants, Dr. Maurice Ashley, has now written what he modestly calls "a commentary and a critique, not a work of research," but one which he relished doing as an opportunity to pay a "tiny tribute to his memory."

Ashley, Oxford-trained and well-known for his works on the 17th century, has done a good deal more than he claims. Not only does he base his work on his own memories of several years' work with Churchill, but he has discussed the matter with others who followed in his steps and can of course himself evaluate much of Churchill's historical writing, both as a professional historian and as one who lived through the period of the Second World War.

Churchill's interest in history stemmed, according to Ashley, from his overwhelming interest in politics, plus the fact that much of the history of Britain during the previous two centuries was, to some extent, the history of his family. History to Churchill was then essentially a personal affair in which he performed acts of piety, at first to his own father, in Lord Randolph Churchill, then to his celebrated ancestor in Marlborough: His Life and Times.

Churchill's own career was the subject of other works, based on his early experience in the army, and particularly as a politician, cabinet member, and finally prime minister. The final work by Churchill, A History of the English-Speaking Peoples, was published after the Second World War, though largely written before 1940.

Ashley has discussed each of Churchill's historical works, with particular emphasis on his later works.

He has also described Churchill's method of writing history, a peculiar method which saw much of the research being done by assistants (by the end of Churchill's life, his assistants were often some of the leading historians) but all of the writing being done by Churchill himself.

Except for his very early works, all were dictated, which explains, says Ashley, why his books were always longer than anticipated and bore many other marks of having been created by an orator.

Churchill's use of assistants is not of course unusual, but what was unusual was his disregard often of the accepted view, his reliance on his own masterly sense of politics which gave him special insight when dealing with political figures and the speed with which he wrote.

Profitable Work

Churchill found writing a profitable business and often accepted contracts when he had little idea of how or when he would be able to complete the project. He tended to launch into a new project with his characteristic gusto, but with none of the customary reticence of the professional.

Such a hurried method might have had disastrous results had it not been for the large amount of rewriting Churchill then did—sometimes as often as six times—and the fact that his assistants were given time to check sources.

Churchill had, like all historians, his own vision—or philosophy—of history. To him history was primarily politics and the war and it was in these fields that he both made his name and his most notable contribution as an historian.

He had little interest in biography, partly because of his courteous respect for the privacy of others. Consequently his works are, by contemporary standards, lacking in analysis of character.

Valuable Sketches

True, much of Churchill's history involved people still alive, or whose families or parties might have resented too frank a statement of opinion, and this, as well as his generosity, undoubtedly often prevented him from passing judgment on his contemporaries. In one of his minor works, Great Contemporaries, however, he left us some valuable sketches especially of eminent Victorians.

Much of Churchill's work was autobiographical, but he never lost sight of the historian's role, both his and that of later historians. His history of the Second World War, probably his best-known work, will remain always an essential part of the history of our century, as well as a major source book.

Maurice Ashley's Churchill as Historian will be of interest not only to professional historians, but to all who are interested in a most important part of Churchill's thought during his long career and in the history of the Second World War. In its limited way this book is also an interesting addition to the Churchill biography shelf.

Psychiatrist Puts Winnie on Couch

CHURCHILL REVISED: A CRITICAL ASSESSMENT, by A. J. P. Taylor, Robert Rhodes James, J. H. Plumb, Basil Liddell Hart and Anthony Storr. New York, The Dial Press, Inc., $7.50. Reviewed by Charlotte S. M. Girard.

The time is not ripe for a definitive biography of Churchill. This cannot, in any case, be expected of the work begun by his late son — for in Randolph Churchill's words he would let his father "be his own biographer." There are still too many memoirs to appear, and, finally, we still are too close to the events of Churchill's career to be able to judge him by the calm light of history.

The five authors whose essays make up Churchill Revised offer us an interim assessment, and no more. Four are historians: A. J. P. Taylor, a controversial diplomatic historian whose Origins of the Second World War is still much debated, discusses Churchill's statesmanship. Robert Rhodes James, a former senior official at the House of Commons and author of noteworthy biographies both of Churchill's father and of Lord Roseberry, examines Churchill in his role as politician.

J. H. Plumb, who helped write Volume III of A History of the English-Speaking Peoples, studies Churchill the historian, and Basil Liddell Hart, perhaps Britain's greatest military historian studies Churchill as strategist. The last contributor is a psychoanalyst of note, Anthony Storr, who gives us a careful study of Churchill's personality.

Unavoidably these studies tend to be repetitive. Each author has, in turn, plodded through the long years of Churchill's career — and in the case of Storr of his early days too — and has attempted to evaluate him as statesman, politician, military strategist and simply as "the man."

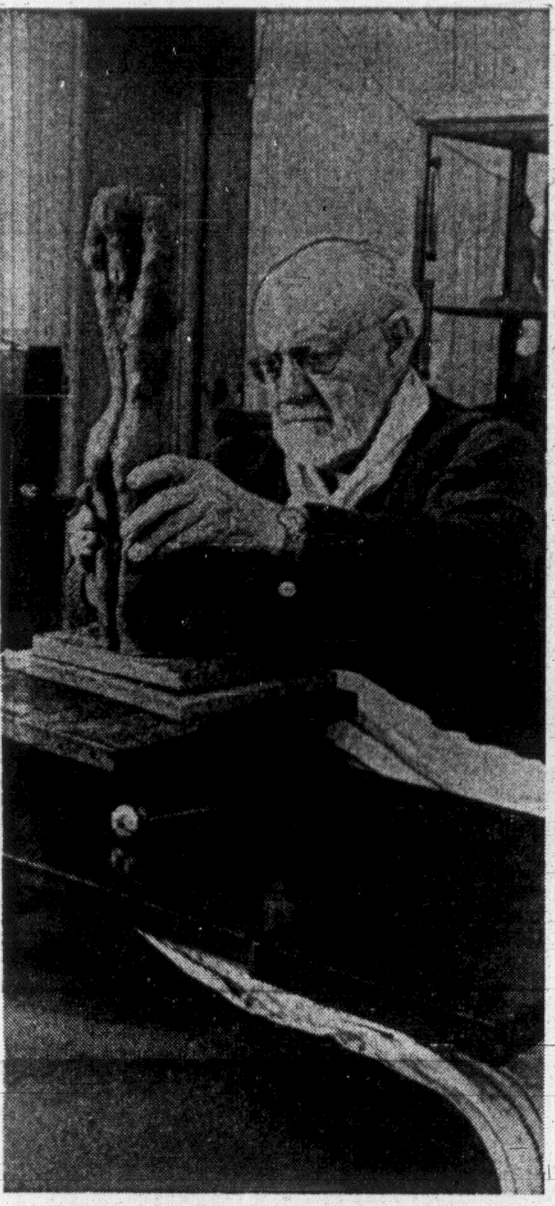
Taylor, not uncharacteristically, will be charged with making some rather outrageous statements. Few would agree, for instance, that Churchill "lacked one gift essential to a statesman —(that) he did not know how to put himself across." While this may have been true in Churchill's early career, no one who has read — or remembers — Churchill's wartime speeches will agree with Taylor.

Many too will disagree with Taylor's statement that "The British people raised him up, and he failed them" . . . or that "The British ruling classes did their best to keep him down, and he preserved them."

FAMOUS DIARIES

Robert Rhodes James and Basil Liddell Hart's essays on Churchill as politician and strategist, respectively, are more balanced. James acknowledges Churchill's great gift at speechmaking — which hardly corresponds with Taylor's judgment. Both are in agreement with Sir Winston's basically aristocratic instincts.

Storr has attempted the most interesting study of Churchill in the volume, mainly because he appears to be the first psychiatrist to study Churchill's personality. Storr is quite aware of the difficulties of his task. Basing himself largely on Lord Moran's famous diaries and with the advantage of being less closely involved with Churchill than Moran was — admittedly there were also some formidable disadvantages as Storr points out — he has produced the most balanced study of Churchill's character to date.



ARTISTIC GIANT, Henri Matisse, 1869-1954, sculpts in bed at the age of 80 in a photograph taken from The World of Matisse, by John Russell of London's Sunday Times and the editors of Time-Life books. Included in the 192-page book are eight lengthy pictorial essays detailing the works of Matisse, his contemporaries and predecessors.

A Perfect Wife In Perfect Home Fools Around

Reviewed by Grant McOrmond

Writers of historical fiction are almost as prolific as writers of murder mysteries. It is seldom, however, that one of their novels reaches the best-seller lists. Since Dorothy Eden's The Vines of Yarrabee has already found a place among the top ten, it merits some attention.

Eden has chosen Australia as the setting for her story. Between the years 1827 and 1864, near the town of Parramatta in New South Wales, Yarrabee was established, one of the earliest vineyards in Australia.

Out of the wilderness, Gilbert Massingham created his dream. He imported vines, cultivated them despite many difficulties, developed a taste for wine among his contemporaries, and developed a style of living that was elegant and in keeping with what he hoped his wines would be.

DREAM MANSION

As part of his dream, he built his mansion. Everything in it had to be refined and perfect. To preside over the furnishings, crystal and silver imported from Britain, he imported his coolly elegant English bride, Eugenia.

Eden has created a fascinating heroine in Eugenia Massingham. She is "cool, reserved, beautiful, almost the perfect figure to inhabit this Australian version of the Victorian Doll's House.

Easily and naturally she adapts herself to the hot-house atmosphere, the over-protection afforded by her husband. But beneath the elegance and fragile beauty there is a strength and passion that she never reveals to her husband.

She is carefully protected from the harsh situations of frontier life, from the fact that her home and her wealth are founded upon the cruel exploitation of convict labor. Ultimately, her husband's solicitude she transmutes into self-deception; her social unawareness and irresponsibility culminate in marital infidelity.

Though only the outer shell of marriage remains, the facade is kept intact. She is essential to her husband's dream of elegance in the Outback; her husband is essential to the maintenance of her sheltered life.

The Vines of Yarrabee gives the reader a vivid picture of a marriage with an empty core, yet a marriage that is civilized, kindly, and rewarding in a limited way to both partners, a true marriage of convenience.

CLASS DISTINCTIONS

Consequently Eugenia's romance with the artist, Colm O'Connor, and Gilbert's long-lasting affair with Molly Jarvis, the housekeeper at Yarrabee, are considered as little more than inconvenient intrusions of reality that require some special efforts to ignore.

While Miss Eden devotes most of her time and attention to depicting the character of Eugenia, Gilbert and Molly, there is much more in the novel to interest and entertain the reader.

The class distinctions that were present in pioneer Australian society are clearly delineated, with the slave-convicts at the bottom, the freed men in the middle, and the privately wealthy settlers and professional men at the top. Also shown, of course, is the process by which the distinctions between the classes were gradually to be effaced.

It's Enough to Inspire A Newfoundland Visit

NEWFOUNDLAND by Harold Horwood, Macmillan of Canada, $6.95.

Reviewed by Margaret Doody

Although it is a pleasant country to travel in, Canada has long been lacking in travel books — a deficiency which Macmillan's new series The Traveller's Canada promises to remedy.

Harold Horwood's Newfoundland will appeal not only to the traveller, but to all those who have ever sung I's the By or Killigrew's Soiree or wondered about our easternmost province with its imaginative place names like Heart's Content, Dildo Run and Shoe Cove.

At first the reader may be disconcerted by the alternation of purple passages (the laughter of Indian children is "faint and timeless, as it was in the beginning, is now and shall be when the stars have left their courses to form new constellations of a shape we do not know") and barren textbook proxe ("Approximately 1,100 miles of roads outside the cities were paved by the end of 1968.")

Fortunately, once past the beginning the author finds a more moderate style, although the uneasy shift of gears recurs from time to time. His honesty is appealing. Since he does not try to overlook or tone down the depressing quality of places such as Roddickton, it is the more believable when he speaks of the beauty of Placentia shore, the charm of the net lofts at Baulin, or the vigor of St. John's.

Perhaps most interesting to the casual reader are the discussions of Newfoundland's history. The book would be useful to both school children and adults who usually find Canadian history drab and uneventful.

The province's history goes back, with the Dorset and Red Paint cultures, for about 2,000 years, and (as recently discovered) the Norsemen arrived about 1000 A.D.

More modern history is fascinating, if bloody, with the infamous eradication of the Beothuck Indians in the 17th century, and the rule of the pirates on the east coast. The "Pirate Admiral" Peter Easton built up a private kingdom at Ferryland, from which he sallied forth to raid Puerto Rico, seizing the gold of San Juan. Newfoundland is still the best province in Canada in which to go hunting for buried doubloons and pieces of eight.

The author pays attention to the interests of the sportsman, and the appendices furnish information on good hunting, fishing and canoe trips. The pictures, which add so much to the cost of a book, are for the most part small, post-cardish and dull.

AN INDOOR THRILLER

EMBASSY, by Stephen Coulter. William Heinemann, $6.50.

It is seldom these days that a thriller confines itself to a single location and a narrow theme. Stephen Coulter's new novel has an almost classical unity: practically all the significant action takes place in the U.S. embassy in Paris, where a top Russian politician seeks asylum.

How he is concealed from the suspicious French police and protected from defectors within the embassy itself is the gist of the plot.

The pace is slow at the beginning but a considerable amount of suspense develops, as much from the delicacies of contemporary politics as from conventional fugitive problems.

Something New But Straight On Jews-Nazis

WHY SHOULD I HAVE ALL THE GRIEF? by Phyllis Gotlieb. Macmillan of Canada, 149 pp. $4.95.

It must be very difficult for anyone to sit down to write a book about the Nazis and the Jews and still come up with something that has not all been chewed over many times before. Phyllis Gotlieb has done this, and without any gimmickry, allegory or novel twists. She plays things utterly straight.

Her novel is built around Heinz Dorfman, a refugee from Auschwitz living in Toronto. Eighteen years before, his father acted in a particularly cruel way when the Nazis discovered their hideout, and he has lived with this memory ever since.

It is a legacy that has destroyed him as a human being. And the way that his hatred has narrowed his character and has eaten away at any feelings of trust and love that he once had is impressive.

A death in the family brings Heinz' feelings to a crisis, for grouped around him are other characters who are also bound in by the peculiar tensions of their race.

Yet, as one might expect from a poet of Miss Gotlieb's standing, the precision with which she defines and describes the characters invests their negative personalities with a highly positive impact. The book is worth reading for the passion with which it explores human narrowness.

He Didn't Succumb to Cheap Culture

EXPERIENCES, by Arnold Toynbee, Oxford University Press. $9.75.

Reviewed by S. W. Jackman.

A little more than a generation or so ago, Arnold Toynbee's A Study of History — albeit in the abridged version by D. C. Somervell — bedecked coffee tables throughout this continent. Toynbee was the subject of articles in popular magazines such as Life and his work was discussed by learned boffins on panels everywhere.

Despite this popular adulation — and it lasted for quite a time — he was not deflected from his work as a scholar. He did not succumb to the seductions of mass media and cheap culture. That he triumphed over his own popularity is a compliment to his inner resources and his education.

Experiences is an odd book. It is in part a sequel to Acquaintances; it is also an autobiography, but since its author is Arnold Toynbee it is not strictly orthodox in its organization. Toynbee manages to combine autobiography, general philosophy and even some original poetry.

VICTORIAN WORLD

Arnold Toynbee — now 80 — was born into that security, or so it seems to us today, of the late Victorian middle-class world. He received the orthodox education of his class and his day — the curriculum at Winchester emphasized the study of Greek and Latin and at Oxford he continued his classical studies.

Indeed, it must be recognized that a classical education provides a man with many insights into human behavior and gives him a strong sense of language. Toynbee's literary style is always clear, precise and exact.

Toynbee's career in one sense has been very straightforward. He served at the Paris Peace Conference in 1919, as did many of his distinguished contemporaries such as Keynes, Buchan and Nicolson.

TOYNBEE . . . cosy world

He assumed a chair at the University of London and then moved to Chatham House, the famous centre for international studies, where he presided with dignity, wit and insight for over three decades.

Although very much a man of the 20th century — his annual "Surveys" for Chatham House on internal relations show him to have been a highly competent observer of the current scene — nevertheless he is really a classical man. He is, indeed, a true denizen of the Graeco-Roman world; everything after the fall of the Roman empire is a tailpiece, often tiresome and fundamentally irrelevant.

Historians, unlike other people, are fortunate in being able to enclose themselves in a cosy world of their choice and exclude the tedious situations of the everyday world.

INNER GRACE

Toynbee's book offers something for everyone. He is not a pessimist about the future — unlike many of the young whose experiences are limited and who see everything ending in one great bang. He believes that man will find his way through other media than technology — through inner grace man finds peace.

Perhaps, his career and beliefs may be best summed up by a short piece he wrote in 1924: "O Lord . . . grant me to gain a little courage and a little wisdom . . . that . . . I may become a little less unfit to meet thee face to face . . . hereafter."

NOW . . . a Guy Named Joe

By RUSSELL FREETHY

JOE COCKER

He was born in Sheffield, England twenty-three years ago last month and spent his early teenage years assimilating all the pop sounds he could. Ray Charles has influenced his style more than any one performer and Dylan is his favorite composer.

He had bottles thrown at him during his first public performance on an amateur night in a pub call Minerva.

At 16 he was playing semi-professionally in and around Sheffield at night and working as a gas fitter by day.

Joe Crocker is his name and with a little help from his friends he has become a major attraction in England, on the continent and on our east coast.

Crocker is a born musician who can neither read nor write music, but displays a deep feeling for it. As he sings, he picks away on an imaginary guitar, occasionally wailing blues with a mouth-harp or sitting in on drums.

Except for a few obvious differences he could almost be mistaken for Janis Joplin. Their vocal styling and stage presence are similar and both put everything they have got into their act.

Like Janis, Joe has paid his dues many times over by singing anywhere a microphone could be plugged in and many places where one could not. Emotional, exciting and exhausting on stage, Crocker always maintains a good rapport with his audience.

He is unique in the British underground where only composer artist groups have made it, for he writes very little of his material (he co-wrote Marjorine, his first hit in England), yet he still commands the respect and admiration of other artists.

The extent of his impact can perhaps be measured by the large number of musicians and writers that turn up in the audience wherever he performs.

The Grease Band, Crocker's backup group, are magically transformed into a super heavy backing the moment he comes on stage and together they provide one of the best and musically entertaining shows on the circuit today.

With Little Help From My Friends is the title of Crocker's first album and the single from it that should click is called Feeling Alright.

The little help came from such friends as Jimmy Page of Led Zepplin, Matthew Fisher of Procol Harum, Mike Kelly of Spooky Tooth, Stevie Winwood of Blind Faith and many other British artists who sat in as sidemen for the session.

Also included on the album are two Dylan compositions Just Like A Woman and I Shall Be Released, the title tune and Marjorine. Crocker is a good interpreter and adds new feeling and meaning to a song regardless of its origin. A very pleasant change.

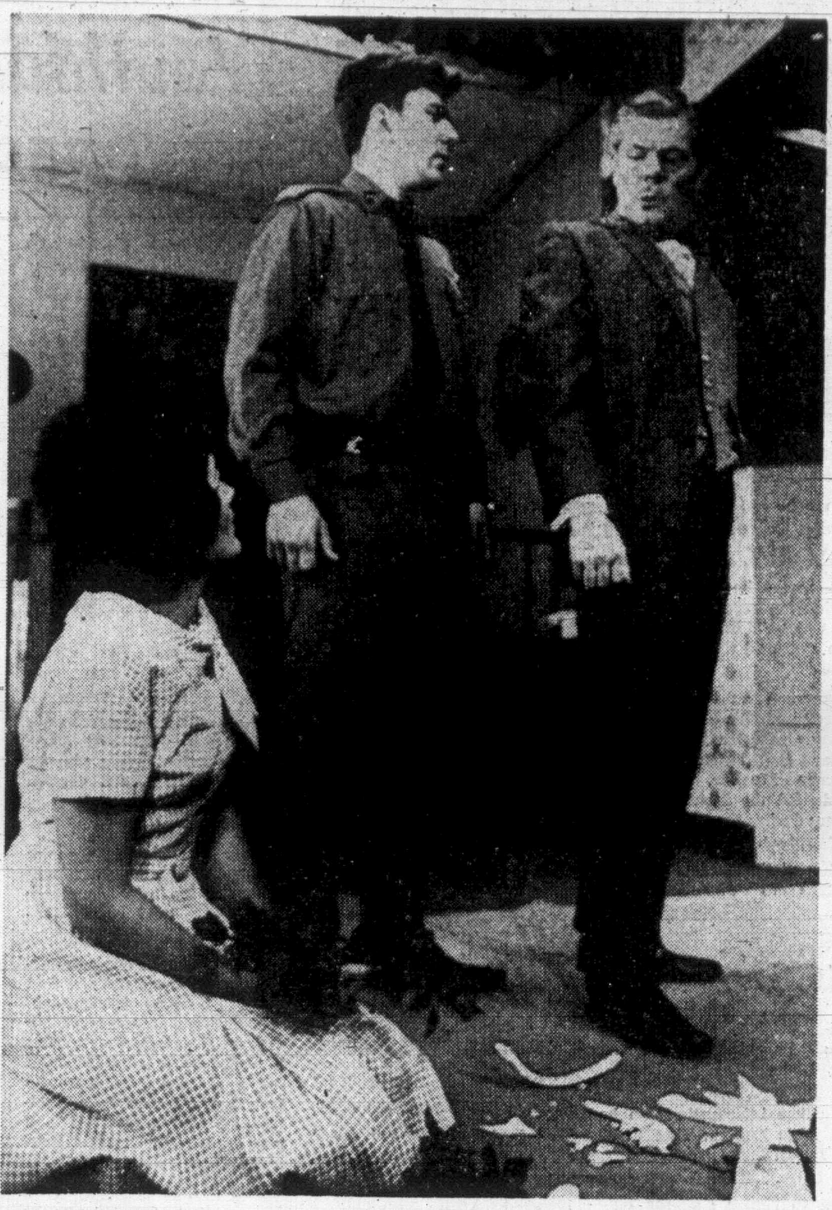
New Syndrome's soon-to-be opened studio in Vancouver will feature the world-famous board from Studio 3 of Western Recorders of Hollywood.

There is no other equipment in the world that has produced as many hits for as many groups and artists. The Beach Boys, Grassroots, The Mamas and Papas, The Association, Turtles, Fifth Dimension and Johnny Rivers have all recorded with it.

Aquarius was recorded on it. Several leading producers, upon hearing of its sale expressed their willingness to come to Vancouver just to use it.

The rest of the studio has been designed and engineered by Howard Tremaine, the authour of The Encyclopedia of Electronics and designer of studios and equipment for RCA and other major recording firms.

New Syndrome's own producers, sound engineers and mixers will receive extensive training in Los Angeles at both Western and United Recorders so that the Studio 3 board may be used to its fullest advantage.



SHATTERED as a vase, lies a hopeful illusion as John Cleary (Allan Purdy) cruelly reveals to his wife Nettie (Carolyn Stephenson) the truth about the roses, to the indignation of their son, Timmy (Stewart-Motteram). When the Irish write well they have a way of probing sympathetically and surely to the absolute nerve centres of humanity.

The gentle dissection exposes the comedy people make just by being people; the strength in the bone and the weakness in the fibre.

Latest in a long line that has made the Irish theatre illustrious, is Brian Friel, a school teacher whose writing in Philadelphia, Here I Come, is touched with the instinctive poetry that gives a rich sheen to common speech and the lives of ordinary people.

An RPA production, it opened Friday night at McPherson Playhouse where it will run through next Saturday.

The play looks closely into the heart of a young man who has already torn up his roots and is about to depart forever from his homeland.

In order to let us experience the wavering emotions, the regrets and nostalgia, the memories and dreams of future glories, Friel has employed a somewhat rare device.

Two actors play two images of the same man. There is Public Gar O'Donnell, son of the inarticulate village shopkeeper, well played by Robert Price, and Private Gar, his alter ego; the inner self who nags him as his conscience, tempts him with fantasies and every now and the, forces him to face the truth.

The idea comes off well in this production because its director, Tom Kerr, uses every means to relate the two in his blocking and positioning and in establishing a precise balance between them.

It works too, because of the intelligence and sincerity of actors Terry Kelly and Eric Shneider and the excellent rapport developed between these two.

Admirably controlled and punctuated, Kelly's performance has just the right degree of understatement to gloss it with the illusion of complete naturalism.

Schneider has a fine rhythmic sense and gives an extremely sensitive performance as the alter ego.

Beautiful timing is a major character performance by element in a gem of a character performance by Owen Foran as the defeated school master and another effective character portrayal is that of the housekeeper by Ramona McBean.

Two scenes that had not "jelled" on opening night were a flashback involving Gar's aunt and uncle from Philadelphia and a farewell scene with his pals.

MISSED FIRM GRIP

In both cases the actors failed to establish a firm grip. Gay Scrivener, for example, an experienced actress, came near but never quite made Aunt Lizzy believable.

She was patently acting where others in the cast were providing an illusion of life.

There was nothing wrong with the director's concept at any point—in fact it was uniformly clear, it maintained a fine balance between what was comic and what was poignant in the isolation between father and son.

Only in the last 10 minutes did Kerr allow the play's tone to become a flat grey, its pace and rhythm to descend below the vitality level.

The overall impression of the production with its skeletal but adequate set and lighting, is that it provides an absorbing and entertaining evening that would have been just that much better with a few hours more rehearsal of those weak scenes.

Telephone Singers In Concert Program

With a successful year behind it, Victoria Musical Art Society looks forward to an interesting program series next season according to president Mrs. S. G. Watts' report to the society's 39th annual meeting held this week.

The series will include a concert by the B.C. Telephone Choir in January.

Reports included those from the Junior, Intermediate and Studio Groups and the historian's report, read by Mrs. J. Ingram Smith.

It was announced that auditions will again be held for the society's open scholarships which amount to $500.

The panel of officiers headed by Mrs. Watts was returned unanimously for the 1968-70 season.

Following the meeting, which was held at Craigdarroch Castle, a musical program was presented.

Taking part were vocal soloists Hilary Scott, Linda Scanlan and Penny Beavan; Stephen and Stuart Calder, violin and piano; Christopher Salm, flute, with Mrs. Salm at the piano, and violinist Jacqueline Tarry with Robin Wood at the piano.

The program was opened and closed by Gladys Pearcey's studio vocal ensemble.

Guitar Music Such as This Brings Tears or Gypsy Abandon

By BERYL PROUDMAN

Diamond In the Groove

Columbia records presents John Williams, ML 6008.

At 28 John Williams has, for several years, been considered among those who will inherit the mantle of guitar mastery from Segovia when it is passed on.

The technical skill and sensitivity of the guitarist are clearly demonstrated throughout this finely-executed, well-recorded performance but two bands on our copy should already be showing signs of wear, for they have been played far oftener than the rest.

Prime favorite, Tarrega's Recuerdos de la Alhambra has appealed to audiences ever since its premier performance.

Admittedly the melody is a bit of a tear-jerker, sentimental and of immediate appeal to the emotions so that the classical-music lover may feel a shade guilty at succumbing so readily to its charms. But reference to the delicate balance and smooth-flowing dexterity of Williams' performance can logically justify the attraction.

Ponce's less familiar Scherzino Mexicano is, in some ways, more interesting, for it has a light modern style and sprung rhythm which delight the listener afresh at each hearing.

Six other pieces lend interesting variety to the second side of this disc. The breath-taking swooping flight of a hummingbird is depicted in the final showpiece.

A restful, sweet-toned folk song, El Testamen de Amelia, dramatized with significant pauses and enriched by vari-toned repeats, is contrasted by Turina's wild gypsy dance, Soleares.

The sharper, thinner tone of the Fandanguillo by Turina, plus a mood of meandering improvisation with peaks of excitement en route, makes this the most Spanish-sounding of all.

The unusual harmonies and progressions of Albeniz' Sevilla tone down the aggressively Spanish style of this work, remarkable for fast finger-work and many tones from shimmering glissandi, through ringing tremolo to strident, chunky chords.

Side one is devoted to Williams' transcription of Bach's fourth suite for lute. The third of the six movements, Gavotte, is already a popular favorite as arranged for other instruments.

This side is fittingly more classical in tone than the other. The first movement, Praeludium, requires well-articulated fingering for its run-decorated melody depends on balancing lower notes for continuous support,

NEAT TURNS

The second movement, Laure, is outstanding for its neat, quick turns, interesting rhythm and beautifully resonant vibrato.

This fine guitarist falls somewhere between the discreet scholasticism of Bream and the fiery passion of Segovia so he is both restful and uplifting to listen to in these charmingly varied selections.

Chubby Checker Would Prefer To Be Evans

WASHINGTON (AP) — A successful young businessman named Ernest Evans, who wishes he could shake his show business name of Chubby Checker, was in Washington recently to promote an African chess-type game called "Swahili."

Evans almost 10 years ago made it big in show business overnight at 16 when he sang and introduced The Twist that sent the nation into gyrations on the dance floor. He acquired his stage name by following another performer, Fats Domino (remember "Blueberry Hill"?), to stardom.

He has tried ever since to be Ernest Evans, as he is known in West Africa, where he has business investments. But he soon will be Chubby again when a new recording, "Jack of All Trades," is released by Kama Sutra under Buddha label.

The game Evans-Checker brought back from Africa and had manufactured by Milton Bradley is an ancient tribal one known in its place of origin as "The Game of Life."

Milton Bradley thought Swahili, which means freedom, more appropriate for a major game. When played by African tribes as long ago as 2,000 years, the game was taken so seriously that women were forbidden to participate and whole tribes were sometimes lost to the victors, Evans explained.

In the American version there are four tribes of plastic men, red, green, yellow and blue. The object is to capture rival tribes while protecting and advancing ones own.

It can be played by anybody over about eight years of age in an average time of 20 to 30 minutes. But in serious play, it can take as long as chess. "I have spent an hour and a half in one game in Nigeria," Evans said.

Island Art —Mixed Bag

By GORDON RICE

At the Gallery

If you can get to our city Art Gallery on or before June 15, you'll see a good representative show of Vancouver Island art. These are new, never-before-exhibited works, chosen by Thomas Maytham, a director of the Seattle Art Museum, for the 19th annual Vancouver Island Jury Exhibition.

If you're curious as to what this reviewer favors, in art, it's this: diversity, individuality and effort. This exhibit is strong in all these three areas, and is therefore satisfying. It's a mixed bag, but a good one.

There are a few old-timey works in the prints and watercolors section, which perhaps don't require comment. They are clear, definite, and precise, staying close to traditional illustration styles. This work may lack the personal touch, but it is not superficial or careless.

SELECTION

There are a number of artists, Moss, Sherwood, Grundstein, Hargreaves, whose work is interesting. In fact, there are too many interesting works to mention here. Some of this work seems to lack development (possibilities are there, however), and some of it just has to be passed by for lack of space. I'm not attempting an evaluation of the show, nor saying that the works not mentioned here lack merit.

There is a color drawing by Barrie Chalmers, entitled EM. One will find this small, highly compressed work most compelling. It is a psychedelic "funk" style which is new, but already overdone; however, here it is done to perfection. The complex variety of suggestive shapes seem to form chambered spaces wherein the eye could wander forever without finding any repetition. It is a complete world, seen through the wrong end of a telescope. It would be an ideal picture for an insomniac's gallery.

JAPANESE

Bruce Davies' Surface, a silkscreen print, has a Japanese elegance. His forms are like deftly cut fabric. There interesting shifts of position in which white becomes tan, and blue becomes black, so that the work appears both solid and transparent.

In Donald Harvey's silkscreen, Deja Vu, an ingot the color of blue burning gas is thrust into a furnace of the most fluorescent pinks and reds imaginable. This fiery stuff is contained by a border of dark blue, a heavy circle which contains molten forms and yet becomes part of them. The artist's big, enigmatic "Landscape" is notable for the heaviness and strangeness of its color, and its startling tensions of space and texture.

Pat Bates' Mandalas for a Glass Wall combines the precision of a freshly minted coin with the sense of something ancient. It seems to be a deeply felt work, a kind of meditational object which few artists can make convincingly.

INDIVIDUALS

Siebner and Max Bates, unfortunately represented by only one picture each, hold to strong and genuinely individual styles which seem sturdy and solid. If their roots go further back, it's all the more to their credit that they still stand and flower.

Dobereiner's Western Sunset requires its own background, and its own lights, to really realize the intriguing potential of this sculpture. One also wants to see a more finished "insides," when one is drawn to such a work. The artist's Open Bottom Box is clean, clear, and definite; a shaped canvas which really becomes sculpture.

James Kelly's Opex Structure needs its own exhibit space, to match its severity, its really incredible heaviness and tension. This, and Flemming Jorgensen's Memorial II seem to pose sticky problems for most viewers. Minimal art establishes itself by a kind of immediate presence.' In this case the first work is almost brutally severe and heavy, the second frail and evanescent. Neither work describes or relates anything; they are objects to be contemplated. If you can struggle with these pictures, so much the better for your head.

SOME UNIQUE

There is something unique and curious about the free-standing sculpture pieces of Pat Bates, Brookman, and Grove; they stop you.

The gallery has made a most important aquisition, and this is the place to mention it, as it was presented at the opening of the jury show. This work, Jack Kidder's untitled steel and plastic construction, has a quality of finish and sureness which must be widely evident. His materials fuse with such sureness, in fact, that one forgets, or never sees, his craftsmanship.

It's hard, on other words, to think of this work as "a piece of sculpture." You are immediately fascinated with the white sphere which is suspended so mysteriously in the haze of translucent plastic, like a sound suspended in eternity. The stainless steel base is an integral section of the piece (incidentally, a permanent exhibition base should be made for this work, to really set it off). If you take but a minute to study this work, I doubt if you'll ever forget it, and with each renewed viewing, a new experince is possible. Beautiful!

PRINCIPAL ON STAGE FOR FINALE

Retiring principal Harry Downard of Gordon Head Junior High will make a final appearance with the school band when he acts as master of ceremonies for their concert Sunday.

The concert will be held at the Cameron bandshell in Beacon Hill Park at 2:30 p.m., and will be directed by Emile Michaux.

The program will include a wide variety of band selections and popular numbers from Broadway shows interspersed with instrumental solos.

Dance Recital Set

A recital by students of the Vivian Briggs Dance Studio entitled Spotlight on Dance '69, will be presented June 19 at McPherson Playhouse.

Proceeds will be used for student scholarships.

Tickets are now on sale at the box office.

Curtain time is 8:15 p.m.

Violinists Competing

Violinists from 11 countries including Germany, France, the U.S.S.R., United States, Japan and Israel, are gathered in Montreal at the present time, competing in an international contest for fame and cash awards amounting to $23,500.

The first international violin competition sponsored by the International Institute of Music of Canada was held in 1966.

It made headlines and a world-wide reputation for the Russian, Vladimir Lancman, who captured the top prize of $10,000.

Lancman subsequently appeared with the Victoria Symphony Orchestra in a concert under the baton of Otto-Werner Mueller, who had conducted the Montreal Symphony during the two weeks of competition.

A jury of 10 presides over this year's contest, which runs through June 17.

Included are such distinguished experts as famed virtuoso Josef Szigeti; Shinichi Suzuki, renowned Japanese performer-teacher and founder of a new teaching method for the very young; Pierre Doukan, professor of violin at the Paris Conservatoire, and Canadian virtuoso Steven Staryk.

Drama Classes Set For Junior Grades

There will be drama classes for the junior graders this summer when Bastion Theatre presents creative drama classes under the Greater Victoria School Board's Adult Education Division.

Seven to 17-year-olds qualify for the classes which will take place Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays, starting July 14. The three-week, nine-session course will be held at Oak Bay Junior Secondary School.

Further information can be had from Bastion Theatre or the school board.

A play production course open to senior students only will be held from July 7 to 26, Monday through Friday, 9 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. daily.

This will take place on the third floor of the Maritime Museum. Registrations and inquiries can be made to Bastion Theatre, telephone 382-4112.

ENTERTAINMENT CALENDAR

TONIGHT AND MONDAY through Saturday, June 14, 8:30 p.m., McPherson Playhouse: RPA presents Philadelphia, Here I Come, comedy directed by Tom Kerr.

Saturday, June 14 through Saturday, June 21, 8:15 p.m., Langham Court Theatre: Victoria Theatre Guild presents the comedy-drama, The Subject Was Roses, directed by Allan Purdy.

Recital Held at St. John's

An annual event, the Student Achievement Recital sponsored by Victoria Branch, B.C. Registered Music Teachers' Association, took place recently at St. John's Memorial Hall.

STRINGS

Pat Patterson, Mrs. Bulman-Fleming, Charles Palmer, Linn Hendry and Stuart Calder were piano accompanists.

VIOLIN MAKERS HOLD CONTEST

An organization dedicated to the development of the art of violin making is planning its annual contest for violin makers which will take place this month in Vancouver.

The Violin Makers' Association of B.C. will stage its open competition in the Oakridge Auditorium, 41st Avenue and Cambie Street, June 14 at 7:30 p.m.

Violins, violas, cellos and bass viols are eligible.

Instruments must be entered at the contest place by no later than 6:30 p.m. on the day of the contest.

The instruments will be played behind a curtain for evaluation by the adjudicating panel and winners will be determined on aggregate points.

Complete rules and information regarding shipping, awards and system of judging can be obtained by writing The Violin Makers' Association of B.C., 6674 Fraser Street, Vancouver 15.

Near-Capacity Crowds Jam New National Arts Centre

OTTAWA (CP) — The problem at the new National Arts Centre isn't how to sell tickets; it's how to handle all the taxpayers who just want to look the place over.

Thursday evening the centre drew a near-capacity crowd of about 3,400 to its first full schedule of performances; Ballet in the opera house, Greek comedy in the theatre, Nazi flashbacks in the experimental studio and 17th-century chamber music in the small salon.

CAME BY DAY

But as many or more came during the day to tour the $46,000,000 building. House manager Eric Perth estimated there were 3,500 to 4,000 in 15 private groups and four public tours.

Thursday was the first day for the public tours.

Between 2,000 to 3,000 persons a day visited the building on private tours from Monday to Wednesday.

At the box office Thursday, 80 per cent of tickets for the two-week opening festival had been sold.

Student Film Festival At Toronto

A Canadian festival of student-made films has been organized in Toronto under sponsorship of the International Centre of Films for Children and Young People (UNESCO).

Five Canadian films will be selected from the festival by a panel of students for entry in the Tenth Muse International Contest for young film-makers in Amsterdam, Holland, Oct. 29 to Nov. 1.

Films entered may be 8mm or Super 8 or 16mm black and white or color, silent or sound, and must run no longer than 15 minutes.

There are three categories: Under 16 years; under 20 years, and students in teacher-training colleges, regardless of age.

Films must reach Toronto no later than June 23. Entry forms are available from Monday Morning magazine, 55 York Street, Toronto.

Youthful Musical Talent Expanding Every Year

By AUDREY JOHNSON

The range of youthful musical talent developing in this city and its quite exceptional quality, is a continual source of wonder and pleasure to the onlooker.

A number of fund-raising events and student recitals recently have reaffirmed what was strikingly apparent in the spring's music festival.

Not only is the talent great but the teaching in many instances is as good as could be found anywhere in Canada.

For the discerning the fact is evident but we also have the comment of at least one of the adjudicators whose work had taken him from coast to coast, that this is so.

This week I listened to six student organists and some really youthful brass players in recital at Christ Church Cathedral.

FIRST OF SIX

It was the first in a series of six recitals that will conclude the spring-summer semester of the Victoria Conservatory of Music.

There was not one unmusical performance; not one that failed reveal intelligence, taste and a fairly remarkable degree of technical expertise, from sparkling young trumpet duettists Juliet Proudman and Timothy Webster to a well-phrased and articulate Bach performance by organist Elizabeth Courtnall.

Susan Emery played a Mozart horn concerto movement that showed her to be a promising artist with this most difficult of instruments. Purcell's trumpet Voluntary in C had fine tone, good control and considerable fluency as performed by Lance Stevenson and Lloyd Salmi.

And while Mary Chard gave what was doubtless the most exciting and richly colored organ performance of the evening, Peter Bishop's was musicianly, clear, perceptive in registration and mature to a satisfying degree in both his Bach and contemporary pieces.

TRUMPET SOLOIST

There is an exceptional trumpet soloist evolving in Greg Russell and much artistry to be found in the work of organists Jean Taylor, Fern Chapman and Marjorie Inglis.

Next in the series will be a recital Sunday afternoon at 2:30 at McPherson Playhouse.

Vocal, violin and piano students will present the program. A featured number will be Camille Inkman's performance of Samuel Barber's Sonata for Piano.

On Wednesday at Craigdarroch Castle, Conservatory faculty members will give a concert.

The program will include the Dvorak Trio performed by Robin Wood, Jack Kessler and James Hunter; Debussy, Cello Sonata played by Hunter with Robin Wood, and a Trio Sonata by the 17th century composer, de Fesch, played by oboist Ian Franklin with Jan Menting, flute, Barry Moncur, clarinet and continuo on the piano by Wood.

Audience space is limited at Craigdarroch and those wishing at attend this concert should phone 384-1717 for reservations.

Victoria Fair Adopts New Talent

The history of Joel Miller's theatrical career since coming to Canada would trace a long thin loop on the country's map.

Slender, dark, bearded and soft-spoken, but with an air of wiry strength and purpose, Miller has just arrived in Victoria to become production manager of the theatrical aspect of Victoria Fair.

It is several years since he arrived in Vancouver from Los Angeles at the invitation of Malcolm Black who had just been appointed the Playhouse Theatre's artistic director.

Miller's experience and talents cover a wide range which includes directing as well as stage managing.

After working in Vancouver for a time he was lured east by the Stratford festival company. Last season he was assistant director to Douglas Campbell in the production of Romeo and Juliet and for the John Hirsch production of Peter Raby's adaption of The Three Musketeers.

In the meanwhile, he says, his liking for Canada, his preference for working here in the rapidly burgeoning Canadian theatre, has grown to a point where he is happy to think of himself as Canadian.

Last fall, at the end of the Stratford season, Miller came west again, this time to the newest and only truly permanent professional theatre company in western Canada—Theatre Calgary.

Theatre Calgary has grown out of the semi-pro and exuberant Mac 11 theatre group, and has drawn wisely on some of the best young upsurging talent of Stratford for its company.

Most notable was the appointment of Christopher Newton, Tyrone Guthrie Award winner and critically acclaimed actor, as artistic director.

Newton, Miller who is his assistant at Calgary, and another fine young Stratford actor, Neil Munro, have now been re-grouped for the summer in Victoria for the first professional festival venture in this city, Victoria Fair.

They come under the direction of Ralph Allen and Wandalie Henshaw of the University of Victoria theatre division, who have already within a year, given the University and the city splendid productions of Shakespeare's Measure for Measure Moliere's Tartuffe and Synge's Playboy of the Western World.

"We are hoping for a substantial link with the dynamic Theatre Calgary," says Dr. Allen. "If it comes about there will be many profitable and rewarding exchanges."

How full use is made of the talent thus available can be seen when one considers activities scheduled for Miller this summer.

The young man, who is a proficient pianist and was a budding orchestra conductor before he was deflected to the theatre, is not only production manager for Hamlet, The Merchant of Venice (opening at McPherson Playhouse July 11 and 14 respectively) and Tartuffe (opening Aug. 5).

He is directing a Phoenix Theatre program of short plays to be staged in August and, with other staff members, is involved in a training program for the apprenticed students in the company.

With all that it will be one of the busiest summers he can remember, says Joel Miller, as well as one of the most interesting.

King Studio Recital At St. Ann's

Concluding activity for the year by students of the Hilda King Studio of Music, there will be a recital Saturday at 7:30 p.m. in the auditorium of St. Ann's Academy.

Guest artists will be oboist Ian Franklin and pianist Jim Furmston. Both are one-time students of Mrs. King.

Performing in piano solo and ensemble numbers will be the following:

Famed Conductor Makes Final Bow

Performance by the Toronto Symphony Orchestra Friday night at the new National Arts Centre in Ottawa, was both a hail and a farewell.

The single concert of music by Richard Strauss, Canadian composer Harry Freedman and Tchaikowsky, was part of the two-week festival marking the Centre's opening.

But it also was the occasion of the final appearance of TSO conductor Seiji Ozawa on a Canadian podium, unless he should return one day as a guest.

Following a world tour of guest appearances next year, Ozawa will assume the post of music director and conductor of the San Francisco Symphony Orchestra late in 1970.

'War and Peace' Grand Spectacle

(Part II)
Fox Cinema
By PETER MURRAY

Napoleon's triumphant 1812 march on Moscow and disastrous retreat is one of the great dramatic events of history. To re-create this epic story on the screen and give a feeling of the elemental forces involved is the triumph of this Russian film version of War and Peace.

The spectacle of battle, of victory and defeat, can seldom have been matched in any other movie. The scope and power result in a visual masterpiece.

At the story level the film is less successful. Despite its length, there is not enough time to develop the central characters. Pierre's emotional response to the events swirling around him is moving but not entirely comprehensible.

This may be partly the result of cutting, although it is doubtful whether even the full-length original could cover much of Tolstoy's character development.

IMPRESSIVE

The second half of the film is even more impressive than the first and could be viewed by itself without too much loss of understanding. Most of the editing appears to have been done to this section in reducing the dubbed English-voice version to six hours from the original Russian nine-hour show.

This has cut the story to its essentials, a graphic version of Tolstoy's basic theme that history has a reality of its own, that events are master over men.

Dramatically this is brought about by the counterpoint of the two rival military leaders—the cold and calculating Napoleon and the bumbling but wise Kutuzov.

If Pierre is the hero of War and Peace, Napoleon is its anti-hero. Tolstoy's purpose was to show that all Napoleon's cunning and ruthlessness could not overcome the indomitable Russian spirit which he saw symbolizing the sweep of history. It was folly for Napoleon to think he could alter or affect this sweep, which has a flow of its own above individual effort.

As Prince Andrey remarked on the eve of Borodino, which was a nominal victory for Napoleon but sowed the seeds of eventual defeat, the outcome of such battles are not predicted by the number of troops or firepower involved. It is intangibles that matter.

And during the horror and carnage of the battle, it is some "mysterious force" that keeps the soldiers at their positions rather than running away.

Who performs the senseless executions during the sacking of Moscow? No individuals acting from free will could perpetrate such atrocities, Tolstoy answers. It is just the result of "orders." The world doesn't seem to have changed much.

BORODIN GROUP AT VANCOUVER

North American premiere of the Shostakovich Cycle of string quartets is to be performed in Vancouver in July by the world famed Borodin Quartet.

There will be three performances in the Queen Elizabeth Playhouse.

The concerts mark their 21st year for the sponsoring organization — Vancouver's Friends of Chamber Music.

Scheduled are Quartets numbers 1, 2 and 3 for July 4 program; numbers 4, 5, 6 and 7 for July 8, and numbers 8, 9, 10 and 11 for July 11.

The twelfth and final one in the series, completed by Shostakovich early this year and not previously given public performance, will be scheduled by the musicians.

The Borodin Quartet will be coming direct from Russia especially for the series and will return there at its conclusion.

Anti-Inflation Budget Staggers Realty Issues

By NICK FERRIS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Lack of any major favorable news combined with anti-inflationary proposals in the federal budget sent Canadian stock markets to their third consecutive weekly loss this week.

Volume picked up with almost 7,000,000 shares trading daily.

The budget, brought down Tuesday night, was aimed specifically at reducing inflationary pressures in the short term through greater exposure of domestic producers to foreign competition and a deferral of capital cost allowances on new commercial buildings in Ontario, Alberta and British Columbia where inflationary pressures are strongest.

Real estate issues were naturally hit hardest by the latter budget proposal.

The group began nosediving Monday before the budget was released, then continued to fall after it was brought down, but levelled off Friday unchanged.

OILS LOSE MAGIC TOUCH

After riding high for seven successive weeks on speculation about oil drillings in Alaska and the Canadian Arctic, western oils took a severe beating this week.

One observer said investors "may be beginning to realize that no amount of rumors would be able to keep stocks at such high levels for any length of time."

Golds followed European bullion prices down this week on rumors that South Africa may be selling some of its bullion reserves on the free market.

On index at Toronto, industrials were down 4.20 to 193.03, golds 9.23 to 243.73, base metals 1.05 to 118.97 and western oils 17.53 to 290.84. Volume was 34,845,000 shares compared with 29,283,000 last week. Losses outnumbered gains 513 to 334.

On the Canadian and Montreal exchanges, the composite index was down 1.99 to 191.68. Combined volume was 9,305,000 shares compared with 6,658,000 last week. Losses outnumbered gains 198 to 161.

New York Dropped By Credit Squeeze

NEW YORK (WP) — Steadily tightening credit conditions and the threat of more emphatic action yet to come pushed stock market prices lower this week. In the absence of any counteracting encouragement from the Vietnam area, prices moved lower virtually throughout the five-day period.

On Friday, several banks here raised their interest charges on loans to brokers. The one-point hike in the rate, which is usually the same as the prime lending rate, was taken as the strongest indication so far that a hike in the prime could be coming soon.

At week's end, the Dow Jones industrial average was down 12.79 points and stood at 924.77. The decline cracked the 930 technical support area outlined by chartists and started the point-and-figure fraternity looking is the direction of 900-910 in the Dow.

Standard and Poor's 500-stock composite was down 1.34 to 102.12. The New York Stock Exchange index lost .79 to 58.08.

Volume for the week rose to 56.1 million shares from the 42.73 million traded a week earlier, when the market was limited to four days because of the Memorial Day break.

There were 1,152 losers in the week and 450 gainers, compared with 1,094 down and 456 up a week earlier. There were 79 new 1969 highs set in the week, up from 71 in the previous period, and 364 new lows, up from 235.

Government moves to dampen inflation held centre stage throughout the week. A boost in the prime lending rate—the charge banks make to their biggest and best customers—is considered nearly a certainty now, with the feeling reinforced by Thursday's increase in the prime rate in Canada, to 7¾ per cent from 7½ per cent. The prime rate in the U.S. is now 7½ per cent.

Shipyard Workers' Plight Hit

MONTREAL (UPI) — A union spokesman has denounced what he termed the "scandalous" inertia of government in dealing with the plight of Quebec shipyard workers.

Maurice Langevin, of the Confederation of National Trade Unions (CNTU), made his comments as he addressed employees of Canadian Vickers' Montreal yards, due to be closed later this month.

The meeting marked the anniversary of the closing down last year of the George T. Davie shipyards in Lauzon, near Quebec City, which cost nearly 1,000 workers their jobs.

Vickers, which also operated the George T. Davie yard, announced the shutdown of its Montreal shipbuilding operation last month, a move which will put about 900 men out of work.

Maurice Roy, president of George T. Davie local of the Federation of Metal, Mine and Chemical Products Workers, a CNTU affiliate, said only about half of the 914 men have managed to find other jobs since the yard was closed.

Of these, only five percent department for its recycling program.

Britain Promised $1 Billion To Help Shore Up Ailing Pound

PARIS (WP) — Britain Friday won a pledge from its most powerful friends for support on a loan to shore up the ailing pound.

Final approval of the new standby credits, reportedly on the order of $1 billion is expected at a meeting of the executive board of the International Monetary Fund (IMF) in Washington later this month which will consider an initial drawing.

The group of 10—the non-Communist world's largest trading nations—agreed to support the IMF in refinancing existing British standby credits.

The leader of the British delegation told reporters after the all-day meeting that "we got what we wanted to get."

No details were disclosed about the actual breakdown of support from the group of 10 worked out under their general arrangement to borrow provisions.

Also under debate at the meeting was the controversial issue of activating Special Drawing Rights (SDS), nicknamd "paper gold." The SDRS are a form of new international money which central bankers would use alongside gold and normal foreign currencies to settle inter-government debts.

A conference source reported "great differences" at the meeting about the amounts of SDRS to be pledged and the date of their activation. The U.S. has been reported pressing for larger and quicker activation than some more conservative European governments desire.

Although the U.S. would like to see the SDRS launched at the annual IMF meeting in Washington in September, sources indicated that prospects of an improved American trade balance might be necessary to convince the more skeptical Europeans.

'Shake Sloppy Past' Ad Industry Urged

CALGARY (CP) — Advertisers and advertising agencies must communicate more with the consuming public because the word selling "has become a dirty and ugly word in our society," a former company president said.

Robin Hall of Toronto, former president of Bristol-Myers Co. of Canada Ltd., said the relateionship between advertising agencies and their clients has one meaning and purpose and that purpose is selling.

If advertisers and advertising agencies are to avoid extinction, he told the Calgary Chamber of Commerce advertising and sales bureau, they must defend their baisc right to sell.

Hall said the advertising industry is the focal point of public discontent with business and commerce, at least partially because of it's inability to "shake off some of its sloppy past."

The industry has been noted in the past for "having more than its share of fast-talking, unqualified, esthetically barren, ethically deplete people," he said.

Securities Commission, Bigger Staff Relocate

By G. S. KENT
Business Editor

The stock market boom brought on by development of natural and financial resources in B.C. has at last led to an expanded securities commission staff and new office accommodation for them in downtown Victoria.

About mid-summer superintendent William Irwin, his deputy Roger Walker, inspectors, accountants and clerks will move from the law courts to the third floor of the Bank of B.C. building at 750 Fort.

It will be the first complete home for the commission and first separation from other branches of the attorney-general's department. But it will have the company of one other provincial government agency, the vital statistics branch which will occupy the second floor and mezzanine of the bank building.

The securities commission has operated in confined quarters, understaffed for a number of years. The financial community has urged expansion consistently as a safeguard against the sort of irregularity that can lead to scandals, fraud and corporate collapse.

The B.C. Securities Commission, with a superintendent and 17 employees, is responsible for surveillance of the underwriting, optioning, drawing of prospectuses, licensing of brokers and salesmen and many associated responsibilities for virtually the entire financial community of this province.

It works closely in the policing of securities with Vancouver Stock Exchange, where the value of stock trading puts B.C. second only to Toronto. Yet in Ontario, securities commission staff is about six times the size.

Investment men have credited Irwin's organization with achievements far beyond their physical resources.

However, a staff of 17 of whom only four are aduit accountants and four are inspectors (eight are clerical only) can do just so much, particularly when something overwhelming—like the Commonwealth affair—comes along.

The Commonwealth collapse probably had much to do with the order in council last month authorizing Irwin to add nine persons to his staff, including two solicitors, two auditor-accountants and an inspector, along with three clerk-stenographers.

They will ad $70,656 to the commission's operating expenses, which in the year ended March 31 was $114,094 in salaries and $11,300 in office expenses. Pretty cheap at the price.

Attorney-General Leslie Peterson recalls that since the securities commission was established in 1962, with four persons on staff, there has been substantial economic growth in the province.

"As more and more industrial interests flow into the province it is essential that we keep pace with this growth and provide the safeguards necessary to protect the investing public."

The B.C. Securities Commission handles a volume of issues second to Ontario and Peterson finds "it is obvious that Vancouver is rapidly becoming one of the major financial centres of the world."

The plans for expansion appear magnificent beside the Law Courts layout, and will provide about four times the space.

There will be private offices for all the senior staff and provision for the first time for an administrative officer. A filing room will be separate from the private and general office area, rather than squeezed among the desks and counters.

There will be a board room and interview rooms, a comfortable reception area, adjoining washrooms and other features now lacking.

In all, the branch will occupy more than 6,000 square feet, the entire top floor of the bank building.

Aside from the increased capacity and hopefully greater speed combined with efficiency in the clearing of securities, relocation of the commission office will probably make for greater awareness of its work in the public interest.

For the first time the superintendent and staff will be a part of the financial community, in a physical sense, rather than part of the government precinct.

Indeed, they could hardly be closer with a bank and an investment dealer sharing the ground floor of their new building.

In addition it is intended that the commission publish more information of interest to the public and investment circles, lending weight to its own injunction: "Before you invest, investigate."

Gulf Decides in Fall On Wollaston Project

REGINA (CP) — The president of Gulf Minerals Resources Company said today a decision will be made this fall on whether to put a uranium mine and mill in the Wollaston Lake region of northeastern Saskatchewan.

Edward B. Walker of Denver, at a joint news conference with Premier Ross Thatcher, said, "I think we'll have enough holes drilled there to make a decision by the fall."

"If it were not such a remote area, we would certainly have a mine," said Walker.

The region of activity is about 300 miles northeast of Prince Albert, in the province's northeast corner, and is accessible only by air.

Premier Thatcher said that if the company does decide to put in a mine, the provincial government will undertake a crash program to build a road connecting Wollaston Lake with La Ronge 140 miles north of Prince Albert.

In a press release, Gulf Oil Corporation said that Gulf Minerals Company, a wholly-owned subsidiary, and Gulf Canada Ltd., an affiliate, have analysed samples from the first three test holes in the region.

It said ore grade mineralization was found over the length of about 1,000 feet, and at intervals of 30 to 236 feet. The average ore grade in the mineralized zones ranged from 0.46 per cent to 0.18 per cent uranium oxide.

Walker said:

"We have had no significant indications of minerals other than uranium."

He said the uranium body appears to run in a northeast to southwest direction. He declined to say how many test holes have been sunk.

Asked about the possible future developments, Walker said:

"I think it would take three or four years to put a mine and mill in there. Your logistics up there are a tremendous problem."

Fisheries Report Seeks Fraser Aid

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — More money will have to be made available for early expansion of artificial spawning grounds and incubation channels in the Fraser River system, the International Pacific Salmon Fisheries Commission said.

The commission urged the Canadian and U.S. governments to increase its budget which so far has been used for research and management.

"Time is running out for extending the sockeye populations to utilize unused rearing areas and to protect spawning grounds which are becoming unstable."

Bell Clangs On 'Enigma'

OTTAWA (CP) — Every time a telephone subscriber calls information rather than look up the number in the phone book, it indirectly boosts the price of service, a Bell Canada executive said Friday.

Claude Duhamel, vice-president of Bell's operations staff, told the Canadian transport commission this problem has been a "real enigma" to the company in its attempt to cut its overhead costs.

Bell was doing a number of things to try to reduce this practice but despite this, "70 per cent of the requests are for mumbers already listed in the directory."

Duhamel is testifying before the commission as part of a Bell application to boost its rates for subscribers in Quebec, Ontario, Labrador and the Northwest Territories.

Car Buyers Turn To Smaller and Cheaper Lines

DETROIT (AP) — Sales figures indicate the North American automobile buyer may be swining back to the smaller, lower priced lines.

With taxes and the cost of living rising, some executives within the industry view sales for the month of May as indicative of a trend away from cars in the intermediate price field.

While sales for the industry as a whole in the U.S. market were off about two per cent from May, 1968, sales of both foreign and domestic compacts were up.

Most bottom-of-the-line cars of U.S. auto-makers also are ahead for the first five months of 1969, compared with the same span of record-setting 1968.

Eight Great for Mets; One Will Do for Expos

Montreal Streak Extended; New York Sets Club Record

By The Associated Press

The Expos, like New York Mets, might have to wait eight years before winning eight games in a row, but right now Montreal must be asking what it takes to win one straight.

The Expos failed to come up with the correct answer again Friday night when they dropped a 4-2 decision to Los Angeles Dodgers, their 19th straight defeat.

Muddling through their first year of existence as one of the four latest expansion teams, Montreal already has reached the Mets' expansion record of 17 consecutive losses and now are closing in on the modern record of 23 set by Philadelphia in 1961.

The Mets, in contrast, are setting an example for perserverance for all expansion clubs. After suffering through years of ineptitude as one of the first expansion teams, the Mets have suddenly become a team to be envied, rolling by the new San Diego team 5-3 for a club record of eight consecutive victories.

Chicago Cubs ran their winning streak to seven by clubbing Cincinnati Reds 14-8 in a day game while San Francisco Giants handed Philadelphia Phillies their sixth straight loss, 4-0.

In other games, Atlanta Braves trimmed Pittsburgh Pirates 3-1 and St. Louis Cardinals beat Houston Astros 6-3.

SAW END COMING

The Expos could see the end in sight after 5½ innings as Dan McGinn, making his first start after 23 relief appearances, held a 2-1 lead on a run-scoring single by Maury Wills, who rejoined the club after a brief retirement, and a sacrifice fly by Mack Jones in the fifth.

But in the sixth, John Miller, who entered the lineup in the first inning when Willie Davis was hit in the face by a pitch, singled and Wes Parker blasted his fifth homer.

The Dodgers added an unearned run later and Don Sutton, with ninth-inning relief from Jim Brewer, sent the Expos down to defeat again.

FIND ANSWERS

The Mets, on the other hand, after eight years of losing, have come up with all the answers as they ended San Diego's six-game winning streak. Art Shamsky was one of them, coming up as a pinch hitter in the eighth inning and singling in the tie-breaking run.

Tommie Agee doubled home another run in the ninth and rookie Gary Gentry, giving only five hits before needing ninth-inning relief, got the victory. The only runs off him were Ed Spiezio's homer and a two-run error by Ed Kranepool, who later doubled in the tying run in a two-run Mets' sixth.

PILOTS DEFEATED

Dave McNally, Baltimore's unbeaten pitching ace, beat Seattle Pilots 5-1 Friday night with a four-hitter for his eighth victory of the season—and first complete game in three weeks—as the Orioles continued to soar in the American League Eastern Division.

Meanwhile, Barry Moore and Darold Knowles yielded two hits apiece and combined to pitch Washington Senators to a 1-0 victory over Minnesota Twins, Western Division leaders. The win moved the surprising Senators back to the .500 mark for the first time in two weeks.

In other AL action, Oakland Athletics toppled Detroit Tigers 5-3; Boston Red Sox edged Kansas City Royals 4-2 in 11 innings; Cleveland Indians whipped California Angels 8-3 and New York Yankees nipped Chicago White Sox 3-2.

ROBINSON EJECTED

McNally breezed past the Pilots in his best effort since May 15, when he blanked Minnesota 5-0 on a one-hitter. The 26-year-old southpaw failed to finish his next four starts, picking up one victory along the way despite his spotty performances.

Frank Robinson, who hit his 14th homer before being ejected for disputing a called strike, and Paul Blair knocked in two runs each for the Orioles, who have won four in a row and 16 of their last 19 for a 4½-game bulge over second-place Boston.

Puck Seals Drop Barons for Reds

OAKLAND (AP) — Oakland Seals of the National Hockey League have signed a working agreement with Providence Reds of the American League.

The arrangement is for one year, but vice-president Bill Torrey said the Seals are hopeful of a long-term relationship.

The Seals' working agreement with Cleveland Barons, also of the AHL, has been terminated.

Shawnigan Is Second As Champs Take Lead

Powerful performances by their girls' squad enabled athletes from defending-champion Mount Douglas to take an early lead Friday after opening-day action in the annual Vancouver Island track and field championships.

For Shawnigan Lake, it was an all-male effort that had the Lakers holding second place in team totals when the two-day meet resumed today at Centennial Stadium.

Miss Jack added half-a-yard to the previous long jump record with a flying leap of 18 feet, 6½ inches.

TWO-MILE RECORD

The all-boys' school, Shawnigan, is second in the aggregate standings with 30 points. Captain Alan McAllister led the pace with a record-smashing run of 9:59.0 minutes in the two-mile event.

Ray Thornber of third-place Claremont tacked 10 inches on the boys' long jump record with a 22-foot, four-inch leap.

Fourth-place Nanaimo's Ed Shook chalked up another record by capturing the 1,500-metre steeplechase, a new event, in 4:43.5 minutes.

The top two public school finalists will enter the B.C. meet in Vancouver next weekend. Private school competitors qualified earlier in their own meet.

Several snappy performances were turned in during the heats as Anne Langdale (100-yards), Penny May (hurdles) and Darryl Hooker (hurdles) of Mount Douglas unofficially cracked records.

The meet was scheduled to conclude today with presentations at approximately 4:30.

TWO RACE TRACKS GET INTO SOUP

CHERRY HILL, N.J. (AP) — Garden State Park and Hialeah, two of the United States' leading thoroughbred tracks, were sold Friday by Eugene Mori in a $56,000,000 package deal to the Campbell Soup Co. of Camden, N.J.

A Garden State spokesman said Garden State, in turn, was sold by the soup company to Man O'War Racing Association of Philadelphia. Man O' War announced it would operate the track for the benefit of hospitals in the Philadelphia and Camden areas.

All stock in Man O' War is owned by the trustees of an irrevocable charitable trust known as the Hospital Benefit Trust. Its beneficiaries are non-profit hospitals.

There was no indication of what Campbell Soup intends to do with Hialeah Park. Located in the Miami area, Hialeah caters to the east Florida vacation trade.

Retain Regulations . . . Just Eliminate Events

WARSAW (AP) — Avery Brundage, president of the International Olympic Committee, branded as "completely ignorant" people who claim there are no more amateurs and that all competitors must be paid.

In his remarks at the opening session of the 68th IOC meeting, Brundage, however, admitted that the IOC "was trying to do the impossible" by adhering to strict eligibility rules.

"It's about time to recognize that some sports and events cannot be kept amateur at international levels," the 82-year-old Chicagoan said. "In any event there is no reason why all sports should be on the Olympic program.

"The answer is not to change the regulations but to eliminate the sports and events that no longer belong on the Olympic program. This will solve most of the problems."

The subject of "shamateurism," especially in such sports as alpine skiing, is near the top of the agenda for the IOC meeting which begins working sessions today.

Wings Finish Player Deal

DETROIT (AP) — Detroit Red Wings of the National Hockey League Friday announced completion of a four-player trade with Montreal Canadiens.

The Wings will receive forward Garry Monahan, 22, and defenceman Doug Piper, 24, in exchange for centre Pete Mahovlich and defenceman Bart Crashley.

Colt League Games

Teams from the Victoria Colt League are playing a pair of exhibition games this weekend against West Vancouver Legion at Topaz Park.

Facing Smith Cedar this afternoon, the mainland club will clash at 10 Sunday morning with Evening Optimists.

Rocks Taking Shot At Tie With Carls

Victoria Shamrocks have hardly overpowered their rivals in Western Lacrosse Association battles so far this season.

However, if it is any consolation for the Shamrocks, neither have Vancouver Carlings.

Troubled by letdowns that seem to last for one period, the Rocks are without a victory after five starts. Carls have gone to the post five times and have managed one triumph.

That means that the Irish can climb into a tie with Vancouver for third place when the two clubs tangle tonight at Memorial Arena, starting at 8:30.

Shamrocks could display increased fire power tonight with the return of Charlie Hardy, a regular goal-getter with the club last year. The Nanaimo athlete played only in the opening game this season and scored two goals during a loss to Coquitlam.

RANJIT LEADS ROCKS

Scoring figures mirror the troubles of the trailing squads. Only four Victoria snipers are included in the top 19 marksmen in the circuit's individual scoring race while Vancouver show up with only two—Denis Nagy and Gordie Frederickson.

Ranjit Dillon leads Victoria's parade with 14 points in four games. Nirmal Dillon (12), Al MacLean (11) and rookie Dennis Somner (10) are the only other Rocks to show with 10 or more points.

Marg Stymies Encore Hopes

PARIS (AP) — Margaret Court, Australian tennis star, Friday ended Nancy Richey's hopes of winning the French women's title for the second straight year.

Mrs. Court, after trailing the American 2-5 in the final set, won her semi-final 6-3, 4-6, 7-5.

In the final Sunday she will meet Ann Jones of Britain for first prize of $2,000. Mrs. Jones brushed aside another Australian, Lesley Bowrey, 6-1, 6-2.

Chile Captures Davis Zone Lead

LAST TRIPLE-CROWN WINNER . . . . . . 24 YEARS OLD

Leisurely Stroll for Citation

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP)—At 24, Citation leads the life of leisure. He strolls in a paddock at Calumet Farm for about six hours, returns to his barn early in the afternoon for grooming and feed, and is retired for the day.

Four years past the normal insurable age, the muscular bay horse isn't used much as a sire anymore. This year, he was booked to only two mares.

But life wasn't always so tranquil in 1948 for the last winner of the famed triple crown for three-year-olds.

At Churchill Downs Citation won the Kentucky Derby in 2:05 2-5. Two weeks later, he took the Preakness at Baltimore by 5½ lengths.

Then, after three weeks' rest, Citation won the Belmont Stakes in 2:28 1-5, just 3-5ths off the track record.

Three years later, Citation came home to enter the stud at the posh Calumet farm owned by Mrs. Gene Markey.

Citation has sired more than 250 foals that have won more than 1,000 races and more than $3,000,000.

He fathered Fabius, who won the Preakness, was second in the Kentucky Derby and third in the Belmont; Silver Spoon, the filly who won the Santa Anita Derby, and Get Around, winner of the Withers.

Only seven before Citation—and none since—had won the triple crown.

Canadian-owned Majestic Prince had a shot today at becoming the ninth wearer of the crown.

THE AVERAGE WEEK-END GOLFER HAS A TENDENCY TO FALL BACK ON THE SHOT
IN MANY CASES, THIS IS CAUSED BY STARTING THE TAKEAWAY FROM A "DEAD" POSITION—WITHOUT ANY WAGGLE OR FORWARD PRESS
ANY HIGH HANDICAP PLAYER WHO CONTINUALLY FALLS BACK ON THE SHOT SHOULD TRY INITIATING THE TAKEAWAY WITH A FORWARD HIP PRESS WHICH WILL START UP A ROCKING MOTION
ROCK
THE BODYWEIGHT ROCKS FORWARD ON TO THE LEFT FOOT, THEN BACK ON TO THE RIGHT FOOT WITH A BIG TURN OR PIVOT. FROM THERE, THE WEIGHT CAN TRANSFER FORWARD AGAIN, SO THAT IT IS ALL ON THE LEFT FOOT AT IMPACT!

Gay Happier on Greens Since Viewing Old Film

MIDLOTHIAN, Ill. (AP) — Gay Brewer, who hasn't won a regular tour victory since the 1967 Masters, says a new-found putting touch is responsible for his lead going into today's third round of the $130,000 Western open golf tournament.

"I've been in a kind of a slump for a year and a half," Brewer said after shooting a second-round 67 Friday for 136 and a one-stroke lead over Frank Beard, Dick Rhyan and Rocky Thompson.

"I really hadn't been playing that badly," he said. "But it was my play around the greens, my putting.

"Then I was watching some home movies of myself and I discovered what I was doing wrong on my putting.

"I was moving my head with the stroke. I corrected it just this week. Now I'm putting much better."

And the home movie he watched? "The 1967 Masters."

Brewer, 37, has been in a decline since the Masters. He has won two Alcan Golfer-of-the-Year tournaments, but they don't count as regular tour events. On the tour, he hasn't finished higher than fifth in 18 months.

SINKS A 12 FOOTER

Friday, he knocked in a six-footer for a birdie on the fourth hole, canned a 15-footer on No. 7, pitched to within four feet and made the putt on the 10th and nailed 12- and seven-foot birdie putts on Nos. 12 and 16.

Beard, who opened with a 66, had to settle for a par 71 and was tied at 137 with Rhyan and Thompson, each with a 70. Ken Still had a 66 for a 138 and was alone at that figure.

A group of eight is locked at 139, including New Zealand's Bob Charles, who had a second-round 68.

Bob Lunn matched the course record with a six-under-par 65 for 140 and was tied at that figure with five others, including South African Gary Player who had a second-round 72 and Lee Trevino, 68.

Wayne Vollmer was the only one of three Canadians to make the cut of 146 for the final two rounds of the 72-hole tournament. He shot a 74 for a two-round total of 146.

CONTENDER for title when city Amateur tournament is concluded Sunday at Victoria Golf Club will be junior Carl Schwantje, who is two strokes off leading pace set by Colwood's Laurie Kerr in first 34 holes. Carl will be on home course for Sunday's final 18-hole round, which begins at 9 a.m. Schwantje, Kerr and Bob Hunt will be in final threesome, starting at 10:56.

Grid Gabfest Comes to End

WINNIPEG (CP) — Canadian Football League executives scrimmaged this week with television, United States clubs luring of players, and a precedent for Canada's football classic, the Grey Cup, the topics of discussion.

The executives wrapped up a week of talk with their semi-annual meeting Friday.

CFL commissioner Jake Gaudaur announced that Canadian football has expressed "very deep concern" to Pete Rozelle, professional football commissioner in the U.S., over player-luring in Canada.

"What we are concerned with is the affluent U.S. club coming up and waving money and inducing a player to play out his option," Gaudaur said.

He wouldn't term the practice raiding, but ventured "we feel it may be illegal to induce a player to break or terminate his contract."

Another threat, Gaudaur said, was that of cable television breaking through blackout zones to rob games of stadium fans.

But Gaudaur added that television had its usefullness—$1,009,000 paid by the Canadian Television Network for 1969 television rights.

The threat from cable television, Gaudaur said in a "very substantial report" to the CFL executives, "will kill us."

"If we can't protect our blackout areas, the professional game as we know it today will not survive," he said.

When the CFL sells television rights, it insists on a blackout around the game city. Cable television, however, has been picking the signal out of the air from transmitters outside the blackout areas and piping it back in, without payment to the originating television company or to football.

The CFL executives also announced that Hamilton, Grey Cup-less since 1935, will stage the 1972 football classic after Toronto and Vancouver have the limelights in 1970 and 1971 respectively.

Announcing the host cities more than one year in advance was a new practice for the CFL—just as new as this year's game being played on a Sunday. The 1969 Grey Cup will be played in Montreal Nov. 2.

DOROTHY DEGIROLAMO

Dorothy Finally Takes City Distaff Tee Title

Dorothy DeGirolamo is planning to take a shot at her fourth provincial women's crown next year and that could be bad news for many of B.C.'s top distaff divoters.

Rated one of the finest female swingers ever developed in this country, Dorothy was runner-up to Marlene Stewart in the Canadian closed tournament in Dartmouth, N.S., in 1954 and was selected to the national women's team.

She has also captured the provincial crown three times although making only occasional competitive appearances for several years while occupied with raising a family.

One of the local titles to excape Mrs. DeGirolamo was the city championship and Dorothy took care of that bit of unfinished business Friday at Glen Meadows.

Runner-up to five-time champion Shirley Naysmith in 1960, when she made her last previous bid for the city title, the sturdy Gorge Vale swinger collected the crown as she defeated three-time winner Joan Lawson of Uplands, 6 and 5 in the final round.

Medallist in this year's tourney, Dorothy was approximately three over par for the 13 holes she needed to nail down the victory on the rugged Meadaws course.

WON FOUR IN ROW

One down after the second hole, Dorothy won the next two to go ahead. After halving the fifth and sixth, she just about wrapped up the victory by winning the next four holes and the match ended on the 13th when her rival mishit her second putt.

"I was feeling good on all but a few shots," commented Dorothy after receiving the championship trophy. "I don't know why, but I putted well all week. It must have been the funny greens."

Today, the new champion said she expected to have more time available for golf in the next year and is planning to enter the 1970 provincial tourney, which will be held at her home Gorge course.

She appeared to be hitting the ball just about as far and just as straight as ever in the final and if Dorothy goes back to a busy practice schedule on the fairways, it could mean big trouble for the Mainland golfers who have dominated the B.C. event in recent years.

FLIGHT RESULTS

Lil Thirlwell of Uplands won the first flight final, 6 and 5, over Margaret Fry of Gorge Vale and Phyllis Mearnes of Victoria took the second on the first extra hole of a playoff with Elsie Saunders of Gorge Vale.

Claudia Morrow of Victoria won the third flight, 5 and 3, over Anne Thomson of Royal Colwood and Lee Steers of the host club took the fourth flight, 7 and 6, over Mary Cleland of Gorge Vale.

Vicettes Tackle Vancouver Squad

Starting bell for the Phones and Vicettes will ring at 2:30 and 4:30.

Mitchell Trophy Test for Bowlers

Mixed triples competition for the Art Mitchell trophy will open Monday at 7 p.m. on the greens of Lake Hill and Oak Bay lawn bowling clubs.

First two sections will compete at Oak Bay on Monday and at Lake Hill on Tuesday and Wednesday. Two other sections will start off at Lake Hill on Monday, move to Oak Bay on Tuesday and return to Lake Hill on Thursday.

Draw:

SECTION I—L. Nichols (V); W. Jobson (OB); W. Cruikshank (B); P. Middleton (LH); J. Green (OB); H. Renfrew (B).
SECTION II—H. Tapp (V); F. Brown (CP); J. McGregor (VW); G. Hamilton (V); G. Dean (B); C. Atkins (OB).
SECTION III — T. Linders (LH); C. Fleck (B); W. White (OB); T. Owen (V); D. Boyle (VW); F. Turner (CP).

Field Day Scheduled At Cedar Hill Sunday

11:28—Warner, Brooker, Rose, Johnston.

Two City Squads Aiming at Games

Two Victoria senior men's softball teams have their eyes on a trip to Halifax and the Canadian Summer Games.

Molsons and Bate Construction, entries in the Major Men's League at Central Park, will compete in the provincial tournament at Vancouver June 20-22. Winners of the series will represent B.C. in the Summer Games.

"With the additions they are making," said Major League president John Oster, "I feel both clubs stand a good chance of making it to Halifax."

The power-packed Bate crew, coached by Lou McCorkall, will recruit Roy St. Denis from Langford. Bates lead the five-team Central Park circuit with 11 victories in 12 starts.

HUSTON ACQUIRED

Bate's biggest title boost, however, was the recent addition of pitcher Gordie Huston as a team regular. The six-foot-eight, 327-pounder is returning to Victoria after living in Prince George for the past few years.

Second-place Molsons have been strengthened by adding pitcher Mike Rye, infielder Tom Sloan and catcher Ralph Branting, all from the Red Lion team.

Oak Bay Bowlers Repeat Triumph

John Green's threesome from Oak Bay Lawn Bowling Club retained possession of the Corby-Wiser Trophy by downing the Victoria West trio of Ernie Stott 19-7 Friday in the final of the men's triples competition.

Bryon Lund and Bill Jobson were back with Green for their second straight triumph. Supporting Stott in the final on their home greens were Claude Dolstra and Eric Elwell.

Three Stocker Pilots Taking Shot at No. 3

Who's going to be the first stock-car pilot to make it three main-event victories this season at Western Speedway?

The answer could be there for all to see at the Millstream Road oval tonight when the men who steer stockers share the racing spotlight with leadfoots who guide modified machines.

Winners of two stock-car mains and shooting for a third tonight will be point-leader Mel Marshall, Bill Price and Mike Armstrong.

Men to beat in the modified events could be brothers Roy and Albert Smith, perhaps the two fastest farmers in the Pacific Northwest.

Taking runs at the Smith boys will be Victorians Bill Powell, Pete Beaudry, Dave Ferris and Fred Best, and drivers from Nanaimo and Vancouver.

Time trials tonight start at 7, racing at 7:45.

Distaff Contest

Royal Colwood Golf and Country Club will be the site Monday of a women's medal competition for players with handicaps of 15 or under.

Starting times:

9:37—D. DeGirolamo, M. Green, M. Price.
9:44—J. Lawson, E. Saunders, P. Mearns.
9:51—M. Bliss, M. Todd, P. Coxworth.
10:05—G. Pumphrey, F. Chapman.

Takeovers Urged to Recover Power of Military Spending

By FRANK C. PORTER
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — John Kenneth Galbraith has suggested that concentrated defence industries be nationalized as he urged Congress and the public to recapture the power over military spending that he said has been lost to the Pentagon and its suppliers.

The Harvard professor and former U.S. ambassador to India said Defence Secretary Melvin R. Laird uses fear to get the military what it wants and Undersecretary David M. Packard uses the pretext of secrecy to discount criticism.

The danger to American democracy lies not in the Soviet Union or China, Galbraith told a Joint Economic Subcommittee: "It is from the starvation of our public services, particularly in our big cities, here at home."

Former budget director Charles L. Schultze provided a variant on Galbraith's theme when he said, under questioning, that only an aroused public opinion can strengthen the president's hand in curbing military spending.

PERMISSIVE PEOPLE

He differed with Galbraith, however, in absolving the so-called military-industrial complex of major blame for large military budgets. Instead, Schultze attributed them to the permissiveness of an American people "pretty much willing to buy anything carrying the label 'needed for national security'."

But "in the last six to eight months there has been a major change in the country," he observed.

Schultze offered a "highly tentative" projection of a 20-billion dollar increase in annual non-Vietnam defence spending over the next five years, wiping out almost all the expected saving from a ceasefire in Southeast Asia.

A third of this increase would come in the next fiscal year according to the 1970 defence budget, he said. He pointed out that the projection doesn't take into account a continuation of the present rate of inflation, more than modest cost escalation in defence items, the adoption of large new weapons systems or a further round of strategic arms escalation.

INCREASE IN REVENUES

These contingencies could eat further into a net "fiscal dividend" of 35 billion dollars available for new public porgrams or tax cuts, Schultze said. This figure was derived by subtracting the rise in non-Vietnam military spending and built-in growth in civilian expenditures from a gross increase in anpaul revenues of 70 billion dollars over the next five years.

Schultze appeared to astonish Subcommittee Chairman William Proxmire (D—Wis.) when he conceded that budget officials in the Johnson administration took a hard look at the cost effectiveness of weapons systems but didn't question the need for such systems.

In the case of the already-approved Continental Air-Defence System (AWACS) with "look-down" radar, for example, "it's about the best you could do," Schutze said. "What, quite frankly, we didn't look at was whether we actually needed a defence system of this magnitude at all."

"Why didn't you look at it?" Proxmire asked.

"I don't know," Schultze replied. "At that time, nobody was asking these questions."

FLEXIBLE LANGUAGE

In describing big defence contractors such as General Dynamics, Lockheed and North American-Rockwell as extensions of the military bureaucracy, Galbraith said "only the remarkable flexibility of the English language allows us to call it private enterprise." And yet they are largely exempt from the political and other constraints of the bureaucracy, he said.

Hence it would not be an assualt on private enterprise to nationalize any firm that does over 75 per cent of its business with the defence department over a five-year period. Galbraith said. "Perhaps to press this reform now would direct energies from more needed tasks," he explained. "Let us, however, put it on the agenda."

'FIREBALL' INSIDE PROTONS, NEUTRONS?

CAMPINAS, Brazil (AP) — A Brazilian and Japanese scientist declared Thursday they have made a startling new discovery — and they've started a controversy among Brazilian physicists.

Prof. Cesar Lattes and Dr. Shoichi Fujimoto say they have discovered a new state of distinctly active matter within the protons and neutrons which form the nucleus of an atom. It now is generally believed that protons and neutrons are the most elementary particles in existence.

They call their discovery "fireball."

Asked about a practical application for "fireball," Lattes said:

"If the Brazilian Atomic Energy Commission wants, nuclear energy may be used within two years in Brazil — produced by Brazilians."

Illegitimacy Up In Okanagan

KELOWNA (CP) — Illegitimacy in the Okanagan area jumped 76 per cent during January, February and March, over the same period a year ago, the South Okanagan board of health said Thursday in its quarterly report. There were 25 illegitimate children in the first quarter of 1968 and 44 this year. Cases of venereal disease increased by one to 14 while deaths due to cancer dropped 23 per cent. Infectious diseases dropped more than two-thirds, to 102 this year from 372 in the first quarter of last year.

Exploit Student Revolution, Scientist Tells Communists

MOSCOW (Reuters) — Pyotr Kapitsa, a Russian scientist who this week urged Soviet ideologists to turn their attention to the West's revolutionary student movement to promote communism, has been honored by both Russia and the West as a scientist of extraordinary talent.

Kapitsa, credited with producing Russia's hydrogen bomb, was once bitterly anti-Communist—his first wife and child died in the post-Bolshevik revolution famine in 1919—but he later used for the benefit of the Kremlin knowledge gained during years of study in Britain.

This week, the physicist reputed to be largely responsible for Russia's early lead in the space race and behind its development of atomic energy, sounded off on politics, a rare, if not first, appearance for him in that field.

He told the presidium of the Academy of Sciences that Trotskyites and followers of Herbert Marcuse are winning the struggle for leadership of the student movement by default, and that Russian ideologists have no influence on it.

In another frank admission which contrasted strongly with the normal Soviet propaganda line, Kapitsa said the left-wing upsurge among Western youth is not a protest against material conditions in their countries.

CAME FROM WITHIN

The movement has an ideological base and is motivated by discontent at the direction society is taking together with a rejection of its values, he said. It has arisen without any outside influence.

Kapitsa was born June 26, 1894, in Kronshtadt, Russia, son of an engineering general in the Czarist army. He went to the local high school, then to Petrograd (now Leningrad) Polytechnical Institute.

He stayed in Russia through the revolution and its aftermath, before moving to England in 1921 to study under Sir Ernest Rutherford (later Lord Rutherford), "the father of the atom bomb," who died in 1937.

Kapitsa proved a brilliant researcher and quickly won honors. His recreation was—and still is—chess.

His first field was the precise measurement of magnetic forces, and after only two years he was given a fellowship. In 1923, he was made assistant director of magnetic research at the Cavandish Laboratory, and in 1925 was made a fellow of Trinity College.

PROBABLY A GENIUS

Fellow students noted at the time that he was prepared to work all night if he had a problem to solve. They also began to suspect he was a genius.

Professor E. T. S. Walton, who knew him well, described him as a very great scientist.

"He could turn his brain to any branch of science," said Walton.

Kapitsa soon was made a doctor of philosophy, and designed and built an apparatus to produce a temperature near absolute zero — minus 450 degrees Fahrenheit. Then came one of Britain's rarest honors—he became the first foreigner made a fellow of the influential Royal Society for 200 years.

But in 1934, Kapitsa went on a visit to Russia and was refused a visa to return. Evidently the Russians thought him too valuable to let out of the country. Instead, they paid for his Cambridge laboratory equipment to be sent out to Russia.

Within four years he was elected a member of the Russian Academy of Sciences. Later he won the Order of Lenin and many other Soviet distinctions.

MAKES A COMPARISON

Of his work in atomic research he said: "To talk of atomic energy in terms of bombs is like talking of electricity in no other terms than those of the electric chair."

Apart from his work leading up to the Soviet hydrogen bomb explosion in 1953, Kapitsa is known to have perfected a turbine the size of a matchbox which could produce liquid air at a fraction of the cost of other methods. This he patented in the United States. He also was credited with important work on Russia's first earth satellites.

Among many honors accorded him by Western countries were membership of the U.S. National Academy of Sciences in 1946 and the Rutherford Prize of the British Royal Society in 1966.

Visiting England in May, 1966, to receive the Rutherford Prize he told reporters he would be against Soviet-American co-operation in landing a man on the moon.

Youths To Advise On Draft

NEWPORT BEACH, Calif. (WP) — President Nixon Friday conferred with 10 young advisers on the draft and then established a nationwide system of youth advisory committees on selective service.

"We believe that those who administer our draft laws should systematically seek advice from young people about young people," the President said.

It was understood that the idea originated with Maj. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, natinal director of selective service, last year.

When he told Mr. Nixon about the pilot program this year, the president expressed keen interest. Friday he ordered all states to establish youth advisory committees to consult with the state directors.

Future Transplants Said Requiring Press Support

By KARIN MOSER

MONTREAL (CP)—Dr. Jorge Kaplan of Valparaiso, Chile, says newspapers now have the heavy responsibility of directing public opinion regarding the future performance of heart transplants.

Dr. Kaplan, who has performed three heart transplant operations in the last year, made the statement during an interview at the second world heart transplant symposium which opened here Friday.

More than 100 heart specialists are attending the three-day conference sponsored by the province of Quebec. It is under the general chairmanship of Dr. Pierre Grondin of Montreal.

"You see," said Dr. Kaplan, "the future of the heart transplant operation can easily be swayed through the reports which appear in the press.

"When at first there was so much success in the field of these operations, everyone was so enthusiastic and played it up. But as patients began to die, the tone of reports became dismal and this can be very bad."

Of the 129 such operations performed around the world, 34 patients survive.

HAS THREE ALIVE

All three of Dr. Kaplan's patients have died. So have nine of Dr. Grondin's patients. And of the 19 operations carried out by Dr. Denton A. Cooley of Houston, Tex., only three patients survive.

But Dr. Philip Blaiberg of Cape Town, South Africa, has been living with a replacement heart for 18 months. His operation was carried out by Dr. Christiaan Barnard, pioneer of the heart transplant.

Dr. Kaplan explained that much has been learned in the past year from the operations performed.

In future, with closer attention to tissue matching and the possibility of an anti-rejection serum being developed, the future of such operations could be bright, he said.

"Kidney operations were not so successful at first, either," said the 43-year-old surgeon. "But today a patient can live much longer than it was thought possible 10 or 12 years ago."

Dr. Kaplan expressed great faith in the potential aid to be found in ALS—antilymphocyte serum—which has been used on some heart transplant patients to combat rejection.

TORONTO (CP)—The general assembly of the Presbyterian Church in Canada agreed Friday to participate in the support of a liaison office between Canadian churches and the federal government.

Picking Starts

VANCOUVER (CP) — Picking of the Fraser Valley's strawberry crop began Thursday with an estimated 1,600,000-pound crop expected, compared to last year's 14,700,000 pounds. The British Columbia agriculture department announced last week only about 400 acres of the Fraser Valley's 1,900 acres of strawberry plants survived the below-zero winter. Canada Manpower has estimated that 2,000 pickers will be needed for the harvest.

Priest Senate Head Elected

Rev. William Mudge has been elected chairman of the Priest's Senate on Vancouver Island, Roman Catholic Bishop Remi De Roo announced today. He succeeds Rev. Paul Monahan who has been granted sabbatical leave.

Rev. William Bulloch has been appointed diocesan chaplain of the Catholic Women's League.

It's time for Australia!

time for CP Air's new tour of Australia, New Zealand & Fiji

You haven't really seen the world until you've toured the island continent of Australia. And now CP Air gives you the best of this vast, vibrant land — plus generous samplings of New Zealand and Fiji — in a new 24-day travel adventure.
For a start, you'll have 12 days in Australia. Including the great cities of Sydney, Brisbane and Melbourne. The fascinating Great Barrier Reef. The Australian bushland. A Koala Park and sheep station. Even a boomerang-throwing exhibition!
Then on to Auckland, New Zealand, and a motor coach tour that offers incredible sights. Like the Glow-worm Grotto at Waitomo Caves and the geysers of Lake Rotorua.
Finally, the island paradise of Fiji, with ample time for lazing on warm tropical beaches. Then, tanned and relaxed, your jet home by way of Honolulu (with the option of a Hawaiian stop-over for no extra air fare).
If you've ever wondered what's up down under, this is the ideal time to find out. See your travel agent, contact CP Air or mail the coupon now and receive the complete "Time for Australia" Tour package.

BEAUTIFUL B.C.

Now They're Stopping in Kootenays

(This is the third of a series The Times is presenting on one of the most beautiful areas in the world—British Columbia.)

By BARRY BROADFOOT

There was a time not so long ago when the Kootenay country was a place of abandoned mines, ghost towns, small and quiet cities, dusty roads that wandered nowhere into the hills, and a so-so main highway rushing traffic through.

The main plan seemed to be to get through this vast bloc of south-central British Columbia as fast as possible, to the Okanagan Valley and Vancouver going west and eastward, north to Banff and Calgary.

The old mines are still there, of course, and the ghost towns a bit more crumbled, and the cities are still peaceful and friendly, but people are not rushing through any more.

The Kootenays are being discovered, and visitors are finding what so many residents of the country already knew—that this is a vacationland almost without parallel in Canada.

Proud Hotels

Everywhere I went I found good accommodation: weatherbeaten but still proud hotels built in the old wild days of the mining boom, or in motels as up-to-date as next year's mod fashions. I preferred the old hotels, and with some of them offering good rooms at $3 a night, they're easy to take.

Undeniably, the Kootenays have two of the finest boating lakes—the Arrow Lakes system and Kootenay Lake—the last-named of which is famous for its massive rainbow trout.

Your boat could be put into the Arrow Lakes at the north end at Arrowhead, south of Revelstoke on the Trans-Canada Highway. Then (provided you have someone to drive your auto down for you) you could spend an idyllic week just cruising down the 160 miles to Castlegar. A warning: you'll have to get used to solitude for the lake is virtually unused by any but local boaters.

Kootenay Lake. Now there's a lake! Wet your keel at Nelson on the west arm of Kootenay Lake and head out towards the main lake. You get more than 250 miles of shoreline for cruising, dozens of coves with sandy beaches, grassy camping parks, and not a soul within 20 miles.

Faded Boom

The highways of the Kootenays are mostly new, or rebuilt, and the long dry periods of spring, summer and fall make the side routes excellent, even if they are dirt roads.

East from Anarchist Mountain, Highway 3 runs through the Boundary country, through Bridesville, Rock Creek, Greenwood where the great Phoenix smelter once belched 24 hours a day for years, and into Grand Forks, all villages and towns which had great futures in the earlier days, but tied to the mining boom which faded and then went out.

Over the new Salmo-Creston Highway, and what a ski slope! About 20 miles downhill. Into Creston, a pleasant little town, with plenty of accommodation, serving an orchard-farming-ranching-lumber economy.

On to Cranbrook, a small bright city with a 50-yard-line view of the Rocky Mountains.

And there is no lovelier drive in spring or fall than farther up the Windermere Valley with rock-ribbed mountains to the left and right; and don't fail to stop at Fairmont Hot Springs. There is a new hotel there, with Roman-type indoor baths, two pools for the public and special baths for guests in a small hut beside the mineral springs back in the hills.

At nearby Kaslo, the jumping-off place in the early days for much of the Lardeau Country mines, you will find a friendly little community. The many boarded-over buildings show it has had better days, but its location on the lake with the surrounding hills makes it one of my favorite spots. You may rent a boat here for a day's fishing, and there are some deep holes to the south that give up lunker trout.

Ghost Towns

As Kaslo, seek the road to New Denver, up over the old gravel road through the silver country, past several ghost towns and decaying mines.

About three miles from New Denver, watch for the side road to Sandon, a city that died when the price of silver dropped out of sight 60 years ago. Once this huddle of shacks and wreckage in a gap in the hills had all the bright lights and flowing champagne and saloons and dancing girls, and civic pride, that any city had.

THEY RACE AT 20 MPH

HAMILTON, Bermuda (CP) — If Johathan Swift was around to modernize his account of Gulliver's Travels this little British colony would almost certainly be one of the first places he'd head for.

There's a Lilliputian air to the traffic regulations that govern the 20-square-mile island's car owners.

The fewer than 10,000 cars have only 130 miles of roads and the top speed limit anywhere is a breathtaking 20 miles an hour. In the three towns of Hamilton, St. George and Somerset — as well as other built up areas — the limit drops to 15 miles an hour.

The Bermuda Transport Control Board is the regulating body for the cars which before the last war were banned from the colony.

Even the cars, by Canadian standards, are tiny. The maximum length permitted is 166 inches. They can't be wider than 64 inches.

And in these times when two-car families are almost as common as one-car families were, at one time, the Bermuda law limits a family to one car.

A car owner who decides to get rid of his vehicle in favor of a new one runs into some offbeat regulations. There are three ways he can stay on wheels.

He can export his old car out of the colony; he can sell it for use as a taxi, or he can have it scrapped.

If he decides to sell it to another person as a second-hand car he — and all members of his family — must wait a year before the new car can be purchased.

Canadian motorists, used to reading of every increasing death tolls on the highways, will be amazed to hear of the crisis facing the colony.

In 1967 seven persons died on the highways here. Last year the total jumped to more than 20, the worst ever— and that brought on the crisis.

Most of the fatalities involve small bikes which are used by the thousands around here. Most of them are one gear, 50 c.c. bikes with a top speed of about 25 miles an hour.

There are no rental cars and visitors are not allowed to drive in the colony. The bikes are the most popular form of transport for the tourists — and no driving licence is required.

Hamilton, the largest town and business centre of the colony, has its traffic jams. They are infuriating to the residents, but a dream to the average big city dweller. They last for about half an hour morning and evening and even then the traffic keeps moving.

There is yet another thing the Canadian motorist would notice and like . . . there are no traffic lights on the highway system.

Transit Vote

KAMLOOPS (CP)—Taxpayers go to the polls June 21 to vote on a proposed subsidy of 21 cents per mile to Coachways System Ltd. of Edmonton for operating Kamloops' transit system. If approved the subsidy would cost about $30,000 annually.

This year, go to Europe by restaurant.
White Empress restaurant. White Empress swimming pool. Deckchair. Ballroom. And cinema. A whole White Empressful of Transatlantic glitter. It's the only regular steamship service between Montreal and Liverpool. Six days without a care. With the friendliest people who ever crossed the ocean. White Empress. From Canadian Pacific. Where you'll explore magnificent menus. See colourful floor shows. First-run movies. And dance to great music. This year, head off to Europe by restaurant. White Empress restaurants leave regularly from April to November.

MONTREAL · QUEBEC · LIVERPOOL
One-way tourist summer fare from $297.

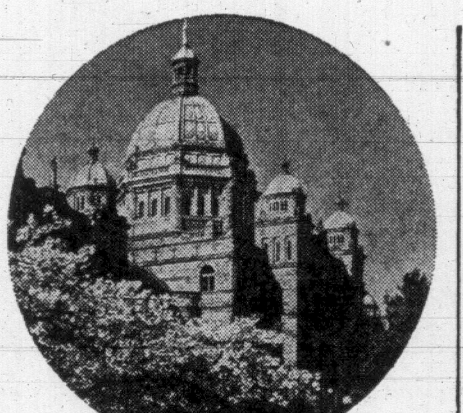
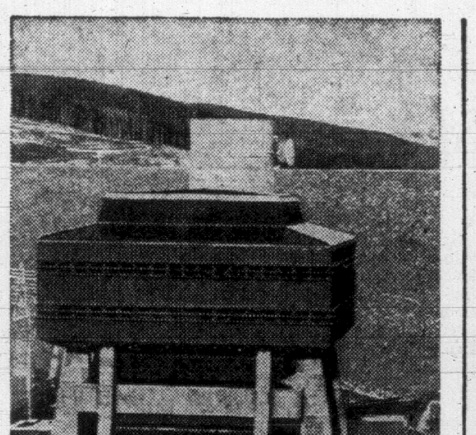
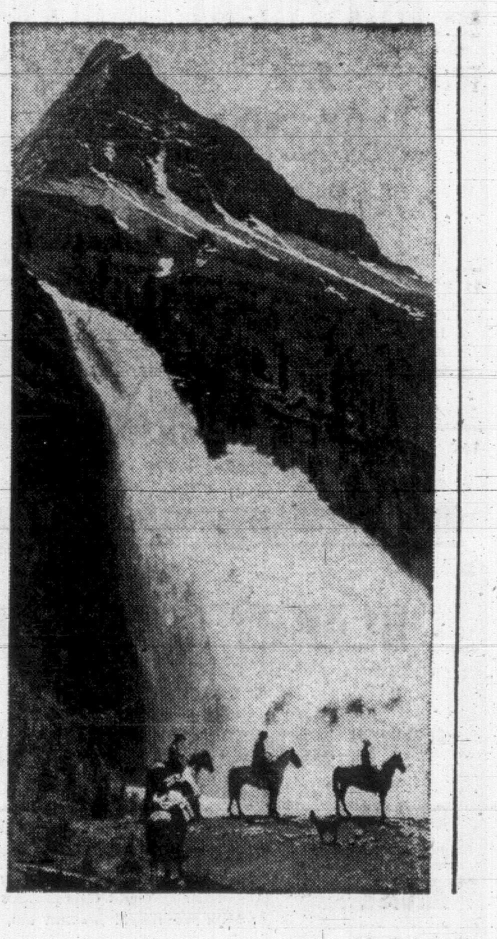
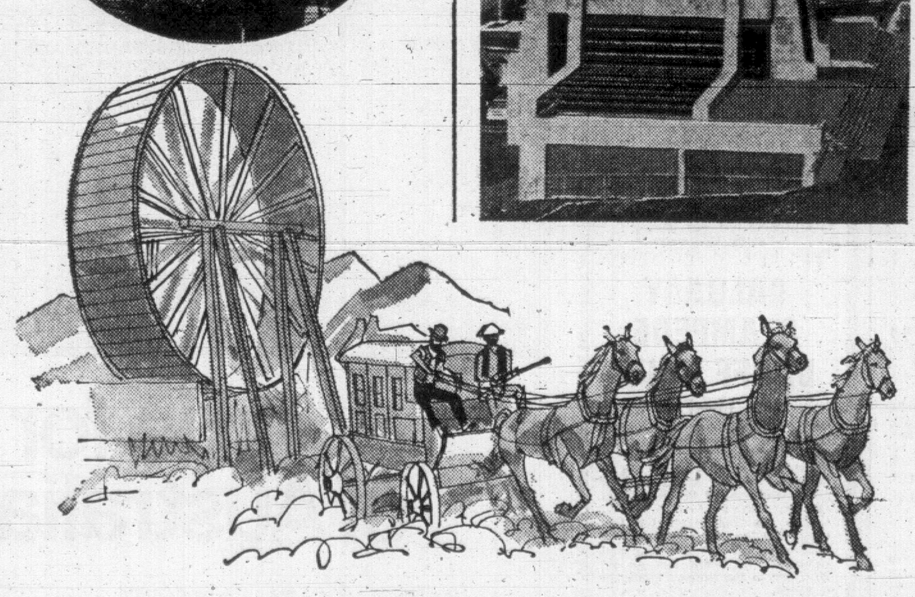
"See ourselves as others see us"









Thousands of visitors to British Columbia see our province as one of the greatest scenic and recreational areas on earth. And those visitors are absolutely right. We not only enjoy much of North America's finest natural beauty . . . but a host of fascinating special attractions, too. Like the mighty W. A. C. Bennett Dam on the Peace River, largest earth-filled dam in North America. And colorful Fort Steele in the Kootenays. And the Indian totem poles of Kispiox, along Highway 16. And the immense sandy sweep of Long Beach on Vancouver Island. The list is endless – and so are the opportunities for exciting holiday travel. This year, plan to see more of British Columbia. And see what holidays are all about.

Mass Media Mind-Control Endangers Public Interest

By JOSHUA LEDERBERG
The Washington Post

Mind control is one of the sharpest ethical challenges of biological research. Certain kinds of experiments are guaranteed to make headlines; for example, when an animal's behavior is controlled by an electronic device connected to his brain.

In fact, we are all born with such devices, even more wonderful in their complexity than the products of engineering design. These are our eyes and ears, and we ought to be focusing our concerns more sharply on the mind-control that is constantly exercised through them, especially by the electronic marvel of television.

CURRENT TURMOIL

The current turmoil over this issue centres, in part, on the relationship between television programming and violence. There is certainly very little scientific evidence to prove whether the violence of the theatre (of which TV is a part) has any net effect on the behavior of its audience.

Exactly the same must be said for various kinds of obscenity, like pornography. And in both areas we must be very careful that any remedy not be far worse than the disease by stifling artistic expression. We face the same dilemma in thinking about any controls over the reporting of factual news, which may be far more instrumental in the contagion of violence.

This contagion is certainly not the intention of TV programming, which complicates both the analysis of and judgment about its effects. There is no such ambiguity in the purposes of TV advertising, and if this does not work in selling cigarettes, many shrewd people must be called either frauds or fools, because they make their living on that proposition.

KICK THE HABIT

It is not quite fair to lay the health burden of 50,000 deaths per year from lung cancer on the television industry. A more rational approach would be to license the sale (and use) of cigarettes so that they were available only to those already severely addicted to them, and then under careful controls help the conscientious citizen to kick the habit.

The principal moral burden should rest on Congress, whose past position on this subject merely proves its vulnerability to special interests. Television executives who continue to deal with this kind of advertising are beginning to appreciate the strain on their own consciences.

These mind-control practises do illustrate how far the present system strays from the public interest. The disease is, however, largely an institutional one, inherent in the way that the technology is organized. We might be much better off if the broadcasting franchises, and the allotment of precious radio spectrum space, were completely severed from the production of programs.

PUBLIC UTILITIES

This would establish the stations as publicly regulated utilities, like the telephone or airlines industries. They would then serve an open market of producers and audiences. The present system of licences to integrated companies was predicated on a level of responsibility and responsiveness to the public interest that has plainly failed to meet the need. I have heard many lawyers bewail the potential hazards of more technology, and I challenge them in return to work out how to manage this one, which is so central to the life of democracy.

These proposals may be futile in the face of the established status quo. They also face the intrinsic biases of a broadcasting system. The present technology favors the utmost centralization of program emission, of the smallest variety, broadcast to the largest possible mass audience.

We need to favor those technological developments that can restore the widest range of choice to the consumers. Many psychiatrists believe that the format, of passive listening with zero participation, may be far more harmful to personality development than the actual content of TV programs.

NEW APPROACHES

Some approaches to these advances have already been announced; for example, the video records developed by Peter C. Goldmark of CBS laboratories. The Rostow committee's report on the communications industry, prepared for President Johnson, dismissed these innovations on account of their probable cost. However, conventional broadcasting receives a tremendously valuable, but hidden, subsidy through the allocation of spectrum space.

Intelligent citizenship urgently needs the building of free and critical individual choice of the content of sophisticated communications.

STAMP NEWS

By ROBERT G. OLIPHANT

To commemorate the 50th anniversary of the first non-stop trans-Atlantic flight, Canada on June 13 will issue an appropriate 15-cent pictorial. It features, superimposed upon a map of the North Atlantic Ocean, the Vickers Vimy plane which made the flight. (This aircraft is now displayed at the Science Museum in Kensington, England.)

An engraved "CANADA" appears vertically on the left hand side of the design. Below the plane's tail is "1919" and beneath it, in English and French "First Non-stop Transatlantic Flight." The colors are green, blue and brown.

The date of issue coincides with the Royal Philatelic Society of Canada's convention and exhibition to be held in Toronto from June 13 to 15.

Robert W. Bradford of Ottawa was the designer, and the printers were the British American Bank Note Co. The size is 40mm by 24mm, and they were printed in steel engraving and photogravure, in panes of 50.

Aboard the twin-engined plane were the British aviators Capt. John William Alcock (1892-1919), and Lt. Arthur Whitten Brown (1886-1948). The flight was made during the centennial year of the first Atlantic crossing by the Savannah, a vessel fitted with steam engines.

Chad on May 20 placed on sale four 50-franc stamps and a souvenir sheet bearing portraits of four "apostles of non-violence." They are: Mahatma Gandhi (1869-1948), President John F. Kennedy (1917-63), Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. (1929-68), and Sen. Robert F. Kennedy (1925-68).

On June 18, Zambia will release 3n and 25n pictorials observing the 50th anniversary of the International Labor Organization.

The United States June 16 will issue a 1.6c (not 16c) stamped envelope in Washington, D.C. It replaces the obsolete 1.4c envelope. Featured is the embossed Liberty Bell in white. This item is primarily for the use of authorized non-profit organizations which have bulk mail and precancel permits.

On June 3, Cameroun released 30-franc and 1,000-franc stamps marking the 200th anniversary of the birth of Emperor Napoleon I. The 30-franc value depicts a painting entitled "The Oath of Napoleon," and on the second stamp, Napoleon is on horseback. The latter pictorial was die stamped on gold foil.

Tristan da Cunha June 1 issued four multi-colors featuring clipper ships. The values and ships are: 4d, frigate; 1s, Cape Horner; 1s 6d, barque; and 2s 6d, tea clipper. They are recess printed by Bradbury Wilkinson and Co., in panes of 60. Only 81,000 sets were produced.

Japan on June 12 is scheduled to release a 15-yen adhesive honoring their first nuclear-powered ship. It will be based in Mutsu, and thus named Mutsu Maru. The multicolored stamp portrays the vessel and symbols of atomic equation. This issue was printed in Tokyo on unwatermarked, white stock.

A mint, imperforate pair of the U.S. Walt Disney stamp will be offered for sale in the June 17-20 auction of Vahan Mozian, Inc. This error will no doubt fetch a large price.

UNDERWOOD

Indians Prefer Own School

A former band chief said Friday the majority of Indian parents on the Saanich Peninsula favor continuing their own school.

They feel most of their children are not yet ready for integrated education.

Ed Underwood was commenting on a meeting of the four peninsula bands Thursday night to discuss education options under a new federal-provincial agreement.

Indian parents have the choice of sending their children to a school in the public system, a parochial school or Brentwood's Tsartlip school, operated by the department of Indian affairs and northern development.

About 250 children in the East Saanich, West Saanich, Cole Bay and North Saanich reserves are involved.

As of last October, about 75 were at Tsartlip school, 105 in public schools, 50 at private or parochial schools and 20 in a private kindergarten.

"It's not our people who need to be educated for integration," said Underwood. "It's the non-Indians who need to be educated to be friends. There's a lot they don't know about us."

While the meeting produced a general consensus in favor of integrated classes, he said most of the people wanted to keep Tsartlip school operating for an undetermined period because the majority of their children were not yet ready for mixed classes.

Indians want an education system in any event that enables them to keep their own culture, the past head of the East Saanich band said.

Families Seek Fun, Education At Naramata

Among the thousands who flock to the Okanagan Valley every summer, at least 2,000 are looking for more than sun and sand.

They are the families who spend a week combining vacation and study at the Naramata Centre for Continuing Education.

Set in the heart of the fruit country, the centre is at Naramata Village on the east side of Lake Okanagan, nine miles from Penticton.

Dormitories, cottages, tents, trailers and dining room facilities are available.

The centre is operated by the United Church of Canada, and this summer's program will offer specific training for leadership in congregational or community activities.

Major issues of the day will be discussed.

MAIN PROGRAMS

Here are the main programs:

June 28-July 12—Observation practice school, training sessions for church school teachers and superintendents; discussion groups.

July 12-19—Training for leaders of girls' groups. Discussion on Christianity and Communism.

July 19-26—The Church and Society, discussion led by Rev. Charles Forsyth and Rev. Ken Murdoch, both of Toronto.

July 26-Aug. 2—Workshop for church secretaries; scouting in the church; congregational life and work.

Aug. 2-9—Ferment in the World, with Rev. Murray MacInnes of United Nations, New York, and A. L. Cartier, Victoria.

Aug. 9-16—Worshipping Today, with Rev. Dan Kennedy, Santa Barbara, California; Rev. Barry Moore, Edmonton, James Strathdee, Los Angeles.

Aug. 16-23—Responsible Church Financing: Youth conclave with Rob Nelson, editor of Collage magazine, Toronto.

Pope to Brave Cold At 'Protestant Rome'

VATICAN CITY (UPI) — At one time a visit by a pope to Geneva would have been about as bizarre as a tent revival by Billy Graham inside Vatican City.

Geneva is, after all, the "Protestant Rome." It is the city of John Calvin, one of the founding spirits of Protestantism who ruled Geneva as a virtual dictator from 1541 to 1564 and made it a crime to attend Catholic services.

His imprint on the city remains strong, but much has changed since Calvin's time too. Pope Paul VI, in a speech April 16, called it "a sign of the times" that he had accepted an invitation to visit Geneva.

NOT ALL HAPPY

The Pope makes his 11-hour trip Tuesday, and a question that cannot be answered until he arrives is whether the capital of Calvinism is ready to accept the Pope in its midst for the first time.

The National Protestant Church of Geneva has recognized publicly that not all its members are happy about the Pope's visit. But reports from the Swiss city suggest the Protestants will meet the Pope more with reserve than open opposition.

Swiss authorities are moving more than 1,000 extra policemen into Geneva to help control crowds and 400 soldiers to direct traffic.

Officially, the primary aim of the Pope's visit is to honor the International Labor Organization (ILO) a specialized agency of the United Nations, on its 50th birthday.

But that aspect of the visit is certain to be overshadowed by the Pope's courtesy call on the World Council of Churches (WCC), a fellowship of 234 Protestant, Anglican and Orthodox churches.

It will be the first time a pope has appeared before a church group composed entirely of non-Catholics.

Local Witnesses To Attend Rally

More than 800 Jehovah's Witnesses from Victoria will be part of a conference of 35,000 from around the world in Vancouver next month, Lief E. Rosvold of Victoria says.

They will meet in the huge Empire Stadium July 13-20 for religious training and direct communication with others of the faith.

By REV. L. KINSOLVING

One of America's most impressively credentialled theologians—an attractive brunette named Mary Daly—is being dismissed from the faculty of the Jesuit-owned Boston College.

Daly has seven earned degrees, including PhDs from both Notre Dame and the University of Strasbourg, which also awarded her a doctorate in sacred theology.

Kinsolving

She was recently given a "one year, non-renewable contract" (i.e., fired) by the Boston College administration, which has never claimed that she is either lacking in teaching ability or remiss in deportment.

In response to the 2,500 Boston College students who signed a petition protesting her ouster, the administration has refused to give any reason for sacking her.

Rev. Charles Donovan, SJ senior vice-president and dean of faculties, told me that the institution's statutes require complete confidentiality in such matters. He also noted that a request for official reconsideration of the case was voted down, 22-18, by the members of the academic senate.

Father Donovan declined to answer whether the administration would be willing to state that Daly's dismissal had nothing to do with her "The Church and the Second Sex"—a devastating criticism of the church's practice of sexual segregation. Hence it appears that her faculty status has perished precisely because she published this book.

In it Daly wrote: "Catholic teaching has prolonged a traditional view of woman which at the same time idealizes and humiliates her . . . ecclesiastical pressure against birth control fits naturally within this context of oppression. In the poverty-stricken south of Italy it is not rare for a woman to have 20 children—a reduction of woman to the condition of the biological beast."

Daly quotes Pope John XXIII, who wrote: "Since women are becoming ever more conscious of their human dignity, they will not tolerate being treated as mere material instruments, but demand rights befitting a human person both in domestic and in public life." Daly contrasts this with Pope Pius XI who strongly denounced co-education, as well as the idea of a wife's "unnatural equality with the husband"—and with Pope Paul VI, who, in 1966, publicly described woman as "the creature most docile for any formation." Daly also notes that St. Thomas Aquinas described women as "misbegotten males"; Jesuit founder Ignatius Loyola compared them to Satan and St. Jerome to slaves.

She writes of these and a number of other church fathers who, in her opinion, regarded women "as valued chiefly for their reproductive organs, which also inspired horror". . . "Glorification of Mary," she writes, "ignores the important point that this did not improve the church's doctrine about concrete, living women." (Canon law, for instance, allowed wife-beating.)

Whether or not any of Dr. Daly's criticism is inaccurate or unjustified is apparently not of sufficient concern to her detractors for any of them to be willing to challenge her (in public)—despite the renowned training of the Jesuits in the art of debate.

And as the Second Vatican Council forbade "every type of discrimination whether social or cultural, whether based upon sex, race, color . . ."so in the refusal of Boston College's administration to provide any other reason for her ouster, it appears that there is a real possibility of sexual discrimination as well as a violation of academic freedom.

Pastor Quits to Take Hard Look at Life

Rev. Leslie Wallwork is leaving Victoria to become an author.

He will retire soon to an attractive cottage on Bowen Island to work on a book which will take "a long hard look" at life today.

He will also discuss what modern theology and secular mysticism have to say about it.

He will leave his charge as minister of Gordon Head and Cordova Bay United churches at the end of this month, after five years' service.

Besides his work as minister and preacher, Wallwork has been active as a family and youth counsellor; a director of the Canadian Mental Health Association; a leader in the Victoria free school movement.

On the University of Victoria campus, he has given leading talks on mysticism, comparative religion, modern psychology and related subjects.

A farewell service in honor of Rev. and Mrs. Wallwork will be held at St. David's Church, Cordova Bay, Sunday at 10:30 a.m.

Health Officer

TERRACE (CP)—The Skeena union board of health, without a public health officer since late 1967, will ask municipalities from Houston in central British Columbia to the Queen Charlotte Islands for help. Board chairman Dr. John Nicholson said Thursday major stumbling block is the low salary and Terrace will try to get a provincial subsidy.

Missionary To Talk Here

Jean Stewart, a missionary on furlough from Trinidad, will speak in Metropolitan United Church Sunday at 7 p.m.

She conducted educational, evangelical and women's work in the West Indies since 1959.

A native of Sackville, N.B., she was an educational missionary in West China from 1933 to 1951.

World Recalls D-Day Plus 25 Years

'SOME OF THE MEN DIDN'T GET 10 FEET BEFORE THEY DIED . . .'

"Some of the men did not get more than 10 feet from the LCA before they were killed or wounded. The open beach made an excellent killing ground. The enemy knew it. So did the assault troops. The men ran across that open stretch as they never ran before, sending up fervent prayers of thanks as they did so, that the sand was absorbing most of the shrapnel from the mortar bombs falling around them, and that the beach itself was not mined. So much happened in so few seconds as each man raced across the 75 to 100 yards of beach. A soldier would cry out, clutch his arm and feel the sticky warm blood beginning to soak his shirt. But he kept on going. Another would gasp and fall, not to rise again. But on the platoons went, on to their objective."

Victoria Soldiers Pushed in Farthest

Twenty-five years ago the Times carried a one-word headline, spread across eight columns—INVASION.

Everyone knew what it meant. It was the word the Western World had been waiting for for five years, the assault on the German fortress that was Europe.

"Fifteen-Mile Front Established.

"Strategic Bridges Captured.

"Satisfactory—Churchill."

Twenty-five years ago Friday it was D-Day and Vancouver Island men were there along with men from Pouce Coupe and Harbor Grace and Timmins and Montreal and Calgary — doing their share of the dying.

Victoria was fascinated by the headlines because so many of her sons were clambering down rope nets into landing craft, wading into enemy mines and shell bursts, sprinting across machine gun-raked beaches.

Victoria churches opened their doors to all who would come and pray. St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church chimes rang out at noon and the organist played Onward Christian Soldiers and Fight the Good Fight. The papers were filled with accounts of heroism and death but tucked between the stories were other items reminding readers that the home front was continuing to observe the normalities of life too:

A new four-room house just off Oak Bay Ave. was offered for $4,000. You could rent a bedroom for $7 a month. Mc and Mc had a sale of wooden deck chairs and B.C. Electric advised "Buy Coke Now." Coke?

War themes sold everything — "I'm in there punching for Victory and Morale," said a little man in a Congoleum rug ad. (How much Congoleum is still around?)

HP Sauce said their product was a blockbuster — "The bomber boys know a good sauce when they taste it."

Men were dying for freedom as the Legion criticized zombies (who mostly wanted the freedom of living until all able-bodied men were conscripted equally for overseas service). Japs Must Not Return To B.C., said another headline.

D-Day failed also to interrupt a political meeting at Empress Hotel as Solon Low, first leader of Social Credit in Canada warned prophetically, "Social Credit is coming and you should know why and what it really is."

The B.C. government said it had asked Greta Garbo to make a travel industry promotion film here. B.C. Government Employees won Victoria Labor Council backing in their unending struggle for union rights.

Major A. A. Ransom told Gyro members to use their influence to induce men to join the active forces. He said 4,000 reinforcements are needed every month. Victoria teachers said very few of them were now getting salaries less than the $1,200-a-year minimum.

Fibber McGee, Burns and Allen and Lum and Abner, on radio, were helping North Americans escape the war news.

In Victoria the Women's Auxiliary to the Canadian Scottish Regiment may have been killing the boys with kindness — knowing what we know now about nicotine:

"At present the auxiliary sends 20,000 cigarettes per month to the regiment. The objective is to send 100,000 cigarettes per month to the regiment, to provide smokes for the wounded in hospitals in England and to send tobacco to those who become prisoners of war."

Meanwhile the First Battalion Canadian Scottish (Princess Mary's), men from Courtenay and Duncan and Cumberland and Nanaimo and Fanny Bay and Salt Spring and Victoria, were trying to dig holes in the beaches with their fingernails.

By PETE LOUDON

They were picking sand out of festering leg sores — exploding shells and ricocheting bullets kicked it up and it pierced the legs like stinging nettles. And so did the shrapnel.

Earlier, in the 90-minute ride across the channel, 75 per cent of them had retched with seasickness. In the days to come, fighting their way through lowlands flooded by the retreating army, they were to be plagued with the foot ailments that come with constant immersion in sopping socks.

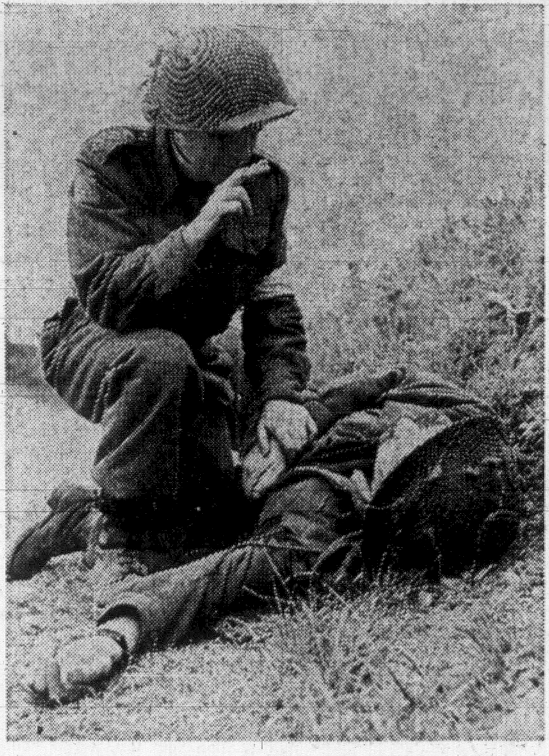
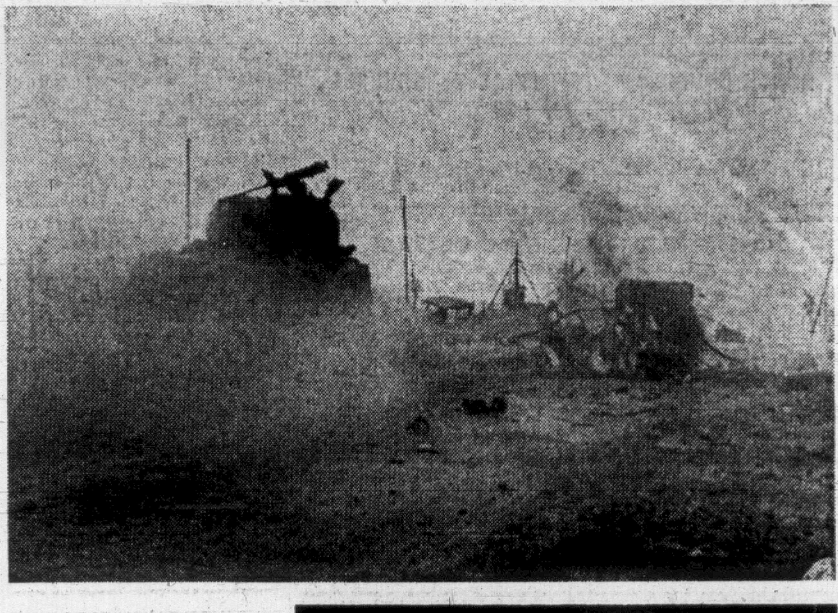
It was the greatest armada in history which had set out from the ports of southern England late at night on June 5. It was four years after the shambles of Dunkerque, two years after the horror of Dieppe.

Out for revenge, out to cleanse Europe of the disease of Nazism, was a total allied commitment of 2,800,000 men.

About 200,000 were involved in the D-Day invasion in 4,000 ships under an umbrella of 15,000 planes.



FALLEN INVADER is given last rites by Canadian Scottish First Battalion chaplain Capt. Robert Seaborn, who now lives in Nova Scotia. He went back for remembrance ceremonies in France Friday.



BURNING tanks littered beachhead but smoke gave some welcome cover to the riflemen swarming on to French soil. The Canadians suffered 946 casualties, of whom 335 died. Of the total invasion force, 2,000 died during the first three days.

There were 39 allied divisions, mostly American, 14 British, three Canadian, one Polish, one French. Facing them were 65 German divisions on the line and in reserve.

The 30-mile-long beachhead claimed 10,000 casualties of whom 2,000 died, in the first three days. Of the 14,500 Canadians who went in on D-Day, 946 were casualties — 335 died.

Of the 800 who went in from Canadian Scottish, 88 were almost immediate casualties. By June 9 there were 45 more dead and another 80 wounded. Almost one-third of the pre-invasion battalion strength was gone.

There were inevitable foul-ups. The invasion was 24 hours behind schedule, due to adverse weather. Air support was late on some beaches and softening-up of defences didn't come off as planned. Sea support was light the first day.

The entanglement of tank traps and mines set out by the defenders was tougher than anticipated. Scaling the bluffs in some areas was all but impossible. For seven hours after the first waves went ashore at about 6:30 a.m., the invasion's fate hung in balance.

Lieut.-Col., Later Brigadier, F. N. Cabeldu (who stood on the reviewing stand Friday night as the regiment paraded here to mark the anniversary), had reason to be proud.

The Canadian Scottish, which he commanded, was one of the first units to hit the beach, and one of the worst mauled. But 12 hours after landing, of all the assaulting brigades in the British Second Army, they had pushed farthest through the enemy defences.

The Scottish went in at Courseulles-sur-Mer, C Company first along with the Royal Winnipeg Rifles, followed by Able, Dog and Baker companies. Mines and obstacles took out many assault craft and many were casualties before they even set foot on French soil.

Four up-Island men were among the first to die, Captain Jack Bryden of Royston, Lieut. Ian Macdonald of Fanny Bay, Pte. Frank Townley of Bevan and Douglas Etherington of Cumberland. It was the start of a long list.

The regiment fought on to Caen, to Falaise, to the Seine, to Rouen, St. Valerie, Etaples, Le Wast, and helped capture Calais.

They struggled into Belgium, pausing to devastate Hitler's flying bomb installations and after a rest at Ghent, they helped hold the Nijemegan salient.

With the Winnipeg Rifles and Regina Rifles they crossed into Germany with a side trip into Holland. And then one day, those who were left, came home.

The Times of Jan. 3, 1946, records:

"To the strains of their own pipe band playing Bonnie Dundee and the full-throated cheers of an assembled multitude, Victoria's fighting Canadian Scots began their triumphal procession from the CPR docks to the Armouries . . ."

They marched home to a civic holiday and stores strung with bunting with their St. Bernard mascot Wallace striding along by the pipe major. And for the most part, they marched into limbo.

SHELL-SHATTERED BUILDING at Putot-en-Bessin was shelter for Canadian Scottish medical officer Dr. Gordon Young and, at right, Major (later Lieut.-Col.) Cyril Wightman of Victoria.

Where are the men who were there at D-Day and there on the day they came home? Some of them you see on this page. But most have apparently long since departed Victoria. The Times listed the returned men in 1946. An effort was made this week to trace them.

Two-thirds of 63 who gave Victoria addresses then are nowhere to be found in this area. Spread across Canada and North America in 25 years of peregrinations, perhaps they stand at other Cenotaphs today.

We'll never know where they are because you can pass them on the street without knowing them.

They look today not like warriors but like middle-aged everyday Joes — like ordinary Canadians.

But they'll always remember the bond that holds them separate. They'll always know who they are.

Vets Slow To Recall Invasion

You talk to them now — the men who stormed the Normandy beaches 25 years ago — and they're slow to talk about it.

"I don't even like to think about it," is a common reply.

There are plenty of D-Day vets in Victoria but the Times had difficulty in finding even the few pictured. Nobody likes to recall horror or the day he cramped with fear.

"I was scared thoughtless," that's (almost) the quote of Jim Sutherland, 59, city customs officer, who was in the third wave. He remembers the medics — three of them running around tending to wounded — and all three wounded themselves.

A mortar blew Jim Sutherland out of a truck a few weeks later. He served with the Scottish.

So did Gerry Wiles, 50, of 3701 Craigmillar, C Company runner, who got ashore dry then tumbled into an anti-tank ditch for an early morning swim.

Duncan high school principal (Lieut-Col.) Richard M. Lendrum, 58, (B Company Commander in the Scottish) remembers the spirit of the wounded — especially Sgt. Ken Byron of Salt Spring.

"A bullet entered his mouth and went out his cheek. I made him go back even though he said all he really needed was an aspirin."

Victoria printer A. E. Bert Cromack, with 14 Field Artillery, says at the time he was "too stupid to be scared" but a week later he realized he had never been so scared in his life.

Auctioneer Wilf Lund, 55, paymaster with Winnipeg Rifles, went in with the foot soldiers from an LCA — "You've got to do these things."

D-Day wasn't the whole show of course. The men who were there will tell you some of the toughest fighting came later and "make sure and get something in about the other guys."

Three members of the Scottish who trailed their regiment into France were Charles Shergold of Sidney, A. E. Bing Pistell of 3541 Doncaster and Alex Webster of 3619 Farhill.

They were in time for Pistell to catch some shrapnel in an arm and Webster to be knocked out by a close shell burst — but not scratched.

They were in time for 11 months of the misery and mud and death and destruction that followed D-Day. So "we got them in too."

ISLAND ROUNDUP

U.S. War Film Picketed By Courtenay Protesters

COURTENAY — About 30 students and adults picketed the theatre in this Vancouver Island city Friday, protesting the John Wayne film, The Green Berets, about the role of U.S. counter-insurgency troops in the Vietnam war.

COURTENAY — The Comox Valley fair this year will be reduced from three days to two, Bill Finlayson, president of the exhibition association, said Friday.

It will run from Aug. 29 to 30.

One event which will be missing will be the loggers' sports. Alan Woodrow, sports committee chairman, resigned last week.

GANGES — Salt Spring Island has an infestation of tent caterpillars, former provincial agriculturist Jack James said today.

James said the only control known is to destroy the colonies or tents on the trees. Infested leaves should be cut off and burned or sprayed with Diazinon.

"Even those infestations controlled on cultivated property won't solve the problem," he said, "They are breeding in large numbers on wild plants."

DUNCAN — The annual Cowichan Valley 4-H Club field day got under way today at Cowichan Exhibition grounds with more than 100 youngsters competing for the Cowichan Co-operative service trophy and a gold watch.

Five classes included beef and dairy cattle, sheep, sewing and food preparation.

Ken Jameson, Duncan district agriculturist and 4-H supervisor conducted an examination in current events and the 4-H movement.

Instructors were Gordon Rendle, Mike Shallcross, Hamish Sibbald, Alwyn Sanderson, and Mrs. Joan Westwick.

SOOKE — Ernie Teagle has been elected president of the Sooke Teachers' Association for the 1969-70 term.

Other officers:

Ronald Feness, vice-president; Andre de Hoog, secretary; Bob Peach, treasurer and Bernie Sinclair, in-service training chairman.

Bob Thompson was re-elected chairman of the public relations committee and Brian George joins the committee. District council representatives are Kay Maughan, Haraldr Palsson and Rod McBride. Newsletter editor is Leo Beinder, Mrs. Carol Jolly is the elementary school laison representative and Mrs. Mary Elford the secondary school representative to the University of Victoria.

NORTH COWICHAN — Pat Moore of the Duncan Gyro Club has been elected chairman of a committee to set up the machinery to raise about $100,000 for a recreation complex for the district.

Brian Lawrance of Duncan Jaycees is secretary and Peter Daniel of Kiwanis is treasurer.

A recreation bylaw for a $400,000 recreation arena was turned down by voters in November.

The fund-raising planning committee will meet again June 12, the same night combined recreation commissions meet in Duncan city hall.

DUNCAN — If Cowichan Indian band and developers of wholly-Indian owned and operated Khowutzun centre have their way, the famous knoll of trees in downtown Duncan will soon come timbering down.

Band secretary Diane Modeste said a recent meeting was held between the band council and Musqueam developments of Vancouver. The firm contends prospective leesees of the $2,000,000 centre fear danger from falling trees to persons and property and don't want the huge firs, cottonwoods and dogwoods to obscure the centre from the main street.

"However, the expense of maintenance and the amount of space it takes up were the main reasons for the council reaffirming its earlier decision to remove the knoll," Mrs. Modeste said.

The issue is expected to come up at city council meeting Monday night.

TV Question Period Clogs Corridor

By STEWART MacLEOD

OTTAWA (CP)— Just as the new parliamentary rules have shifted much of the heavy debate from the Commons to committees, television cameras and microphones seem to have shifted much of the daily question period from the Commons to the corridors.

As far as reporters are concerned, the biggest action of the day now occurs just outside the Commons chamber after the daily question period has been completed.

That's when cabinet ministers, and other MPs, are given the opportunity to repeat, for national audiences, the questions and answers they raised in the House.

If it was a clear case of repetition there would be no problem. But many of those interviewed in this daily scramble often say more than they did in the chamber, and so it becomes a completely new news-making situation.

In the Chamber, only one MP is allowed to speak at a given time, and reporters generally have no difficulty following every word.

But it's a different ball game in the corridor, where there may be four different MPs speaking into four different clusters of microphones at any given time. And it's sometimes physically impossible to get within earshot of any of them.

When, on occasions, a busload of tourists is allowed in to catch a close-up of Prime Minister Trudeau, the situation turns to bedlam.

There was one recent interview with Conservative Leader Stanfield that had to be halted while the squeals of visiting school children ran their course.

And then some tourists get into the act and join the reportorial rampage.

'FAR MORE EXCITING'

"This is far more exciting than the Commons," said the middle-aged tourist who dragged his wife from group to group. "See, there's the fellow we see on television all the time."

In her excitement, the wife swings a hefty elbow and a reporter gets jabbed in the pit of the stomach by his own pencil. And another interview is shot.

The situation often takes hours to sort itself out after the half-hour jam session is completed in the corridors. It involves an exchange of tapes and notes by reporters who caught certain segments of the interviews.

There have been many complaints from opposition members that the corridor interviews have upstaged the daily Commons question period.

For instance, some weeks ago, Marcel Lambert (PC—Edmonton West) complained that Labor Minister Bryce Mackasey was telling interviewers far more about the Air Canada strike than he was saying in the Commons.

And Works Minister Arthur Laing went into more detail on the government's building plans Thursday than he did during the question period.

There have been other examples of ministers, perhaps in attempting to explain things more clearly to non-political audiences, giving details that were not offered in the Commons.

And there have also been cases of opposition members, perhaps under the heat of television lights, making stronger statements in the corridors than they did in the Commons.

In any event, it's a daily happening that can't be missed.

11 WAR PROTESTERS SENTENCED TO JAIL

MILWAUKEE, Wis. (AP) — Eleven war protesters were sentenced to two-year prison terms Friday, as supporters chanted and sang outside the courtroom.

The 11 were among 12 members of the "Milwaukee 14" who were convicted of theft, arson and burglary in connection with the seizing and burning of draft records Sept. 24.

They were given concurrent two-year terms for theft and arson and four years' probation for burglary.

POT SMUGGLER JAILED

VANCOUVER (CP) — John Delbert Reid, 27, was sentenced to seven years in prison Friday for trying to smuggle 26 pounds of marijuana into Canada from the U.S. last February. A similar charge against Kenneth Gordon Banasky, 23, of no fixed address, was dismissed.

N-Ships Needed for Arctic Says Admiral

Ice-Breakers, Bulk Carriers, Hovercraft on List of Requirements

By PAT DUFOUR

Canada will need more ships capable of working in ice conditions, nuclear-powered submarine-type bulk carriers and hovercraft if she is to realize her full potential in the Arctic.

Rear-Admiral J. A. Charles, commander maritime forces Pacific, said Friday:

"If we are to protect our country's resources in the north, it is imperative that we co-ordinate our surveillance of the area—and have the forces in order to provide the necessary control."

He was interviewed following an Ottawa statement this week that the naval role of the armed forces would be enlarged.

Defence department sources said that while no major installations are anticipated ashore in the Arctic, Canadian ships will likely spend more time there. This is in line with Prime Minister Trudeau's April statement that the protection of Canadian sovereignty will be given top priority.

At the same time Canada will maintain its present Atlantic anit-submarine role with NATO, although perhaps on a modified scale.

Rear-Admiral Charles noted "a tremendous interest has been generated in the Arctic with the rapid development of its resources."

He also pointed out, "Canada is signatory of a convention which lists resources on the continental shelf as belonging to the country to which the shelf is attached. Much of it is shallow and Canadian."

"A surveillance of the Arctic is being carried out, with Maritime Command Argos planes flying loop patrols about three times in two months. This is not enough. Coast guard vessels are up there, too, but, again there are not enough.

Aerial surveillance must be increased and more vessels capable of operating in ice must be provided in order to do the job properly."

The admiral stressed that federal government officials are very aware of the need for a more efficient surveillance plan, similar to ones being operated on the Atlantic and Pacific coasts.

ADMIRAL CHARLES
. . . we need ships

He also felt the government's decision to call for a year-long study of re-establishing a deep-sea shipping industry had, in part, been prompted by the development of mines and oilfields in the north.

Admiral Charles felt that, to be economically feasible, an alternative to conventional vessels must be found for the north.

"I can see a future for bulk carriers that travel under the sea, pipe lines and air-cushioned machines in this business."

Admiral Charles warned that, with no merchant navy of its own, Canada's economic existence is dangerously vulnerable.

"We rely on foreign ships to move our goods . . . copper, minerals, timber . . . if any of the countries to which those ships belong decided to start requisitioning their vessels we would be powerless."

He stressed that Western Canada stood to lose more than any other part of Canada should this happen.

"A million tons of shipping leaves Vancouver every month, more than from Montreal, Halifax or Seattle. The economy of Western Canada would be in very real jeopardy."

In contrast to the Western world, which relied on competitive shipment by sea, the admiral said that Russia was building a tremendous merchant fleet, completely state-subsidized.

"This allows them to underbid and capture more and more of the market. I understand they are even carrying wheat from Australia."

He warned that, in the event of war, her massive merchant fleet would give Russia an edge in the control of the seas, menacing the Western world's ability to move its supporting supplies and troops.

All shipbuilding is subsidized in the United States, too, said the admiral, and other controls make it difficult for Canadian shipping to compete under current terms.

My love and I went food shopping the other evening, and for a treat before we got down to business, we walked slowly past the beef cuts on display. Then, dazed by prices that we wouldn't have believed a few years ago, we moved on to join the crowd around the ham butts.

Next day I asked Garth Graham, a youngish meat retailer of top repute, why the price of beef has climbed to where it now perches in our local stores.

The question is a popular one these days. Graham took a long breath. Then he said with empasis, "It has nothing to do with meat-cutter, butchers, or stores. And it makes me mad when Pat McGeer and other people make statements about the low price of beef in Ottawa. They don't know what they're talking about."

With this brisk opener off his chest, he listed the factors that are reducing sirloin to a fond memory for many a Victoria family.

His account held some surprises for us markedly carnivorous Victorians. Did you know, for instance, that we are fussier about our beef cuts than any city population in Canada?

A hard winter that upped rangeland labor and feed costs. To this, add fewer cattle on the market because of that winter, and increased American buying.

Also, times continue to change on the ranches where today's meaty steers originate.

The small spreads grow fewer, partly because it becomes harder to keep the kids on the farm. Correspondingly, the large ones are becoming larger still, and their owners are shrewder business men than those they are displacing.

The herd that started for market no longer has to get there, regardless of what beef prices may be when it arrives. Today, with improved transport, steers can be diverted or even fetched back.

Beef is big business, our rapidly-expanding Canadian population contributes to a bullish market of competitive bidding in which demand exceeds supply.

Today, the wholesale buyer of cattle on the hoof pays about $38 a hundredweight, from which his average net yield is roughly 58 per cent. The retailer buys this dressed carcass at $65.50 per 100 pounds. And what he sells to the public is perhaps 70 per cent of his purchase.

His gross profit ranges from 22 to 25 per cent, and his net, after wages, rent and assorted overhead, stands at from 3½ to 5 per cent.

Garth Graham, a cook who can make a lamb chop taste better than a T-bone, fired off these figures with speed and precision. Then he startled me by asserting that Alberta beef-eaters pay 10 per cent more than we, and that Calgary and Victoria claim the highest percentage of Canada's top-grade beef.

Further, Mr. Graham believes that we here are being over-catered to as compared with other parts of the country. Our large retired element is "very picky and choosy." Meat must be much more carefully trimmed and boned in Victoria than elsewhere. And per capita, we rate as large meat-eaters.

As a retailer, he thinks we should be varying our menus with the cheaper but toothsome varieties. I asked for suggestions, and got them: beef sausage; meat loaf of beef shank and pork neck mixed; boned and rolled brisket; short ribs braised and stewed, or barbecued; beef heart; chuck steak baked moist with onions and tomatoes.

And that super-cheap Ottawa hamburger?

Graham isn't saying it contained the following ingredients. But a butcher who will stoop to such tricks can evolve hamburger from cow meat, heart, pork scrap, and who knows what.

DESTROYER STAYS ON JOB

HMCS Qu'Appelle will continue to shadow a Russian hydrographic vessel off the Queen Charlotte Islands as long as the foreign ship remains near Canadian waters, navy sources said today.

The destroyer-escort was dispatched to the area late Monday.

BETTING $2 on the nose in one of this afternoon's horse races at Vancouver Exhibition Park, an early patron takes advantage of the "service" offered by the first off-track betting shop to open in Victoria. Operated by R. T. Enterprises Ltd. at 727 Johnson, it is a branch directed by Chilliwack scrap dealer William Wosk. The bet is taken by Wosk associate John Pringle, left, and Victorian Vern Geisler, seated.

UNDER EYE OF LAW

Off-Track Betting Starts Despite Ban

By JOHN STINGER

Victoria's first off-track betting shop opened on Johnson Street Friday and making a $2 bet on the horse at Vancouver Exhibition Park was as easy as dropping shirts off at the cleaners.

If city council wants to close the shop, and past actions indicate that it will, there will probably be a court battle.

William Wosk, head of R. T. Enterprises Ltd. that set up their blackboard and bet receipt rack on the indoor mall at 727 Johnson, said today in an interview that he does not intend to leave just because his business licence might not be approved by council.

Council's A committee Thursday unanimously rejected the company's application.

The committee's rejection will go before full council for ratification next Thursday.

MAINLAND SHOPS

The Wosk operation has apparently stymied Vancouver's city officials: R. T. Enterprises has some nine shops operating in the metropolitan area.

He has been quoted as saying: "The city, the licence inspector and the police are very smart. They are waiting to see what happens. They don't want to get public money involved in a big court case."

Seventeen days ago, federal Justice Minister Turner gave the Commons notice of an emergency amendment to the Criminal Code to ban the off-track betting services.

They began opening by the hundreds in Ontario when a loophole was discovered in the Code's prohibition of off-track gambling.

It turned out to be legal to operate a messenger service which collects bets and carries them, for a fee, to the track where they are placed through the regular pari-mutuel.

ACTION ASKED

All 10 provinces have asked Turner to take fast action to close the loophole, arguing that the uncontrolled operation might give organized crime a toe-hold outside the bookmakers.

One Victoria city administrator who declined to be named said the whole issue "is sort of a balled-up mess." He blames the federal government for not having sped an amendment to the Code.

Victoria Police Chief Jack Gregory said he is not prepared to comment on R. T. Enterprises Victoria shop.

He pointed out that charges have been laid against the local operator of a shop in Abbotsford and suggested local police action will await results of that case.

RCMP in Abbotsford charged a Chilliwack man who operated the shop for Wosk with permitting a place to be used for the purpose of a common gaming or betting house.

POLICE WATCH

Chief Gregory would only say of the shop here: "We are aware of the situation and are looking into it."

The shop was opened by a man who identified himself as John Pringle and said he was an associate of Wosk's "from the mainland."

It will be operated by Vern Geisler, a Victoria man whose address in the directory listings is 2580 Prior.

Officials of the city licence department, the city solicitor and city prosecutor will meet Monday to decide a course of action, said a spokesman.

Interviewed at the shop, Pringle explained the operation:

A bettor comes in and chooses a horse by number and race at Exhibition Park. He pays the amount of his bet plus 50 cents, if it is under $5; ten per cent, if it is under $50 and five per cent if it is over $50.

The bettor receives a receipt showing amount paid and what he has bet on.

CASH TO TRACK

This is phoned directly to "the correlating centre, as we refer to it," in Vancouver, and when the bets are in, a messenger heads for the track with the cash and buys tickets to cover them.

By signing the bet receipt, the bettor has authorized R.T. Enterprises to act as his agent and place a legal wager.

If, by some circumstances, the bet cannot be placed, the better gets back his bet plus fee.

If he wins, the money can be collected as soon as the track verifies the results.

APPOINTMENT of Dr. Charles F. Ballam as medical and educational director, Royal Jubilee Hospital, effective Sept. 1, has been announced by Dr. A. C. Pickles, executive director. Dr. Ballam has resigned as senior medical consultant to the B.C. Hospital Insurance Society effective Aug. 31. He graduated with first-class honors in the first class of the Medical School, University of British Columbia, in 1954 and interned at Royal Jubilee.

SPOT Zeros In On Drugs

The Saanich police-backed teen organization SPOT has embarked on a juvenile drug education program of its own, Sgt. Bill Chisholm said today.

He said the SPOT youngsters have purchsed, with their own funds, a film on marijuana aimed at supplementing police drug lectures in junior and senior high schools next term.

The film, which cost $375, was made recently in California by Sonny Bono, big-name rock singer with the Sonny and Cher duo.

"The kids viewed the film and were impressed with the honesty and straight forwardness of it," said Sgt. Chisholm. "It goes very carefully over the subject matter, it presents both sides of the picture, and it allows the kids to make up their own minds."

Student Limit First Of Uvic Expense Cuts

By BOB MITCHELL

A ceiling on enrolment will only be the first of a series of blows to be felt by the University of Victoria and the two other provincial universities due to short-changing in operating grants announced Friday.

The Uvic grant of $10,311,406 is almost $1.5 million less than the university's proposed budget, and $5 million less than the allotment given Simon Fraser University, an institution of comparable size.

Uvic based its budget on an estimated enrolment of 5,200 students, including 2,000 freshmen and 250 graduate students.

Those figures, said acting president Dean R. T. Wallace, must become the "absolute ceiling" for the 1969-70 session.

The enrolment ceiling at Uvic will be the first-ever for a B.C. university, and the board of governors will probably meet during the next week to discuss how to implement the limitation.

OBLIGATION TO RESIDENTS

Dean Wallace said Friday the university's first obligation is to residents of Vancouver Island, but he did not say whether enrolment restrictions would be aimed at mainland residents.

Also hit by the reduced grant are programs in graduate studies, fine arts, computer sciences and experimental education courses.

In announcing the $65 million operating grant to the three universities Friday, Education Minister Donald Brothers said the figure represents a 23 per cent increase over last year's grant.

However, Dean Wallace said Uvic would actually have less money in the coming session than last year.

SERIOUS PROBLEMS

"It won't begin to improve until people with kids realize that things have changed and there are serious problems involved in getting a university education.

"When people hear these figures they say 'Gee what a lot of money for the universities,' but they don't realize the effect of this slow starvation."

In 1968-69 B.C. government operating and capital grants to the three universities amounted to $32.39 for every man, woman and child in the province.

In Ontario it was $45.76, and in Alberta it was $60.86.

Wright said while salaries for instructors at Uvic would remain satisfactory, new faculty members would be discouraged from teaching here because new programs will mark time or be abandoned.

It was lack of provincial government support that forced UBC president Kenneth Hare to resign last February after less than a year in office.

The reduced grants also underline the necessity for formula financing over, for instance, a five-year period, which would allow the universitites to plan ahead.

Formula financing is now in effect in Alberta and Ontario.

Wright also blasted the government's "mindless favoritism" which saw Simon Fraser receive $2,345 per student, compared with $1,714 per student at Uvic.

"All we can do now is hope that out of this situation of no formula financing, students, faculty and administrators can say the same thing."

'VICIOUS ASSAULT'

2-Year Term For Stabbing

Hector Joseph Guilmette, 21, of CFB Esquimalt was sentenced to two years in the penitentiary Friday for stabbing a University of Victoria student May 27.

He was also given a six-month concurrent sentence for stealing a car.

His companion in the incident, George F. Wright, 19, also of CFB Esquimalt, was given a suspended sentence for theft of the same car. He was not charged in the assault.

Both pleaded guilty a week ago.

"By this wicked and vicious assault on this man you brought him to the brink of death," Magistrate William Ostler told Guilmette.

"It's very fortunate for you he didn't lose his life or you could be charged with murder."

The victim, Orville James Brown, 23, of 3240 Harriet, is in St. Joseph's Hospital in good condition.

The magistrate told Wright that in sentencing him he erased the assault completely from his mind.

"I'm satisfied you had nothing to do with it."

He ordered Wright to post a $500, 18-month good-behavior bond.

The stabbing occurred after an all-night drinking party involving the accused, Brown, and a friend, Ronald Calhoun, 29, of 352 Gorge, to whom the stolen car belonged.

New Drug Used Here Say Young Informants

By STEVE HUME

A new drug has emerged in substantial quantities among Victoria's youthful sub-culture, the Times has learned.

Tagged DMA by young informants who claim to have recently tried, or watched others experiencing the consciousness-altering compound, the drug is so new it is unknown to RCMP experts.

Youngsters told the Times that in the past week approximately 500 capsules of DMA were circulating widely through Victoria. They have a street market retail value of $6 per capsule.

Effects of the drug, according to one source, are observable contractions of facial muscles, staring eyes, minor amounts of over-all muscular trembling and tension, a marked lack of hyperactive behavior, and rushes of heat and cold.

INJECTED

According to the source, the DMA was most popular among regular users of amphetamines and heroin. He said these individuals were injecting the drug rather than taking it orally.

The junior high school and high school set, however, tended to use the drug orally, he said.

Some youngsters have said they believe the new drug is a combination of LSD, mescaline, hashish and dexedrine. Others think it may be a newly introduced form of amphetamine.

There is a distinct possibility, however, that DMA is diethylthiambutene or dimethylthiambutene, a pair of drugs so close in the chemical family their effects would probably be similar.

USED BY VETS

Diethylthiambutene is used by veterinarians as an analgesic or pain-killer.

It also has qualities which classify it as a sedative and a hypnotic.

Hypnotic drugs are divided into two general categories:

- The first grouping depresses, much like alcohol, the cerebral cortex region of the brain.
- The second grouping penetrates much deeper, depressing the thalamic region of the brain.

The thalamus, according to evolutionists, is a very primitive part of the brain's structure, and its effects over higher centres of the organ are widespread.

SUGGESTIBLE

Under the influence of a hypnotic like diethylthiambutene an individual would likely experience reduced activity and go into a highly suggestible state.

Both diethylthiambutene and dimethylthiambutene are listed under the restricted thiambutene classification of the Narcotics Control Act schedule, which would make possession illegal except as provided by the act.

Whether DMA is, in actuality, diethyl or dimethyl of the thiambutene group remains a calculated guess until the drug can undergo complex analysis under laboratory conditions.

COOL-AID

In the meantime, Cool-Aid, a youth-oriented social work group, is recommending that anyone in possession of DMA and intending to use it wait until someone with chemical expertise can determine exactly what constitutes the compound.

It is Cool-Aid policy to warn youngsters of gross latent dangers in any specific drug circulating at the time.

Recently the organization engaged in a campaign warning against a form of LSD being sold which was heavily adulterated with the drug ergotinine.

After police lab chemists identified the basic ergotinine, a drug used in obstetrics for contracting the uterus after delivery in order to prevent haemorrhaging, Cool-Aid advised strongly against the LSD.

Heavy doses of ergotinine can cause convulsions.

After the Cool-Aid warning, according to several drug-using teen-agers, circulation of the bad "acid," which was characterized by an orange color, fell off steeply.

Beautiful scarves from Ireland . . .

The subject of our discourse today is woollen scarves and stoles . . . And before you open your big blue eyes and say "What? Is the woman mad, talking about woollen scarves this time of year?" . . . we want to make plain that these are no ordinary scarves . . . and that smart gals are going to be stocking up on them now for gifts as well as for personal use later . . . before they're all snapped up by our visitors from across the border! . . . Briefly, Wilson's have just received a shipment of Crock of Gold scarves, which are hand-dyed and hand-woven in the Republic of Ireland . . . They're 100% wool . . . have the softness and semi-transparency of silk . . . and colors such as only the Irish can achieve . . Long scarves with fringed ends or big squares . . . either solid colors or with stripes in deliciously blended shades . . . These are tagged at a mere $5.50 . . . and would make as nice a gift as you could ever hope to give . . Also newly arrived at Wilson's are pure cashmere scarves and stoles . . . white, gold, blue, red, black and beige . . . Small mohair scarves from Scotland (which, unaccountably, are now less expensive than they used to be . . . $1.75 to be precise) . . . Plain mohair stoles . . , fluffy and soft as whipped cream, are $6.50 . . . while those with several colors cost a dollar more . . . Wilson's have a new shipment of those versatile French angora toques, too . . . more colors than ever . . . and still just $3.50 . . . W & J Wilson Limited, 1221 Government Street, 383-7177.

If you missed seeing the remarkable exhition of artwork . . . by students of the elementary schools in the Greater Victoria area . . . which was on display in the Provincial Museum recently . . . take our advice and pay a visit to Standard Furniture . . . who've taken over the works . . . mounted the pictures on seven or eight big panels and hung them in their stairwell . . . where you get an excellent view from all angles . . . These paintings, collages, etc., are truly fantastic . . . and one can scarcely believe they're executed by youngsters in grades one to seven . . . Many of them could be hung in anyone's home without a qualm! . . . Th kids have been left free to create their own art forms . . . and they do great credit to their art teachers, who've come a long way in the past few years . . . because it really takes a good teacher to give this freedom . . . We were amazed at the soaring imagination . . . the beautiful use of color! . . . Don't miss this exhibition, which Standard has mounted as one of their ways of serving the Victoria public . . . and which they tell us they enjoy doing because they believe art is part of a home . . . and that furnishing a home is an art form . . . A visit to Standard is always a stimulating experience . . . and their current showing of school artwork just adds to the enjoyment! . . . Standard Furniture Co., 737 Yates Street, 382-5111.

Brevitts are wonderful walkers . . .

We'd just come from viewing the new Brevitt shoes at Munday's this week when . . . as luck would have it . . . we ran into a friend who'd just bought a pair and started in telling us how wonderfully well-fitting and comfortable they are! . . . "Grand for walking in all kinds of weather," she explained . . . so we're passing this along to you as a bonus . . . New models this season in these handsome British Brevitt shoes are the "Carno" . . . a crepe sole slip-on with a gore under the high vamp . . . which comes in antiqued beige, red, or mossy green . . . $18.95 . . . "Chesham" is a particularly handsome walking shoe with the new high front look, leather sole and stack heel . . . in antiqued sandalwood leather, which takes a terrific polish . . . $23.95 . . . "Raynsford," the classic Brevitt, at $19.95, is a basic 2-eyelet shoe with rippled rubber sole . . . tan calf or bone suede . . . It's ideal for this climate of ours . . . "Morden" . . . same price . . . is a woven beige calf, 2-eyelet shoe . . . very cool and nice for summer walking . . . All the young things love "Soft Moc" . . . a slip-on, flat basic shoe with flexible black calf . . . $15.95 . . . This latter along with the new "Carno," are Brevitt's "young" models . . . Corn flakes and coconut give body and interest to the Australian dish, Riverina Apricot Dessert. The apricots, mixed with honey, lemon rind and baking powder in addition to the corn flakes and coconut, are served warm from the oven with a slightly cooled sauce.

Apricots Enhance Dessert

Riverina Apricot Dessert is one of the favorites of the down-under continent, Australia. Tested and adapted for Canadian use by Canadian home economist, Claire Friefeld, the recipe calls for canned apricots in order to use the syrup from the can in the sauce. The sauce is poured over the apricot mixture shortly before serving.

One can (28 ounces) drained apricot halves; ½ cup honey; grated rind of 2 lemons; 2 tbsps. melted butter; 2 tsps. baking powder; 1 cup crushed corn flakes; 1 cup desiccated coconut.

Sauce:

Three-quarters cup syrup from apricots; 1½ tsps. grated orange rind; 1 tbsp. granulated sugar; 3 eggs, separated; 1½ tbsps. sherry or vanilla essence.

Chop apricot halves, mix in the honey. Combine corn flakes, coconut, lemon rind and baking powder, add to apricot mixture. Mix in the melted butter.

Turn into a greased oven-proof dish and bake in a 350 degree F. oven for about 35 minutes. Serve warm with the sauce and, if desired, ice cream or whipped cream.

Sauce: Mix together rind, apricot syrup, sugar and egg yolks and cook over hot water, stirring constantly, until thickening. Beat egg whites until stiff; add the egg yokes mixture a little at a time, beating constantly. Beat in flavoring, cool a little before serving.

Penny's Oversight Quickly Corrected

By PENNY SAVER

"Penny, I want to talk to you." I knew from the tone in her voice that Mathilda was going to call me to task for one thing or another so I sat down, folded my hands like a too-well-behaved child and prepared to listen. "You have said quite a bit in that column of yours about gifts for the newlyweds who need practical things, things they can use from day to day. But there are still couples who have everything from paring knives to percolators, bed springs to bath mats before they even think of making the long walk to the altar. For them a wedding gift should be something special — something they wouldn't buy for themselves like fancy bed sheets, or even those silver tea trays you think so little of." "Silver has to be cleaned constantly and that is a job I wouldn't wish on a maladjusted gorilla," I replied. "But you are absolutely right about the fancy linen and I will rectify my oversight as soon as possible."

A wedding gift of fine linen need be no more expensive than a practical wedding gift. The secret lies in not setting your sights too high. For instance, every young bride would appreciate some extra-special guest towels. A boxed set of two fine linen guest towels is $3.95. These are Madeira linen and are decorated with embroidered cutwork designs. The white is embroidered with ecru but colors, for example a pale creamy yellow, are available and these are embroidered in a matching shade.

Also very attractive and very elegant are tea napkins from Portugal. These dainty napkins come in a boxed set of four for $4.95.

Beauty for the Bed

If the couple will be having extra-special house guests they might appreciate some extra-special bed sheets. Again the price for this gift is not high. A fancy top sheet for a double bed with two pillow slips to match is $12.95. The top edge of the sheet and the edges of the pillow slips are finished in a cut work design finished with hand embroidery.

For $19.95 one can buy a gift that combines luxury and beauty with usefulness — a mohair throw. These throws are usually woven in a plaid-like pattern (though they do not correspond with any plaid in particular and usually use only two colors) and the long threads of the mohair give them depth and softness as well as warmth without weight. These throws are wonderful as extra blankets on cold winter nights.

A girl who wishes to set a fine table will appreciate an extra-special table cloth. Table cloths begin at $15.95 for a 45-inch cutwork cloth in Madeira linen and can go as high as $79 depending on the quality of the materials and the trim. The shop I visited to find these fine linen items has cloths of Madeira linen or damask, embroidered, or trimmed with lace. It has crocheted cloths and doilies of lace or crochet. In fact it has every kind of fine linen that could ever find its way to a wedding or any other extra-special occasion. Needless to say, if you didn't get your fine linen as a wedding gift, there is nothing to stop you from buying it for yourself.

If you would like to know where I shopped for these items, please call 382-3131 between 9 a.m. and 4 p.m.

BUDGET RECIPE

Franks-In-Blanket

Twelve slices white bread, crusts removed; 6 wieners split lengthwise; 6 slices of cheese. 2 eggs, beaten; 2½ cups liquified skim milk powder or whole milk; 1 tsp. salt; 1 tsp. pepper; ¼ tsp. dry mustard.

Early in the day, grease a 12 by 8 by 2 inch baking dish and line with 6 slices of bread. Cover with split wieners, then with cheese. Top with rest of bread. Beat eggs with milk, salt, pepper, mustard; pour over bread. Refrigerate 1 hour. Bake at 350 degrees for 1 hour and serve immediately. Serves 6. (Recipe by home economist Dot West.)

DEAR ABBY . . .

Should the Man Always Treat?

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I have been giving this matter a lot of thought and have concluded that the custom of the man paying for everything when he takes a lady out is now outmoded.

First of all, today most women have as much, or more money than the man who invites them out. Also, isn't the woman getting as much entertainment as he is?

I can see a man supporting a woman in marriage, as she does many things for him such as keeping house and caring for his children, etc. But in dating, just what is she giving HIM that he isn't giving HER?—Leo.

DEAR LEO: What you say makes sense, but since it is the man's privilege to do the asking, and the woman must wait to be asked, I think initially he should foot the bill. After several dates, if the woman has "as much or more money" than the man, she will invite him to her place for home-cooked meals and buy him a few gifts. It all evens out.

DEAR ABBY: I am the mother of a 3-year-old child, and I have one big complaint to make.

We are trying to teach our little boy NEVER to accept candy or other goodies from strangers, but every time we go to a restaurant or store, the clerks or hostesses are constantly shoving candy into his hot little hand.

I realize they think they are being nice to him, but how are we poor parents ever to teach our children not to accept things from strangers when this happens all the time?

I hope you will put this in your column. It might help. —Tuscaloosa Mamma.

DEAR MAMMA: Tell your child that he may not accept anything from a stranger without your permission. And when a well-meaning but thoughtless stranger, hostess, or clerk gives the child a "treat," insist that the child return it saying, "I have to ask Mother first." Then, of course, give your permission (if you want the child to have whatever is offered) but go through this ceremony until the child is trained.

DEAR ABBY: I am 22 years old, have been married for only six months and I already have a problem. My husband is always looking at strange women and making personal comments about them. "She's well stacked, she has nice legs, she's too fat, she's too skinny, her hair is pretty," etc. Now, Abby, he wouldn't notice these things if he weren't constantly looking, would he?

I have told him I didn't like it and I wish he'd stop, but he says I'm jealous and should get over it. I've even tried making the same kind of remarks about strange men I see, but it doesn't seem to bother him.

I'm no slob myself, so I don't think I'm jealous. Why does he do this, and how should I handle this irritating problem?—Bothered.

DEAR BOTHERED: No matter what he says, if it continues to bother you when he makes personal remarks about other women, he's trying to get your goat. Try to find out why he feels the need to needle you.

Everybody has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply write to Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069, and enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

For Abby's new booklet, "What Teen-Agers Want to Know," send $1 to Abby, Box 69700, Los Angles, Calif. 90069.

I DIDN'T DO IT, MOM

Love Is a Big Wooden Spoon

By MAUREEN DUFFUS

An unnerving fact has emerged from a survey of children taken at a local school: Children don't need a lot of books by junior Spocks to help them understand parents.

They know instinctively.

From essays collected by teachers from Grade 3 to Grade 7, it's clear that these future psychologists of the world have us all figured out.

The children were asked how they knew when their mothers reached the boiling point, what they did about it, and how they tried to pacify the irate parent.

Not surprisingly, the good old wooden spoon figures prominently as a major clue as to when Mom is mad, a fairly obvious signal.

"I know when my mom gets mad because she:
shouts
yells hollers frowns
and reaches for the wooden spoon."

End of essay.

Another victim of the wooden spoon tells how he reacts:

"My reaction is that I didn't do it, I didn't do it. I try to pacify her by saying I will do anything, but do not tell Dad."

Early Warning

But most of the children recognize the danger signals long before the wooden spoon appears.

"I can tell when my mother reaches her boiling point very easily. You see, all she does is say sweetly, but so sarcastically: "Hadn't you better do this simple chore because if you don't I do not want that TENDER, FRAGILE body — er, damaged." That is her message to me.

"The reaction I have is to go darting off and do it. But that's the thing. I don't try to get out of her bad books. I'm in there and stuck fast."

One essayist has put his finger on a common symptom, the ominous silence.

Won't Talk

"How I know she has reached the boiling point is when she won't talk, or starts doing the housework noisily so I notice she's doing it."

Translation: Mother is indulging in noble martyrdom again.

Here's another martyred mom:

"When my mom gets mad she sometimes goes into the bedroom and stomps her foot and yells out '"I wonder what you'd do without a mother, then locks the door." (One door in our house still has the marks from the wooden spoon Rob pounded against it the last time I tried locking myself away.)

Another version of the martyr: "When she has finished yelling at me she says that I make her ill."

The counter-ploy to the martyred mother, as worked out by the above writer, is simple. "When I feel rejected I just say that she likes my sister better than me and that usually gets her."

Evidently the most common thing that drives mothers to the boiling point is the untidy room. One brief essay speaks for them all.

"Usually I can tell when mom starts getting mad it happens like this.

"Clean up your room before you go out to play, dear.

"Can't I play for a little while?

"No, dear, clean your room first.

"But Mom . . .

"Clean it up!

"All right."

Now that has a familiar ring, too.

Lips Glued

The lips "glued so tight wild horses couldn't pry them apart" is another warning.

Coping with this, two writers use similar tactics.

"I sit down looking very penitent and say I'm sorry, and, or I burst into tears and fly to my room."

"My reaction — a few stutters, and a wish to be at the bottom of the ocean. I try to get on her good side — a tiny, but still very nervous and scared smile, and then reel off as many explanations, apologies and I-won't-do-it-again sort of reforms."

Little monkeys. It usually works, too.

In one essay, it's called "apple shining," and the simplest version is an angelic "Mom, you're the best mom in the world."

Amongst the unexpected danger signals is that of the mother who "suddenly starts talking with an English accent, then I know I better watch out."

Cools Down

Also unexpected is the child who knows when his mother is cooling down. She's one of the tight-lips types when she's about to blow, but "when I hear books and dishes crashing, then I know she is almost cooled down. When everything is quiet I breathe again."

As opposed to Old Tight-Lips, there's the mother who "does not simmer for a while and then start to boil, she just explodes at the first thing I do wrong."

Then there's The Slammer. "She starts slamming things down really hard and when she gets mad at things that don't really need anything said about it."

And the Stamper: "My mother gets mad quite easy, but the time to really look out is when she stamps her foot."

There is one horrifying thing about these descriptions of mothers on the warpath: They all remind me of me.

Women's Caucus Urged for Church

TORONTO (CP) — A plea for improved status for women within the church was made Thursday to the general assembly of the Presbyterian Church of Canada by Janet Guildford of Halifax, a youth observer.

Pointing out that women now are eligible for ordination as elders and ministers, Miss Guildford claimed that they are not accepting their responsibilities and are being exploited by the men in the church.

She presented a document, on behalf of the youth observers, dealing with the role of women in the church. The document was received and commended by the life and mission projects committee for study.

It included a recommendation that women should form a caucus and support each other in the work of the church without waiting for their function to be defined by a man.

She recommended that men and women attend the same theological schools and take the same courses.

The report said that, while women are entitled to hold office, Presbyterian congregations do not always encourage them to do so.

In other business, Prof. Charles Scobie of Montreal asked that a field committee be appointed to co-ordinate the policy and program of the Presbyterian Church in the area of work among French-speaking congregations.

NO ANGLO-SAXONS

The moderator, Rev. E. H. Johnson of Toronto, was given authority to appoint a special committee and it was specified that they should not be Anglo-Saxons from Toronto.

There is a total of 461 members in the three French-speaking congregations in Quebec. Rev. H. A. Doig, a native of Lachute, Que., said that 85 per cent of the congregations are immigrants who came to Canada as Protestants.

Stowaway Wife Enjoys A Second Honeymoon

LIVERPOOL, England (AP) — After 28 years of marriage, Rose Kirk finally rebelled against the ritual of waving goodbye to her sailor husband.

This time she saw him aboard, and instead of going home as usual, sneaked up the gangplank of the 25,000-ton liner Empress of England.

Once at sea she sent word to her husband Albert, a greaser in the engine room. Albert sent word up to the captain that he had a stowaway aboard.

In court Wednesday, back from the 17-day round trip to Montreal, Mrs. Kirk was fined £10 ($26) and paid up gladly.

"I had a ball," she said.

"For years I have put up with seeing my husband only once every 17 days when the ship docks then it is only for a few hours because I work at a bakery.

"Every wife who loves her husband will know how I felt."

Mrs. Kirk said she told all this to the captain and he—"a wonderful man," she said—gave her a cabin and the run of the ship.

"It was like a second honeymoon."

Professor Warns Idealism Often Cloaks Irrationality

By ROBIN BURGESS

A warning against some of the postures of modern youth was delivered to 270 Mount View Secondary grads Friday by a university professor.

Prof. A. E. Loft of University of Victoria asked:

"When are we going to stop calling irrational behavior 'youthful idealism'?"

He warned against "intellectuals" who define freedom as the right to disregard laws if they can't agree with them in conscience.

"As parents we are afraid to say 'no' to our children . . . social responsibility begins in the home."

The term "new morality" came under particular criticism.

"To me the 'new morality' means no morality at all or at least the morality of an alleycat."

Loft told the grads that he feels generally, though, the vast majority of today's youth have changed very little from his day.

"Young people today are much more aware of social inequities."

Prof. Loft also noted the lack of non-academic post-secondary institutions in B.C.

"This province is sadly lacking in vocational and technical schools.

"This is the weakest feature of education in British Columbia," he stated.

TRUSTEES' GREETINGS

Dr. V. A. Rogers brought greetings from Greater Victoria Board of School Trustees and urged students "to think very hard about going straight to university from high school"'

Often students who do this are "disillusioned" in their first year and drop out, said Rogers.

Providing a lighter touch to an otherwise serious evening valedictorian Robert Hudson reminisced about life in kindergarten when "I couldn't tell the difference between fruits and vegetables."

Hudson evoked fond memories and drew the heartiest laugh as he reminded the grads of their junior high days.

"Junior high—with its sock-hops with girls on one side of the gym and boys on the other."

Eleven outstanding grads were presented with awards towards the close of the ceremony.

The inners were Norma Edkardt, girls' sportsmanship award; Tom Somner, boys' sportsmanship award; Leslie Hodgson, student of the year; Stewart Motteram, outstanding service; Bill Girard, leadership; Margaret Greig and Bob Crawford, citizenship; Vida Money, academic award; Gloria Porter, commerce award; Janet Huddlestan, home economics; Barry Fraser, art award, and Bill Edmunds, industrial education award.

The walk will begin at Meade Creek at 10 a.m. and end at the Kiwanis camp for handicapped children, benefactors of the funds raised by the Kiwanis and its Spade Club.

Better Deal On Welfare Asked by Group

By ROBIN BURGESS

Aggressive action is planned by the Victoria Low Income Group if the B.C. government ignores its latest brief requesting better treatment of welfare clients, Walter Olszewski, president, said Friday.

At a meeting Thursday night the group began compiling the detailed brief to be presented to the government in September.

The brief will also be widely publicized.

If the government takes no action then the public will realize that an aggressive move is justified, said Olszewski.

He didn't elaborate on the "aggressive move."

SOCIAL WORKERS

Olszewski said most social workers are more concerned about the public purse than about their clients.

"The social worker is not a home economist, that's not his job. He can't be on your side if he's protecting the public purse."

Among other points the brief, still in rough form, requests that "welfare clients be treated as human beings (individual human beings) and not as a file number" and an investigation of complaints about social workers' attitudes.

Two briefs previously presented to the government were virtually ignored by Welfare Minister Dan Campbell, Reg Clarkson, Low Income Group adviser said.

"The minister told us 'the welfare department can't be responsible if a few social workers get up on the wrong side of the bed'."

More on Douglas Hinted by Murphy

PASADENA, Calif. (UPI) — Sen. George Murphy, R—Calif., predicts there will be "startling" new revelations about Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas within the next two weeks.

Murphy made the remarks at the annual luncheon meeting of the Pasadena unit of Pro America, a volunteer patriotic group.

He refused to elaborate on the revelations but said, "I would resign, if I were him (Douglas)."

ELEVEN CITY VOLUNTEERS GET CUSO ASSIGNMENTS

Eleven Victoria volunteers have been selected to spend two years in professional jobs in underdeveloped countries, mainly in Africa and South America.

The names of the successful candidates, all graduates of the University of Victoria, were released by Mrs. Diana Caleb, Uvic co-ordinator of women's activities and a member of the campus committee for the Canadian University Service Overseas.

Later in the summer a total of 14 Victoria volunteers will join some 620 other Canadian graduates who have received postings in poor countries on three continents, including Asia.

CUSO is supported in Canada by participating universities and by the federal government. Salaries to be paid volunteers will be decided by the government of the host country.

The foreign countries also have the right to accept or reject volunteers according to their qualifications.

Nine members of the Victoria group will take up teaching jobs.

The two exceptions are John Parry, a B.C. government employee who will work as a hydrologist in South America; and Kent Simpson, who will be employed in food production, also in South America.

Top Athletes To Attend Uvic Parley

Four of Canada's outstanding athletes will take part in a conference of physical educators at the University of Victoria June 16-18.

Skier Nancy Greene Raine, swimmer Elaine Tanner and sprinters Irene Pietrowski and Harry Jerome will be at the conference June 17.

About 500 delegates are expected to attend the conference, the 18th biennial convention of the Canadian Association for Health, Physical Education and Recreation.

Members include teachers from universities, elementary and secondary schools and workers in voluntary or government groups concerned with fitness.

An international roster of speakers will discuss teaching techniques, sociology of sport and physical education for the retarded or physically handicapped.

Speakers include Dr. Lawrence Rarick of the University of California at Berkeley, Dr. Howard Slusher, University of Southern California, Dr. George Szasz, UBC faculty of medicine, Dr. Tom Hornsten, University of Washington Medical School, and Dr. Muska Mosston, Rutgers University.

SECURITY RISK SEEN

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The defence department's comptroller told Congress Friday that military spending cannot be cut back very much after the Vietnam war ends without endangering national security.

Robert C. Moot said the United States must maintain strong postwar defences because of threats posed by the communist world. He cited Red China, North Korea and the Soviet invasion of Czechoslovakia.

Commission Findings Show U.S. Historically Violent

By JOSEPH E. MOHBAT

WASHINGTON (AP) — Americans are a rather bloody-minded people who "are likely to remain so as long as so many . . . think violence is an ultimate solution to social problems," the national commission on violence reported this week.

It issued a 300,000-word report by two scholars on the anniversary of the fatal shooting of Senator Robert F. Kennedy, whose assassination led to formation of the national commission on the causes and prevention of violence.

It's the first of several reports to be issued by the commission, which already has published investigative studies of civil disorders in the United States in 1968.

The main body of the report is a collection of historical and sociological studies delving into violence in the U.S. since its founding.

ALWAYS VIOLENT

A brief summary by historian Hugh Davis Graham of Johns Hopkins University and political scientist Ted Robert Gurr of Princeton University contained these observations:

'Americans have always been a violent people, although this violence has assumed different forms and has involved different groups. . . .

"But Americans have been given to a kind of historical amnesia that masks much of their turbulent past. Probably all nations share this tendency to sweeten memories of their past through collective repression, but Americans have probably magnified this process of selection recollection, owing to our historic vision of ourselves as a latter-day chosen people, a New Jerusalem."

But, Graham and Gurr says, "the 1960s rank as one of our most violent eras."

MOST TUMULTUOUS

The report disclosed these statistics on violence:

—In numbers of political assassinations, riots, politically relevant armed group attacks, and demonstrations, the United States has been among the half-dozen most tumultuous nations in the world.

"But despite its frequency, civil strife in the United States has taken much less disruptive forms than in many non-Western and some Western countries."

—"Eleven of every thousand Americans took part in civil strife from mid-1963 to mid-1968 —almost all of its turmoil rather than conspiracy or internal war—compared with an average of seven per thousand in 17 other Western democracies in a similar five-year period."

—"Six of these 17 had higher rates of participation than the United States, including Belgium, France and Italy.

—"Although 220 Americans died in violent civil strife in the five years before mid-1968, the rate of 1.1 per million population was infinitesimal compared with the average of 238 deaths per million for all nations, and less than half the European average of 2.4 per million.

—"In total magnitude of strife, taking into account the unusual frequency and duration of strife in the United States as well as its more moderate levels of participation and casualties, the United States ranks first among the 17 Western democracies, and 24th among the 114 larger nations and colonies of the world."

Whites Leave Cities; Negroes Moving Less

By JEAN M. WHITE
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — In the last two years, whites have been leaving the nation's central cities at least three times as fast as in the previous six years of the 1960s.

This fact emerged from updated census bureau estimates given a House subcommittee. The statistical indicators point to a widening physical segregation of whites and blacks since the Kerner Commission warning of the apartheid American society.

These were the figures given the Ad Hoc Subcommittee on Urban Growth by Conrad Taeuber, associate director of the census bureau:

- The outmigration of whites from the cities rose sharply during the last two years to reach a rage of nearly 500,000 a year. This compares with a 141,000 average in the years between 1960 and 1966.
- At the same time, black migration to the cities slowed, dropping to about 110,000 a year from 1966 to 1968 in the previous six years, the number of city blacks rose about 370,000 a year.

"In other words," Baeuber summed up, "whites appear to be leaving the cities far more rapidly than ever before and blacks are replacing them at a slower rate than at any time in the past 20 years."

Despite the slowdown in Negro migration, the black population of the central cities has increased rapidly in recent years, Taeuber noted. Most of this increase has come from the natural increase of births rather than migrants from the rural South.

Pointing to the "distinct change" in the last two years, Taeuber told the House subcommittee:

"It is difficult to know whether the figures represent more than a temporary aberration in long-term trends."

Rep. Thomas L. Ashley (D—Ohio), chairman of the new House Banking Subcommittee on Urban Growth, pressed the census official when Taeuber spoke of "a reaction to events of the past few years."

Census experts normally feel more comfortable with statistics rather than social interpretations. Taeuber reluctantly mentioned problems plaguing the cities such as crime in the streets and schools.

The census statistics also contained indicators that residential segregation has been increasing.

In special censuses taking in 15 large cities, the results show that the percentage of blacks living in neighborhoods with the greatest black concentration increased over the last eight years. In Cleveland, for example, the proportion of blacks living on tracts three-quarters or more negro rose from 72 to 80 per cent from 1960 to 1965.

Nuclear-Age Zeppelin To Be Built

LUEBECK, Germany (UPI) — A shipyard has announced tentative plans to build the world's first atomic-powered Zeppelin — a nuclear-age version of the giant airships that roamed the skies before long-range airliners took over.

The Schlichting yard said it has taken an option on the design of Austrian engineer Erich von Ieress for an "airship of the future" and will build it if preliminary studies prove favorable.

The design calls for a streamlined, rigid-frame Zeppelin with a huge air-scoop hole in front funneling air to the atomic-powered engine. The air is then blasted through jets ringing the forward fuselage.

Alexander Schmidt-Klieher, Schlichting's airship project manager, said he is negotiating with America's General Electric Co., to build the atomic engine.

According to Schmidt-Klieber, the airship should carry 500 passengers and 50 tons of cargo at an average speed of 220 miles an hour for almost limitless distances.

Schmidt-Klieber estimated the airship would cost about $37,500,000.

Italians Sold Secrets

ROME (UPI) — An official investigation was launched into reports 30 senior military officers and civilians, including two Italian generals, have been selling military secrets since 1962.

Weddings

Faulkner — Locatelli

St. Patrick's Church was the scene of a wedding at 4 p.m. Saturday, April 26, 1969, where Carol Anne, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Locatelli, of Victoria, was united in marriage to Mr. Robert Elliott Faulkner, only son of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Faulkner, Richmond, B.C. The ceremony was solemnized by Reverend Father P. Ratchford.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was radiant in a floor-length empire gown of white Italian silk and sweeping train. Appliqued Swiss embroidered daisies adorned the empire bodice and front hemline of her dress, her veil designed and made by the bride was floor length, set off by a headpiece of fresh white rosebuds and stephanotis. She wore a gold wrist watch, a gift of the groom, and carried a beautiful cascading bouquet of white rosebuds and stephanotis. The matron of honor was Mrs. Mary Gail Wood of Edmonton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Achtem of Victoria. Bridesmaid was Miss Jeanie Locatelli and junior bridesmaid was Miss Annette Locatelli, both sisters of the bride. The attendants wore sleeveless floor-length April green crepe gowns with empire bodices. Adorning their hair were interwoven fresh daisies. They all carried baskets of fresh white daisies.

Mr. Brian Mansfield of Edmonton was best man and ushers were Mr. Edwin Hudvinen and Mr. Jim Paxton, both of Richmond, B.C.

Mr. Leonard Duncan was master of ceremonies at a reception held at the Uplands Golf Club. Mr. Duncan proposed the toast to the bride. The bride's mother was attractive wearing an original ensemble of aqua French jacquard with yellow accessories. The groom's mother was lovely in an ensemble of mint green linen with bone accessories. Soloist Mr. Jock Dunbar sang "Climb Every Mountain" and "The Wedding Prayer" accompanied by Mrs. Gill at the organ. A white lace tablecloth made by the bride's grandmother adorned the table. The three-tiered cake followed the floral theme, decorated with roses and daisies with a centrepiece of fresh white daisies.

Out-of-town guests included the bride's grandmother, Mrs. Boyd, of Nelson, B.C., Mrs. Mary Gail Wood and Mr. Brian Mansfield of Edmonton, several aunts and cousins from Edmonton and Lethbridge, Alberta, and Prescott, Ontario; other guests from Richmond, Vancouver and Port Alberni, B.C.

Johnson — Beischer

Archdeacon C. E. F. Wolff officiated at a double-ring ceremony in St. Luke's Anglican Church, May 17, 1969, when Barbara Louis Beischer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Beischer exchanged vows with Mr. Richard Philip Johnson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Thomas Johnson.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a white lace mini dress with pink satin trim. Pink ribbons hung over ringleted hair, matching the ribbons hanging from her bouquet of pink rosebuds, carnations and lilies of the valley. The maid of honor, Anne Marie Hannah, wore a pink satin mini dress with pink lace sleeves and white lace daisies at an empire waist. She carried white carnations and pink rosebuds. Mr. Ronald Thompson attended the groom as best man and the ushers were Messrs. Bill Beischer Jr. and Gord Swinton. Uncle of the bride Roy S. Palmer proposed a mini toast at the open house garden reception at the home of the bride's parents. About 100 family and friends attended and were received by the couple under a trellissed archway decorated with lilacs and pink and white wedding bells.

Lewis — Ward

Reverend Father Quigley officiated at a double-ring ceremony in St. Andrews Cathedral on May, 3, 1969, at 6:30 p.m., when Elaine Margaret, elder daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Ward exchanged vows with Mr. Richard Alan Lewis, younger son of Mr. and Mrs. David Lewis. Soloist, Miss Leona Hanley, was accompanied at the organ by Mr. Jack Lanigan.

Given in marriage by her father, the radiant bride chose a floor length gown of white peau d'elegance with matching train and featuring full sleeves of appliqued French lace. The chapel veil was complemented by an arrangement of silver leaves and seed pearls, and she carried a bouquet of sweetheart roses and stephanotis. Miss Dayle Campbell as maid of honor, Miss Marilyn Ward, bride's sister, as bridesmaid and Mrs. Richard Dack as bridesmatron, wore matching gowns of aqua ice peau d'elegance and carried bouquets of pink carnations and rosebuds.

Following the reception at Holyrood House, the bride and groom left to honeymoon on Orcas Island. They now reside in North Vancouver.

Oxendale — Bergin

A double wedding took place May 31, 1969, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. James L. Oxendale, 1120 Wychbury Avenue, when Julia Ann Oxendale exchanged vows with Mr. John Warrington, son of Mr. and Mrs. Tom Warrington of Victoria; and Linda May Bergin of this city became the bride of Mr. Stephen David Oxendale. The brides were given in marriage by their fathers, Mr. James L. Oxendale and Mr. Roy Bergin, in a ceremony performed by Reverend L. D. Wallwork, followed by a garden reception at 1120 Wychbury Avenue.

An evening party followed at the Bergin home, 767 Wilson Street, after which both young couples left for Vancouver.

Bell — Gray

A pretty wedding took place May 31st, at three o'clock in Metropolitan United Church, when Reverend E. Laura Butler united in marriage Leslie Anne, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. E. Gray, and Mr. Christopher Carl Bell, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. Bell. The bride wearing a short white lace dress with flower and net headpiece, was given in marriage by her father. Mrs. John King attended the bride and Mr. Pat Johnson was groomsman. Ushers were Mr. Keith Gray and Mr. Bill Bell, brothers of the bride and groom. A reception was held at Olde England Inn where Mr. W. Watkiss proposed the toast to the bride.

Mr. and Mrs. Bell will reside in Victoria.

CAMPAIGN and INFORMATION SERVICES ASSISTANT FOR THE COMMUNITY CHEST

A challenging position, encompassing the above two functions; requiring maturity, ability to work with and motivate people. Some years experience in working with news media, ability in writing and public speaking; a willingness to work irregular hours when necessary and previous experience in fund raising and other campaign work would be an asset.

Consideration might be given to part time employment for the public information function, only if the applicant has extensive experience.

Application by letter stating experience and salary expected to the executive director of the Community Chest of Greater Victoria, 1951 Cook Street.

BRIDGE LESSON

By OSWALD and JAMES JACOBY
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

The student looked over dummy with no enthusiasm. There was that nice spade suit but he held the singleton ace and there was only one entry to dummy. Finally the student decided to play to trick two. He cashed his ace of spades, entered dummy with the ace of diamonds and laid down the king of spades. The queen dropped and everything was roses. The student counted six spades, three hearts, two diamonds and two clubs and claimed all the tricks.

"Could I have done any better?" he asked the professor.

"You couldn't have made any more tricks but you could have played the hand a lot better," was the reply. "What would you have done if the queen of spades had not dropped?"

"I'd have gone after clubs and hoped that the man who won the third club wouldn't have a spade."

"Here is the correct play," said the professor. "You want to make six and want to play as safely as you can to give yourself every chance. At trick two you cash your ace of spades. At trick three you play your eight of clubs and duck in dummy irrespective of what is played by West. You win whatever suit is returned, go over to dummy's ace of clubs and claim six if both opponents follow to that second club. If one shows out you can still lay down dummy's king of spades and hope to drop the queen."

"Your play wouldn't have made seven, would it?" asked the student.

"No," replied the professor, "but I seem to recall that the contract was six."

HOLLYDENE PLACE
NEW OFFERING!!
SURROUND YOURSELF WITH PRESTIGE, QUALITY AND COMFORT FOR $43,500

1,744 sq. feet of luxury living in an unsurpassed setting of tall trees, spreading shrubs, lush lawns and expensive view of Georgia Straits featuring snow capped Mt. Baker.
The architect designed home is not "way-out" in appearance but is the type you would refer to as "good-looking," or as one which reflects "good taste." The ranch style spreads handsomely over the 100 foot wide sloping home site presenting an appealing blend of God's creation and man's design.
If you are considering a home in the $40,000 Price bracket, you won't find better value on the Victoria Market today!
See this home with me. You will appreciate the full wall feature fireplace in the huge living room, the dining room where family gatherings leave space to spare, the seaview, labour saving kitchen and the "sink-in" wall to wall carpets. Three bedrooms are as big as many living rooms and—oh so many more features.
Call me now — lets talk about your next home! There's a no cost bonus too! A well appointed year round guest cottage with a dozen uses. All this for just $43,500.

Darker Side Of Sex Shown To Policemen

A group of Washington State policemen were given a frightening glimpse of the darker side of sex this morning at their annual convention in Victoria.

"I show you these things so that you will be aware that such individuals exist in our society;" senior FBI officer J. Robert Sutthoff began.

Then with the aid of slides he discussed a weird variety of sexual sicknesses.

There was a sad parade of sexual abnormalities from homosexuality through to gruesome masochistic hangings.

Case histories were given of people who obtained sexual gratification through foot, ankle, high-heel, leather, satin and rubber fetishes.

Sutthoff showed how publishers prey on these people with expensive books catering to fetishes.

He showed an ad from one such magazine promoting a "One-Legged Art Model" for people with an amputee fetish.

"Name any material or object and this could be a fetish for someone," he said.

He talked of voyeurs and exponents of bondage, sadism and masochism.

"Before law enforcement agencies were aware of some of these practices we spent months investigating murders where no such murders occurred," he said.

Sutthoff outlined in slides several cases where accidental deaths have occurred from self-inflicted, horrifying torture.

He called these deaths "masochistic hangings" and explained that people sometimes go too far and kill themselves in their search for pleasure through pain.

"Strange? Yes, but there are such sick individuals in our society," he said.

The impact of his speech was evident among the 65 officers who were attending the International Association for Identification convention.

Jamaica Bids for OAS

WASHINGTON (Reuters) — Jamaica Friday formally applied for membership in the Organization of American States, informed sources said. They said the application to become the 24th member was contained in a note delivered to the OAS secretary-general, Galo Plaza, by the Jamaican ambassador, Sir Eggerton L. Richardson.

SPREE FOR TWO young cyclists was this morning's parade through Oak Bay to mark start of annual Tea Party, which features weekend events and marine attractions centred around Willows Beach. Riding with parade along route from Windsor Park to the Willows are Michael Harrison, left, 4, and his brother Wayne, 6, of 1880 St. Ann.

INSIDE CITY HALL

Frampton Earns Praise For Success With Pool

By JIM HUME

Accolades this week for Ald. Percy Frampton the politician and John Di Castri the professional.

Hume

Frampton, under considerable fire during recent months for a seeming lack of action on the new aquatic facility complex, shook off the barbs and plodded on with the knowledge that all that could be done was being done. He gets a pat on the back for that.

And Di Castri gets his olive wreath for the original design he presented to the swimming pool committee Thursday afternoon.

The politician and the pro have worked well teogther since they took their swing back east to look at the best in swimming pool design. Obviously, they have put their gained knowledge to good use.

Not that Thursday's unveiling of polished preliminary plans means that the pool will be under construction next week. There's the little matter of the site to settle yet.

Since the decision to design and build a new pool to replace the shaky Crystal was first made more than a year ago, the site for the new pool has always been listed as "between the Royal Athletic Park and the Curling Rink."

In recent months the city has quietly appropriated property in that general area but it needs more before a pool of the size proposed can be built. And property, these days, is expensive.

A few months ago, when the property problem first became obvious, it was suggested in this column that Central Park would eventually be named as the obvious, pre-landscaped site for the new pool.

That same suggestion fluttered across the conference table Thursday—but nervously. The politicians, ever aware of their public image, are scared to advocate the obvious.

The know the first whisper that they are seriously considering Central Park for the site will send editorial writers hurriedly reaching for their pens. And they know that verbal barricades would criss-cross the city of gardens with parks administrator Herb "never a blade of grass shall perish" Warren well in the van.

Surprise must be confessed with such men as Michael J. Griffin and Hugh Ramsay hesitate to commit themselves to what must be an obvious course.

Both men are members of the recreation committee and its swimming pool sub-committee. Both have made a name for themselves in local circles as being blunt and honest, and devil take the hindmost, when the public good is at stake.

Their nervousness as they sniff the air of battle on this one is understandable, but disappointing.

There will be screams once it is openly suggested the proposed pool can and should be built right in Central Park, no doubt. Both men, with lawyer Bob Hutchison, another committee member, backing them, should be able to take it.

Griffin in particular should be prepared to take the early stand.

After all he was the man who some years ago lambasted the city for daring to complain about financial losses incurred each year at Memorial Arena, the Crystal and the McPherson Theatre.

Possibly Griffin has forgotten his argument at that time.

He claimed, and it's a valid point, that the recreational facilities of the city were, in effect, parks.

"Just because you put a roof over them it doesn't make them any less a part of the parks system. If we could put a huge dome over Beacon Hill Park so that it could be enjoyed at controlled temperatures all year round, would we suddenly start trying to make a profit?"

Newspaper files have much longer memories than most politicians so we toss that reminder to the former firebrand, who has far too long enjoyed his absence from public controversy.

There are two ways to look at the proposal to build Di Castri's domed pools in Central Park.

The critics, weeping copious tears, will claim that yet another piece of green is being gobbled up by ugly builders.

The saner view will state that all that is being proposed is that part of Central Park be domed for year-round use.

Why such a proposal should cause tingles of alarm in the breasts of such stalwarts as Griffin, Ramsay, Hutchison and Frampton is beyond me.

Having said all that, one last thought: you will remember to drill a few bore holes before you start, won't you fellows? Just in case that rock outcrop behind and to the side of the arena extends to the park and makes pool excavations too costly.

No trouble, just part of the friendly advice service we run.

And now for a dash to Campbell River to defend my lake trout trophy in the annual city hall department head fishing contest. The trophy was won last year and, with a little luck, will remain in Hume possession for another 12 months. Just to prove that you can beat city hall.

Before the Magistrate

A woman pleaded guilty in central court Friday to obtaining $90 in goods and cash from a Colwood store March 31.

Arlene Eplen, 1551 Pearl, was remanded to June 17 for sentence.

Court was told she wrote a cheque to the store on a bank account that contained only six cents. Police said in the first four months of this year she had written 14 cheques on the same account for amounts totalling more than $500.

She faces only the one charge court heard.

She told the magistrate she had two children ages three and five and a husband who was employed. She was released pending preparation of a presentence report.

A Saanich man charged with two counts of arson following the gutting of two beach houses early Wednesday was remanded to Tuesday to elect a form of trial.

George B. Bruce, 43, of 5103 Cordova Bay, was represented by Vincent Reilly. Bail has been set at $1,500.

Two juveniles ages 14 and 15 appeared on separate charges of breaking into city and Oak Bay homes. They were both earlier raised from family court.

The 15-year-old faces four charges of breaking and entering and theft in Oak Bay and was remanded to Wednesday to elect a form of trial.

Bail was set at $750.

The 14-year-old faces two similar charges with respect to city dwellings and was remanded to Monday to elect trial. He did not ask for bail.

John J. Daley, CFB Esquimalt, was fined $100 for driving while suspended. Kenneth J. Kennedy, 2576 Vista Bay, was fined $150 for hit and run. Russell F. Cameron, 2796 Cadboro Bay, was fined $250 for impaired driving.

Charles D. Reader, 27, of 3608 Happy Valley Road, was fined $500 for an indecent act. He pleaded guilty earlier.

FLASHBACK ON CANADA

Quarrel Ousts U.K. Commanders

By BOB BOWMAN

Bowman

There was such a military-political quarrel in Canada in 1904 that it led to the dismissal of Lord Dundonald as commander-in-chief of the militia. It ended the practice of having British officers command forces in Canada.

Dundonald took over the militia in 1902 and, after studying defence needs, recommended the training of an army of 100,000 men and cadet corps across the nation.

Many people were shocked at the idea of having to support such a large peacetime establishment, and the government accepted only part of Dundonald's recommendations.

This annoyed him, but he really hit the roof when Dr. Pickell, mayor of Sweetsburg, was not allowed to become an officer, as Dundonald had recommended. Pickell's name was removed from the list by Sydney Fisher, the minister of agriculture.

Dundonald made a speech in which he said; "I feel certain that if Mr. Fisher's life had led him to soldiering instead of agriculture he would also feel annoyed. On personal grounds, gentlemen, I don't in the least mind. The lack of etiquette affects me little. I have been in Ottawa for two years."

Unsuccessful efforts were made to persuade the newspapers not to publish the speech. Officers in the Montreal garrison threatened to resign their commissions if Dundonald were forced to resign.

Agriculture Minister Fisher defended his action in the House by pointing out that he had been acting as minister of militia during the absence of Sir Frederick Borden, and therefore had a right to refuse the granting of a commission to Dr. Pickell.

On June 7 Dundonald's appointment as commander-in-chief was cancelled by the government, and since then Canadians have commanded the militia.

However, when the Canadian army went overseas in the First World War, it was under British officers including Lord Byng until 1917 when a Canadian, Sir Arthur Gurrie, became commander-in-chief.

After the war Sir Arthur Currie was principal of McGill University.

Other events on June 7:

1677—La Durantaye claimed Lake St. Clair-Lake Huron area for France.

1691—Francois LeMoyne and others were killed by Iroquois at Repentigny.

1866—Fenians invaded Canada from Vermont.

1887—Manitoba Legislature passed resolution protesting CPR monopoly.

The Wonderful World of Animals

By DR. FRANK MILLER

DEAR DR. MILLER: Can you help us with an increasingly serious problem? It's rats! Our cat is afraid of them; our dog ignores them. Please don't suggest getting another animal. We are too crowded already; when and if we get rid of some of these rats, we might have room for something else.

My husband has tried a plain old-fashioned rat trap. He gets one with it once in a while, but most seem to be too sophisticated to fall for it. A friend suggested strychnine tablets but we wouldn't dream of using them around our pets. Is there anything else you can suggest that would allow us to eliminate the rats and be sure of keeping our pets too? — L.K.

DEAR L.K.: As long as everyone else in the family had given up, perhaps it's up to you. Some of the newer rat poisons are comparatively safe when used according to the manufacturer's instructions, and with a little extra caution thrown in. The type of poison which causes (painless) internal hemmorhage might be used. Your pets could receive prophylactic doses of a vitamin from the doctor which could help withstand the effects of this ratty repast.

DEAR DR. MILLER: One cat, name of Julius, is my problem. We just adopted a younger brother of his and if he were an oversized mouse, Julius couldn't treat him worse. Julius knows by now he isn't supposed to hurt Little Caesar, so he leads him out of our sight and then beats the tar out of him. Will they adjust to one another eventually? — K.A.

DEAR K.A.: They might, if poor Caesar can last that long. In the meantime, better keep Julius' front nails clipped. You had better keep them apart, too, unless you are close enough to supervise the activities.

DEAR DR. MILLER: Sometimes, my pet newt, acts like he is deaf part of the time. Other times I think he isn't. What do you think he is? — E.L.

DEAR E.L.: Sometimes never does — hear you that is. While he has good vision, an excellent sense of smell under water and a fair sense of smell out of water, he has no sense of hearing at all.

DEAR DR. MILLER: In the paper, a while back, I read about this here pet pig that was killed and pickled. How could people do such a thing? To a pet, I mean? I hope they all get indigestion when they eat him. If they can. Dad killed our pet pig once and not one of us could eat pork after that. I think people who eat their own pets are worse than cannibals. Such people shouldn't have pets. — K.G.

COMMENT: They don't — for long.

DEAR DR. MILLER: How much sleep should birds have? Should we keep our bird in a dark room? Should he be covered at dark? Our bird, Napoleon, is a parakeet. He does not seem to sleep much. — B.B.

DEAR B.B.: Birds on the night shift, like the owl, are exceptions, but most set their internal alarm clock by the sun — and they are ready to retire when the sun goes down. If Napoleon is a normally active parakeet, he probably puts in very little daylight dream time. He is better off, though, not to be kept up late at night. Too much light can confuse his hormone system causing abnormal moulting or even problems of greater consequence.

Illustration Shows Where to Cut Flowers and Fruit

HOME GARDEN TIPS

How to Keep Plants In Blooming Trim

By JACK BEASTALL

Jack

The fourth illustrated gardening article for beginners explains the terms thinning and disbudding. Thinning is nothing more nor less than reducing the number, or quantity, of growths, fruits or flowers in order to improve quality of the remainder.

It is one of the basic practices when growing for exhibiting in flower shows.

Perennials, for example, have all thin, weaker growths cut off in spring and the stronger growths removed until only two to four remain. This gives large flowers which rate prizes.

Even removal of just the weak growths, or reducing strong growths from 30 to 15 will give a better garden display. It comes in handy when perennials do not get their five-year division, and flowers are getting smaller each year.

Thinning fruits is practised when trees bear a heavy set.

Fruit thinning by hand is not done until after the period known as "June drop," the time when trees discard all fruits which have no seeds (due to poor pollination or insect damage), and adjust the remainder to what the constitution of the tree can handle.

If, when this drop has finished, the trees are still heavily laden, gardeners remove some more fruits so that fewer and larger fruits will be harvested.

Fruits which grow in clusters should have all small fruits in the cluster removed to leave just one, or at the most, two.

When fruits grow singly, they should be thinned to a distance of three to four inches.

Disbudding is another form of thinning, but applied to flower buds instead of wood growths and fruits.

The aim is exactly the same as thinning, namely to produce larger, better colored flowers by reducing the number of flowers each stem will produce.

Chrysanthemums are a typical example of both thinning and disbudding. Enormous blooms seen in fall shows are the result of allowing not more than four stems to a plant, and disbudding so that each stem produces only one flower. In other words four (or less) blooms to a plant.

Roses are disbudded to get better blooms; carnations are disbudded, and any flowering perennials will respond with larger blooms if the number of buds is limited.

WORK FOR WEEK

Small shrubs of spring blooming tamarix, Weigela rosea variegata, and named early varieties such as Fairy and Boskoop Glory are greatly improved if flowered branches and even twigs are cut off just above where new growths are coming.

Young rhodos, azaleas and lilacs need to have old flower stem with seed pods removed, to allow new growth to develop.

Sow biennial seed (wallflower, forget-me-not, Canterbury-bell) and perennial seed (delphinium, lupin and columbine) now outdoors. Will need care all summer to raise plants ready to put into nursery rows by fall where spaces occur in good soil of vegetable garden.

Fall perennials can have stems thinned. See that enough moisture is maintained at roots.

Fritillarias and hardy outdoor amaryllis will be yellowing their leaves. These bulbous plants need almost dry conditions during July and August. Amaryllis belladonna flowers in late August.

Raspberry rows repay watering and mulching root area with grass clippings. These should not be deep while fruit is ripening, but may be increased after fruiting when pruning out of old canes is done about July.

Sow white summer turnips; seed of broccoli for fall, also Ballhead and Savoy cabbage, kale, and a special fall lettuce—Jack Frost and Evergreen.

Remember, no fertilizer to bush varieties of tomato until first fruits can be seen. This should be any time around June 15 for early ripening varieties.

$5000 SECOND MORTGAGE LOAN
FULLY INSURED WITHOUT EXTRA CHARGE

A Second Mortgage Loan to a maximum of $5000 with interest lower than Federal N.H.A. first mortgage loans, is now available for construction of a new home.

TO QUALIFY:

1. You must be the first occupant of the home.
2. You must have lived in British Columbia for 12 months immediately preceding the date of purchase or the date of completion of construction of the home.

Providing payments are made promptly as required, 10% (up to a yearly maximum of $50.00) will be refunded to you thus reducing the effective interest rate. For e.g. this would mean on a $5000, 25-year loan, the effective interest now would be 7½%.

...OR AN OUTRIGHT
HOME ACQUISITION GRANT OF $1000

A $1000 Home Acquisition Grant is available as an alternative to the Second Mortgage Loan and may be used for building or purchase of a new home started on or after February 9, 1968.

1. You must be the first occupant of the home for which application is made.
2. You must have lived in British Columbia for 12 months immediately preceding the date of purchase or the date of completion of construction of your new home.
3. Previously received Home-owner Grants will be deducted from the $1000 grant

How a Doctor Practised To Deceive

By MORTON MINTZ
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The former medical director of a major drug company says the job taught him "the meaning of loneliness and alienation."

In an unusual, 25-page document, the physician, Dr. A. Dale Console, said that after 6½ years "I reached a point where I could no longer live with myself. I had compromised to the point where my back was against a wall and I had to choose between resigning myself to total capitulation or resigning as medical director."

Finally, on July 1, 1957, he left the firm, E. R. Squibb and Sons, and entered the private practice of psychiatry in Princeton, N.J.

Subsequently, he testified about the drug industry before the late Sen. Estes Kefauver's Senate anti-trust subcommittee. Last March he was scheduled to testify before Sen. Gaylord Nelson's monopoly subcommittee but, because of illness, had to submit a written statement.

Learn Ways to Deceive the FDA

On his resignation:

I bear no malice toward Squibb. Actually, I regret the need to implicate Squibb at all, but if my testimony is to carry any weight I must choose between mentioning them or remaining silent . . . I came to the belief that Squibb was, if anything, more ethical than most.

Why he resigned:

I believe that the best answer can be found in my unfinished essay on "The Good Life of a Drug Company Doctor." Toward the end I said:

"These are only some of the things he must learn to rationalize. He must learn the many ways to deceive the FDA (Food and Drug Administration) and, failing in this, how to seduce, manipulate, or threaten the physician assigned to the new drug application (for marketing) into approving it even if it is incomplete.

"He must learn that anything that helps to sell a drug is valid even if it is supported by the crudest testimonial, while anything that decreases sales must be suppressed, distorted and rejected because it is not absolutely conclusive proof.

"He must learn to word a warning statement so it will appear to be an inducement to use the drug rather than a warning of the dangers inherent in its use . . .

"He will find himself squeezed between businessmen who will sell anything to justify it on the basis that doctors ask for it, and doctors who demand products they have been taught to want through the advertising and promotion schemes contrived by businessmen.

"If he can absorb all this, and more, and still maintain any sensibilities he will learn the true meaning of loneliness and alienation."

Inability to Admit His Limits

On doctors:

Probably the greatest fault of the average practitioner is his inability to understand and to admit to the limits of his own competence.

Unfortunately, many physicians enter into the fantasy entertained by their patients and fulfill their own infantile wishes to be omnipotent and omniscient. The average physician is not about to step off the throne that makes him God.

A heavy prescriber is a physician who writes more than 100 prescriptions per week. This is the prime target of the detail man (salesman) and in this group we probably have the least discriminating physicians in the country.

I find it difficult to believe that anyone can write that

FISHBOATS ARRESTED; TOO CLOSE TO ALASKA

JUNEAU, Alaska (UPI) — A Coast Guard cutter seized two Japanese fishing boats today in Norton Sound on Alaska's west coast.

Coast Guard headquarters here said the cutter Storis seized the vessels because they had dropped their net too close to shore. The Storis was escorting the boats to Nome where the skippers will be arraigned.

The Storis was en route to search for an air force plane missing in the Bering Sea when it was diverted to investigate a report that several Japanese fishing vessels were operating in Norton Sound.

Saigon Seeking U.S. Support Against Coalition Government

By DAVID HOFFMAN

SAIGON (WP) — President Nguyen Van Thieu's government has asked the Nixon administration to publicly oppose any coalition government with the Communists in South Vietnam prior to the 1971 elections here, reliable South Vietnamese sources reported Friday.

According to these sources, Saigon has asked also that after Presidents Nixon and Thieu confer Sunday on Midway Island, the United States publicly advocate:

- That the 1971 presidential elections be held with the current South Vietnamese government intact and in power. The elections, however, still might be supervised by a quasi-independent International Control Commission, probably with Communist representation.
- That the elections be governed by—or at least be "within the framework of"—South Vietnam's 1967 constitution. Article four of that constitution outlaws "every activity designed to publicize or carry out communism."
- That as part of any peace settlement, Hanoi publish and agree to a timetable under which the North Vietnamese army would be withdrawn from the South. U.S. forces would withdraw within the time frames specified for the North Vietnamese army, and in comparable quantities.

NONE AGREED TO

South Vietnamese officials admitted frankly Friday that not one of their government's requests has been agreed to by the U.S. mission here. Nor were officials optimistic that agreements would be forthcoming. Nevertheless, the requests are considered significant because they underscore Saigon's doubts and worries on the eve of Thieu's first face-to-face meeting with President Nixon.

As described by South Vietnamese, the official American position on Midway runs as follows:

It would be preferable to conclude the conference without issuing a joint communique. All details concerning future South Vietnamese governments, the timing of presidential elections, the possible amendment of South Vietnam's 1967 constitution are negotiable and should not be

MOSCOW (Reuters) — Soviet party chief Leonid Brezhnev today rebuffed an appeal from Romania to halt condemnations of China and launched a bitter attack on Peking at the world Communist summit conference here.

Brezhnev devoted 10 pages of his 77-page speech, which lasted for two hours and 20 minutes, to a detailed assault on Peking policies and on Chinese leader Mao Tse-tung in particular.

Apparently answering Romanian President Nicolai Ceausescue's appeal Thursday for no anti-China polemics, he said it had been the intention of the Soviet delegation to refrain from attacking Peking at the summit.

"However, the events of recent times and above all the character of the decisions taken by the ninth congress of the Chinese Communist party (held earlier this year) force us to deal with this question," he said.

"A new situation has arisen which is exerting a serious negative influence on the entire international situation and on the conditions of the anti-imperialist struggle.

Communist sources said the Romanian delegation was conferring on its strategy following Brezhnev's speech.

Brezhnev charged that Peking is waging "a political struggle" against the Communist movement, trying to split and undermine it.

In a reference to recent Sino-Soviet border fighting, he said China has moved from criticism of the policy of peaceful coexistence "on to the organization of armed conflicts, to a policy undermining the cause of peace. . ."

Ottawa, Peking Tie Near

By COLIN McCULLOUGH

PEKING — The Chinese are preparing to send an ambassador to Sweden in the next few days, it was learned here today, and it seems possible his arrival in Stockholm, almost coinciding with the arrival there of External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp from Ottawa, will result in negotiations over Canada's recognition of China reaching a speedy conclusion.

The Chinese side in the negotiations has been represented by Liu Chi-tsai, a minor diplomatic officer who has been acting as charge d'affaires since the Chinese foreign ministry ordered all heads of missions back to Peking for consultations during the cultural revolution more than a year ago.

LEADS TALKS

The Canadian side, which is higher ranking from the protocol point of view, includes the ambassador to Sweden, Arthur Andrew, counsellor Robert Edmunds and Blair Seaborn, head of the Far East division of Canada's external affairs department. Seaborn arrived in mid-day to lead the talks.

Sources in Ottawa today said it is "unlikely" Sharp would meet the Chinese envoy face to face but that Ambassador Andrew was handling negotiations.

The new Chinese ambassador to Sweden will presumably arrive with instructions from Premier Chou En-lai and, with Sharp in Stockholm at the same time, the talks should proceed quickly.

Diplomats in Peking assume that political questions between Canada and China were resolved easily, otherwise the talks would have broken off some time ago, and that the negotiations are now centring on trade and the necessary, but mundane, housekeeping problems involved in setting up embassies.

ONE-CHINA POLICY

The most important political point concerns the status of Formosa, but there would have been little point in Ottawa initiating talks in the first place unless it was willing to accept Peking's consistent and well-known one-China policy.

Since Formosa has the same policy—with the Nationalists claiming they are the legitimate government of China—Canadian recognition of Peking would force Chiang Kai-shek either to

STAFFORD
. . . gives details

Snoopy Tossed By Short?

SPACE CENTRE, Houston (UPI) — Apollo 10 moonship commander Thomas P. Stafford said today that officials still do not know what caused the wild gyrations in America's lunar lander when it was hovering 12 miles above the lunar surface last month.

"We don't know what happened," Stafford said. "We had a malfunction in the system. I hate to say a short, but we don't know what the trouble was . . . but there definitely was a malfunction."

Apollo 11 is scheduled for launch July 16, but an official go-no-go decision for that date will not be made until next Thursday.

Stafford's comments came in the pilots' first public report on the trail-blazing flight.

He said the lunar module, nicknamed "Snoopy," was flying "solid as a rock and then suddenly everything took off."

The gyration occurred while Stafford and Eugene A. Cernan were preparing to start their return rendezvous with John W. Young, who was flying the command ship in a higher lunar orbit. Stafford said he controlled the ship in eight seconds.

Despite the problem, the eight-day moon orbiting flight of Apollo 10 was a spectacular success and project officials said it cleared the way for Apollo 11 to land on the moon this summer.

PARADE RECALLS D-DAY LANDINGS

Friday night Victoria's Canadian Scottish, vets of D-Day and the 1939-45 war in Europe, marched again to commemorate the events of 25 years before.

Striding along Government with the modern regiment, snapping a fast eyes right at the reviewing stand, standing silent as the wreaths were laid, they looked again like the warriors they were.

Arthur Mayse

My love and I went food shopping the other evening, and for a treat before we got down to business, we walked slowly past the beef cuts on display. Then, dazed by prices that we wouldn't have believed a few years ago, we moved on to join the crowd around the ham butts.

Next day I asked Garth Graham, a youngish meat retailer of top repute, why the price of beef has climbed to where it now perches in our local stores.

The question is a popular one these days. Graham took a long breath. Then he said with empasis, "It has nothing to do with meat-cutter, butchers, or stores. And it makes me mad when Pat McGeer and other people make statements about the low price of beef in Ottawa. They don't know what they're talking about."

With this brisk opener off his chest, he listed the factors that are reducing sirloin to a fond memory for many a Victoria family.

His account held some surprises for us markedly carnivorous Victorians. Did you know, for instance, that we are fussier about our beef cuts than any city population in Canada?

A hard winter that upped rangeland labor and feed costs. To this, add fewer cattle on the market because of that winter, and increased American buying.

Also, times continue to change on the ranches where today's meaty steers originate.

The small spreads grow fewer, partly because it becomes harder to keep the kids on the farm. Correspondingly, the large ones are becoming larger still, and their owners are shrewder business men than those they are displacing.

The herd that started for market no longer has to get there, regardless of what beef prices may be when it arrives. Today, with improved transport, steers can be diverted or even fetched back.

Beef is big business, our rapidly-expanding Canadian population contributes to a bullish market of competitive bidding in which demand exceeds supply.

Today, the wholesale buyer of cattle on the hoof pays about $38 a hundredweight, from which his average net yield is roughly 58 per cent. The retailer buys this dressed carcass at $65.50 per 100 pounds. And what he sells to the public is perhaps 70 per cent of his purchase.

His gross profit ranges from 22 to 25 per cent, and his net, after wages, rent and assorted overhead, stands at from 3½ to 5 per cent.

Garth Graham, a cook who can make a lamb chop taste better than a T-bone, fired off these figures with speed and precision. Then he startled me by asserting that Alberta beef-eaters pay 10 per cent more than we, and that Calgary and Victoria claim the highest percentage of Canada's top-grade beef.

Further, Mr. Graham believes that we here are being over-catered to as compared with other parts of the country. Our large retired element is "very picky and choosy." Meat must be much more carefully trimmed and boned in Victoria than elsewhere. And per capita, we rate as large meat-eaters.

As a retailer, he thinks we should be varying our menus with the cheaper but toothsome varieties. I asked for suggestions, and got them: beef sausage; meat loaf of beef shank and pork neck mixed; boned and rolled brisket; short ribs braised and stewed, or barbecued; beef heart; chuck steak baked moist with onions and tomatoes.

And that super-cheap Ottawa hamburger?

Graham isn't saying it contained the following ingredients. But a butcher who will stoop to such tricks can evolve hamburger from cow meat, heart, pork scrap, and who knows what.

N-Ships Needed for Arctic Says Admiral

By PAT DUFOUR

Canada will need more ships capable of working in ice conditions, nuclear-powered submarine-type bulk carriers and hovercraft if she is to realize her full potential in the Arctic.

Rear-Admiral J. A. Charles, commander maritime forces Pacific, said Friday:

"If we are to protect our country's resources in the north, it is imperative that we co-ordinate our surveillance of the area—and have the forces in order to provide the necessary control."

He was interviewed following an Ottawa statement this week that the naval role of the armed forces would be enlarged.

Defence department sources said that while no major installations are anticipated ashore in the Arctic, Canadian ships will likely spend more time there. This is in line with Prime Minister Trudeau's April statement that the protection of Canadian sovereignty will be given top priority.

At the same time Canada will maintain its present Atlantic anit-submarine role with NATO, although perhaps on a modified scale.

Rear-Admiral Charles noted "a tremendous interest has been generated in the Arctic with the rapid development of its resources."

He also pointed out; "Canada is signatory of a convention which lists resources on the continental shelf as belonging to the country to which the shelf is attached. Much of it is shallow and Canadian."

"A surveillance of the Arctic is being carried out, with Maritime Command Argos planes flying loop patrols about three times in two months. This is not enough. Coast guard vessels are up there, too, but, again there are not enough.

Aerial surveillance must be increased and more vessels capable of operating in ice must be provided in order to do the job properly."

The admiral stressed that federal government officials are very aware of the need for a more efficient surveillance plan, similar to ones being operated on the Atlantic and Pacific coasts.

ADMIRAL CHARLES
. . . we need ships

He also felt the government's decision to call for a year-long study of re-establishing a deep-sea shipping industry had, in part, been prompted by the development of mines and oilfields in the north.

Admiral Charles felt that, to be economically feasible, an alternative to conventional vessels must be found for the north.

"I can see a future for bulk carriers that travel under the sea, pipe lines and air-cushioned machines in this business."

Admiral Charles warned that, with no merchant navy of its own, Canada's economic existence is dangerously vulnerable.

"We rely on foreign ships to move our goods . . . copper, minerals, timber . . . if any of the countries to which those ships belong decided to start requisitioning their vessels we would be powerless."

He stressed that Western Canada stood to lose more than any other part of Canada should this happen.

"A million tons of shipping leaves Vancouver every month, more than from Montreal, Halifax or Seattle. The economy of Western Canada would be in very real jeopardy."

In contrast to the Western world, which relied on competitive shipment by sea, the admiral said that Russia was building a tremendous merchant fleet, completely state-subsidized.

"This allows them to underbid and capture more and more of the market. I understand they are even carrying wheat from Australia."

He warned that, in the event of war, her massive merchant fleet would give Russia an edge in the control of the seas, menacing the Western world's ability to move its supporting supplies and troops.

All shipbuilding is subsidized in the United States, too, said the admiral, and other controls make it difficult for Canadian shipping to compete under current terms.

BETTING $2 on the nose in one of this afternoon's horse races at Vancouver Exhibition Park, an early patron takes advantage of the "service" offered by the first off-track betting shop to open in Victoria. Operated by R. T. Enterprises Ltd. at 727 Johnson, it is a branch directed by Chilliwack scrap dealer William Wosk. The bet is taken by Wosk associate John Pringle, left, and Victorian Vern Geisler, seated.

UNDER EYE OF LAW

Off-Track Betting Starts Despite Ban

By JOHN STINGER

Victoria's first off-track betting shop opened on Johnson Street Friday and making a $2 bet on the horse at Vancouver Exhibition Park was as easy as dropping shirts off at the cleaners.

If city council wants to close the shop, and past actions indicate that it will, there will probably be a court battle.

William Wosk, head of R. T. Enterprises Ltd. that set up their blackboard and bet receipt rack on the indoor mall at 727 Johnson, said today in an interview that he does not intend to leave just because his business licence might not be approved by council.

Council's A committee Thursday unanimously rejected the company's application.

The committee's rejection will go before full council for ratification next Thursday.

MAINLAND SHOPS

The Wosk operation has apparently stymied Vancouver's city officials: R. T. Enterprises has some nine shops operating in the metropolitan area.

He has been quoted as saying: "The city, the licence inspector and the police are very smart. They are waiting to see what happens. They don't want to get public money involved in a big court case."

Seventeen days ago, federal Justice Minister Turner gave the Commons notice of an emergency amendment to the Criminal Code to ban the off-track betting services.

They began opening by the hundreds in Ontario when a loophole was discovered in the Code's prohibition of off-track gambling.

It turned out to be legal to operate a messenger service which collects bets and carries them, for a fee, to the track where they are placed through the regular pari-mutuel.

ACTION ASKED

All 10 provinces have asked Turner to take fast action to close the loophole, arguing that the uncontrolled operation might give organized crime a toe-hold outside the bookmakers.

One Victoria city administrator who declined to be named said the whole issue "is sort of a balled-up mess." He blames the federal government for not having sped an amendment to the Code.

Victoria Police Chief Jack Gregory said he is not prepared to comment on R. T. Enterprises Victoria shop.

He pointed out that charges have been laid against the local operator of a shop in Abbotsford and suggested local police action will await results of that case.

RCMP in Abbotsford charged a Chilliwack man who operated the shop for Wosk with permitting a place to be used for the purpose of a common gaming or betting house.

POLICE WATCH

Chief Gregory would only say of the shop here: "We are aware of the situation and are looking into it."

The shop was opened by a man who identified himself as John Pringle and said he was an associate of Wosk's "from the mainland."

It will be operated by Vern Geisler, a Victoria man whose address in the directory listings is 2580 Prior.

Officials of the city licence department, the city solicitor and city prosecutor will meet Monday to decide a course of action, said a spokesman.

Interviewed at the shop, Pringle explained the operation:

A bettor comes in and chooses a horse by number and race at Exhibition Park. He pays the amount of his bet plus 50 cents, if it is under $5; ten per cent, if it is under $50 and five per cent if it is over $50.

The bettor receives a receipt showing amount paid and what he has bet on.

CASH TO TRACK

This is phoned directly to "the correlating centre, as we refer to it," in Vancouver, and when the bets are in, a messenger heads for the track with the cash and buys tickets to cover them.

By signing the bet receipt, the bettor has authorized R.T. Enterprises to act as his agent and place a legal wager.

If, by some circumstances, the bet cannot be placed, the better gets back his bet plus fee.

If he wins, the money can be collected as soon as the track verifies the results.

Student Limit First Of Uvic Expense Cuts

By BOB MITCHELL

A ceiling on enrolment will only be the first of a series of blows to be felt by the University of Victoria and the two other provincial universities due to short-changing in operating grants announced Friday.

The Uvic grant of $10,311,406 is almost $1.5 million less than the university's proposed budget, and $5 million less than the allotment given Simon Fraser University, an institution of comparable size.

Uvic based its budget on an estimated enrolment of 5,200 students, including 2,000 freshmen and 250 graduate students.

Those figures, said acting president Dean R. T. Wallace, must become the "absolute ceiling" for the 1969-70 session.

The enrolment ceiling at Uvic will be the first-ever for a B.C. university, and the board of governors will probably meet during the next week to discuss how to implement the limitation.

OBLIGATION TO RESIDENTS

Dean Wallace said Friday the university's first obligation is to residents of Vancouver Island, but he did not say whether enrolment restrictions would be aimed at mainland residents.

Also hit by the reduced grant are programs in graduate studies, fine arts, computer sciences and experimental education courses.

In announcing the $65 million operating grant to the three universities Friday, Education Minister Donald Brothers said the figure represents a 23 per cent increase over last year's grant.

However, Dean Wallace said Uvic would actually have less money in the coming session than last year.

SERIOUS PROBLEMS

"It won't begin to improve until people with kids realize that things have changed and there are serious problems involved in getting a university education.

"When people hear these figures they say 'Gee what a lot of money for the universities,' but they don't realize the effect of this slow starvation."

In 1968-69 B.C. government operating and capital grants to the three universities amounted to $32.39 for every man, woman and child in the province.

In Ontario it was $45.76, and in Alberta it was $60.86.

Wright said while salaries for instructors at Uvic would remain satisfactory, new faculty members would be discouraged from teaching here because new programs will mark time or be abandoned.

It was lack of provincial government support that forced UBC president Kenneth Hare to resign last February after less than a year in office.

The reduced grants also underline the necessity for formula financing over, for instance, a five-year period, which would allow the universitites to plan ahead.

Formula financing is now in effect in Alberta and Ontario.

Wright also blasted the government's "mindless favoritism" which saw Simon Fraser receive $2,345 per student, compared with $1,714 per student at Uvic.

"All we can do now is hope that out of this situation of no formula financing, students, faculty and administrators can say the same thing."

'VICIOUS ASSAULT'

2-Year Term For Stabbing

Hector Joseph Guilmette, 21, of CFB Esquimalt was sentenced to two years in the penitentiary Friday for stabbing a University of Victoria student May 27.

He was also given a six-month concurrent sentence for stealing a car.

His companion in the incident, George F. Wright, 19, also of CFB Esquimalt, was given a suspended sentence for theft of the same car. He was not charged in the assault.

Both pleaded guilty a week ago.

"By this wicked and vicious assault on this man you brought him to the brink of death," Magistrate William Ostler told Guilmette.

"It's very fortunate for you he didn't lose his life or you could be charged with murder."

The victim, Orville James Brown, 23, of 3240 Harriet, is in St. Joseph's Hospital in good condition.

The magistrate told Wright that in sentencing him he erased the assault completely from his mind.

"I'm satisfied you had nothing to do with it."

He ordered Wright to post a $500, 18-month good-behavior bond.

The stabbing occurred after an all-night drinking party involving the accused, Brown, and a friend, Ronald Calhoun, 29, of 352 Gorge, to whom the stolen car belonged.

APPOINTMENT of Dr. Charles F. Ballam as medical and educational director, Royal Jubilee Hospital, effective Sept. 1, has been announced by Dr. A. C. Pickles, executive director. Dr. Ballam has resigned as senior medical consultant to the B.C. Hospital Insurance Society effective Aug. 31. He graduated with first-class honors in the first class of the Medical School, University of British Columbia, in 1954 and interned at Royal Jubilee.

S.P.O.T. Zeros In On Drugs

The Saanich police-backed teen organization S.P.O.T. has embarked on a juvenile drug education program of its own, Sgt. Bill Chisholm said today.

He said the S.P.O.T. youngsters have purchsed, with their own funds, a film on marijuana aimed at supplementing police drug lectures in junior and senior high schools next term.

The film, which cost $375, was made recently in California by Sonny Bono, big-name rock singer with the Sonny and Cher duo.

"The kids viewed the film and were impressed with the honesty and straight forwardness of it," said Sgt. Chisholm. "It goes very carefully over the subject matter, it presents both sides of the picture, and it allows the kids to make up their own minds."

He said the youngsters raised money for the film with dances at Reynolds School.

New Drug Used Here Say Young Informants

By STEVE HUME

A new drug has emerged in substantial quantities among Victoria's youthful sub-culture, the Times has learned.

Tagged DMA by young informants who claim to have recently tried, or watched others experiencing the consciousness-altering compound, the drug is so new it is unknown to RCMP experts.

Youngsters told the Times that in the past week approximately 500 capsules of DMA were circulating widely through Victoria. They have a street market retail value of $6 per capsule.

Effects of the drug, according to one source, are observable contractions of facial muscles, staring eyes, minor amounts of over-all muscular trembling and tension, a marked lack of hyperactive behavior, and rushes of heat and cold.

INJECTED

According to the source, the DMA was most popular among regular users of amphetamines and heroin. He said these individuals were injecting the drug rather than taking it orally.

The junior high school and high school set, however, tended to use the drug orally, he said.

Some youngsters have said they believe the new drug is a combination of LSD, mescaline, hashish and dexedrine, others think it may be a newly introduced form of amphetamine.

There is a distinct possibility, however, that DMA is diethylthiambutene or dimethylthiambutene, a pair of drugs so close in the chemical family their effects would probably be similar.

USED BY VETS

Diethylthiambutene is used by veterinarians as an analgesic or pain-killer.

It also has qualities which classify it as a sedative and an hypnotic.

Hypnotic drugs are divided into two general categories:

● The first grouping depresses, much like alcohol, the cerebral cortex region of the brain.

● The second grouping penetrates much deeper, depressing the thalamic region of the brain.

The thalamus, according to evolutionists, is a very primitive part of the brain's structure, and its effects over higher centres of the organ are widespread.

SUGGESTIBLE

Under the influence of an hypnotic like diethylthiambutene an individual would likely experience reduced activity and go into a highly suggestible state.

Both diethylthiambutene and dimethylthiambutene are listed under the restricted thiambutene classification of the Narcotics Control Act schedule, which would make possession illegal except as provided by the act.

Whether DMA is, in actuality, diethyl or dimethyl of the thiambutene group remains a calculated guess until the drug can undergo complex analysis under laboratory conditions.

COOL-AID

In the meantime, Cool-Aid, a youth-oriented social work group, is recommending that anyone in possession of DMA and intending to use it wait until someone with chemical expertise can determine exactly what constitutes the compound.

It is Cool-Aid policy to warn youngsters of gross latent dangers in any specific drug circulating at the ime.

Recently the organization engaged in a campaign warning against a form of LSD being sold which was heavily adulterated with the drug ergotinine.

After police lab chemists identified the basic ergotinine, a drug used in obstetrics for contracting the uterus after delivery in order to prevent haemorhaging, Cool-Aid advised strongly against the LSD.

Heavy doses of ergotinine can cause convulsions.

After the Cool-Aid warning, according to several drug-using teen-agers, circulation of the bad "acid," which was characterized by an orange color, fell off steeply.

NOW . . . a Guy Named Joe

By RUSSELL FREETHY

JOE CROCKER

He was born in Sheffield, England twenty-three years ago last month and spent his early teenage years assimilating all the pop sounds he could. Ray Charles has influenced his style more than any one performer and Dylan is his favorite composer.

He had bottles thrown at him during his first public performance on an amateur night in a pub call Minerva.

At 16 he was playing semi-professionally in and around Sheffield at night and working as a gas fitter by day.

Joe Crocker is his name and with a little help from his friends he has become a major attraction in England, on the continent and on our east coast.

Crocker is a born musician who can neither read nor write music, but displays a deep feeling for it. As he sings, he picks away on an imaginary guitar, occasionally wailing blues with a mouth-harp or sitting in on drums.

Except for a few obvious differences he could almost be mistaken for Janis Joplin. Their vocal styling and stage presence are similar and both put everything they have got into their act.

Like Janis, Joe has paid his dues many times over by singing anywhere a microphone could be plugged in and many places where one could not. Emotional, exciting and exhausting on stage, Crocker always maintains a good rapport with his audience.

He is unique in the British underground where only composer artist groups have made it, for he writes very little of his material (he co-wrote Marjorine, his first hit in England), yet he still commands the respect and admiration of other artists.

The extent of his impact can perhaps be measured by the large number of musicians and writers that turn up in the audience wherever he performs.

The Grease Band, Crocker's backup group, are magically transformed into a super heavy backing the moment he comes on stage and together they provide one of the best and musically entertaining shows on the circuit today.

With Little Help From My Friends is the title of Crocker's first album and the single from it that should click is called Feeling Alright.

The little help came from such friends as Jimmy Page of Led Zepplin, Matthew Fisher of Procol Harum, Mike Kelly of Spooky Tooth, Stevie Winwood of Blind Faith and many other British artists who sat in as sidemen for the session.

Also included on the album are two Dylan compositions Just Like A Woman and I Shall Be Released, the title tune and Marjorine. Crocker is a good interpreter and adds new feeling and meaning to a song regardless of its origin. A very pleasant change.

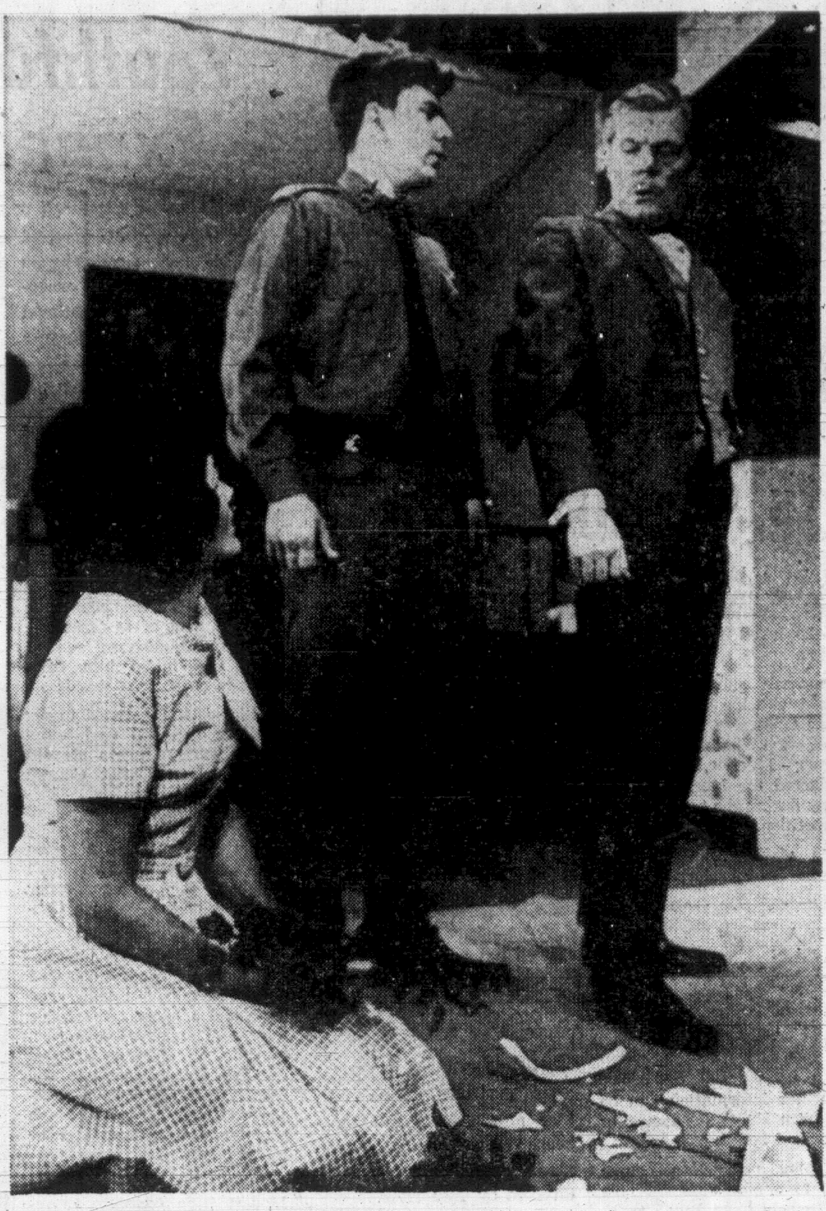
New Syndrome's soon-to-be opened studio in Vancouver will feature the world-famous board from Studio 3—of Western Recorders of Hollywood.

There is no other equipment in the world that has produced as many hits for as many groups and artists. The Beach Boys, Grassroots, The Mamas and Papas, The Association, Turtles, Fifth Dimension and Johnny Rivers have all recorded with it.

Aquarius was recorded on it. Several leading producers, upon hearing of its sale expressed their willingness to come to Vancouver just to use it.

The rest of the studio has been designed and engineered by Howard Tremaine, the authour of The Encyclopedia of Electronics and designer of studios and equipment for RCA and other major recording firms.

New Syndrome's own producers, sound engineers and mixers will receive extensive training in Los Angeles at both Western and United Recorders so that the Studio 3 board may be used to its fullest advantage.



SHATTERED as a vase, lies a hopeful illusion as John Cleary (Allan Purdy) cruelly reveals to his wife Nettie (Carolyn Stephenson) the truth about the roses, to the indignation of their son, Timmy (Stewart-Motteram). Scene is from Victoria Theatre Guild's production of the moving, humorous comedy-drama, The Subject Was Roses, opening at Langham Court next Saturday. Co-directed by Denise and Allan Purdy it will run through June 21. (Photo by William E. John).

When the Irish write well they have a way of probing sympathetically and surely to the absolute nerve centres of humanity.

The gentle dissection exposes the comedy people make just by being people: the strength in the bone and the weakness in the fibre.

Latest in a long line that has made the Irish theatre illustrious, is Brian Friel, a school teacher whose writing in Philadelphia, Here I Come, is touched with the instinctive poetry that gives a rich sheen to common speech and the lives of ordinary people.

An RPA production, it opened Friday night at McPherson Playhouse where it will run through next Saturday.

The play looks closely into the heart of a young man who has already torn up his roots and is about to depart forever from his homeland.

In order to let us experience the wavering emotions, the regrets and nostalgia, the memories and dreams of future glories, Friel has employed a somewhat rare device.

Two actors play two images of the same man. There is Public Gar O'Donnell, son of the inarticulate village shopkeeper, well played by Robert Price, and Private Gar, his alter ego; the inner self who nags him as his conscience, tempts him with fantasies and every now and the, forces him to face the truth.

The idea comes off well in this production because its director, Tom Kerr, uses every means to relate the two in his blocking and positioning and in establishing a precise balance between them.

It works too, because of the intelligence and sincerity of actors Terry Kelly and Eric Shneider and the excellent rapport developed between these two.

Admirably controlled and punctuated, Kelly's performance has just the right degree of understatement to gloss it with the illusion of complete naturalism.

Schneider has a fine rhythmic sense and gives an extremely sensitive performance as the alter ego.

Beautiful timing is a major character performance by element in a gem of a character performance by Owen Foran as the defeated school master and another effective character portrayal is that of the housekeeper by Ramona McBean.

Two scenes that had not "jelled" on opening night were a flashback involving Gar's aunt and uncle from Philadelphia and a farewell scene with his pals.

MISSED FIRM GRIP

In both cases the actors failed to establish a firm grip. Gay Scrivener, for example, an experienced actress, came near but never quite made Aunt Lizzy believable.

She was patently acting where others in the cast were providing an illusion of life.

There was nothing wrong with the director's concept at any point—in fact it was uniformly clear, it maintained a fine balance between what was comic and what was poignant in the isolation between father and son.

Only in the last 10 minutes did Kerr allow the play's tone to become a flat grey, its pace and rhythm to descend below the vitality level.

The overall impression of the production with its skeletal but adequate set and lighting, is that it provides an absorbing and entertaining evening that would have been just that much better with a few hours more rehearsal of those weak scenes.

Telephone Singers In Concert Program

With a successful year behind it, Victoria Musical Art Society looks forward to an interesting program series next season according to president Mrs. S. G. Watts' report to the society's 39th annual meeting held this week.

The series will include a concert by the B.C. Telephone Choir in January.

Reports included those from the Junior, Intermediate and Studio Groups and the historian's report, read by Mrs. J. Ingram Smith.

It was announced that auditions will again be held for the society's open scholarships which amount to $500.

The panel of officiers headed by Mrs. Watts was returned unanimously for the 1968-70 season.

Following the meeting, which was held at Craigdarroch Castle, a musical program was presented.

Taking part were vocal soloists Hilary Scott, Linda Scanlan and Penny Beavan; Stephen and Stuart Calder, violin and piano; Christopher Salm, flute, with Mrs. Salm at the piano, and violinist Jacqueline Tarry with Robin Wood at the piano.

The program was opened and closed by Gladys Pearcey's studio vocal ensemble.

Guitar Music Such as This Brings Tears or Gypsy Abandon

By BERYL PROUDMAN

Diamond In the Groove

Columbia records presents John Williams, ML 6008.

At 28 John Williams has, for several years, been considered among those who will inherit the mantle of guitar mastery from Segovia when it is passed on.

The technical skill and sensitivity of the guitarist are clearly demonstrated throughout this finely-executed, well-recorded performance but two bands on our copy should already be showing signs of wear, for they have been played far oftener than the rest.

Prime favorite, Tarrega's Recuerdos de la Alhambra has appealed to audiences ever since its premier performance.

Admittedly the melody is a bit of a tear-jerker, sentimental and of immediate appeal to the emotions so that the classical-music lover may feel a shade guilty at succumbing so readily to its charms. But reference to the delicate balance and smooth-flowing dexterity of Williams' performance can logically justify the attraction.

Ponce's less familiar Scherzino Mexicano is, in some ways, more interesting, for it has a light modern style and sprung rhythm which delight the listener afresh at each hearing.

Six other pieces lend interesting variety to the second side of this disc. The breathtaking swooping flight of a hummingbird is depicted in the final showpiece.

A restful, sweet-toned folk song, El Testamen de Amelia, dramatized with significant pauses and enriched by varitoned repeats, is contrasted by Turina's wild gypsy dance, Soleares.

The sharper, thinner tone of the Fandanguillo by Turina, plus a mood of meandering improvisation with peaks of excitement en route, makes this the most Spanish-sounding of all.

The unusual harmonies and progressions of Albeniz' Sevilla tone down the aggressively Spanish style of this work, remarkable for fast finger-work and many tones from shimmering glissandi, through ringing tremolo to strident, chunky chords.

Side one is devoted to Williams' transcription of Bach's fourth suite for lute. The third of the six movements, Gavotte, is already a popular favorite as arranged for other instruments.

This side is fittingly more classical in tone than the other. The first movement, Praeludium, requires well-articulated fingering for its run-decorated melody depends on balancing lower notes for continuous support.

NEAT TURNS

The second movement, Laure, is outstanding for its neat, quick turns, interesting rhythm and beautifully resonant vibrato.

This fine guitarist falls somewhere between the discreet scholasticism of Bream and the fiery passion of Segovia so he is both restful and uplifting to listen to in these charmingly varied selections.

Chubby Checker Would Prefer To Be Evans

WASHINGTON (AP) — A successful young businessman named Ernest Evans, who wishes he could shake his show business name of Chubby Checker, was in Washington recently to promote an African chess-type game called "Swahili."

Evans almost 10 years ago made it big in show business overnight at 16 when he sang and introduced The Twist that sent the nation into gyrations on the dance floor. He acquired his stage name by following another performer, Fats Domino (remember "Blueberry Hill"?), to stardom.

He has tried ever since to be Ernest Evans, as he is known in West Africa, where he has business investments. But he soon will be Chubby again when a new recording, "Jack of All Trades," is released by Kama Sutra under Buddha label.

The game Evans-Checker brought back from Africa and had manufactured by Milton Bradley is an ancient tribal one known in its place of origin as "The Game of Life."

Milton Bradley thought Swahili, which means freedom, more appropriate for a major game. When played by African tribes as long ago as 2,000 years, the game was taken so seriously that women were forbidden to participate and whole tribes were sometimes lost to the victors, Evans explained.

In the American version there are four tribes of plastic men, red, green, yellow and blue. The object is to capture rival tribes while protecting and advancing ones own.

It can be played by anybody over about eight years of age in an average time of 20 to 30 minutes. But in serious play, it can take as long as chess. "I have spent an hour and a half in one game in Nigeria," Evans said.

VICTORIA, B.C., SATURDAY, JUNE 7, 1969—PAGE 25

Arthur Mayse

My love and I went food shopping the other evening, and for a treat before we got down to business, we walked slowly past the beef cuts on display. Then, dazed by prices that we wouldn't have believed a few years ago, we moved on to join the crowd around the ham butts.

Next day I asked Garth Graham, a youngish meat retailer of top repute, why the price of beef has climbed to where it now perches in our local stores.

The question is a popular one these days.

Graham took a long breath. Then he said with empasis, "It has nothing to do with meatcutter, butchers, or stores. And it makes me mad when Pat McGeer and other people make statements about the low price of beef in Ottawa. They don't know what they're talking about."

With this brisk opener off his chest, he listed the factors that are reducing sirloin to a fond memory for many a Victoria family.

His account held some surprises for us markedly carnivorous Victorians. Did you know, for instance, that we are fussier about our beef cuts than any city population in Canada?

A hard winter that upped rangeland labor and feed costs. To this, add fewer cattle on the market because of that winter, and increased American buying.

Also, times continue to change on the ranches where today's meaty steers originate.

The small spreads grow fewer, partly because it becomes harder to keep the kids on the farm. Correspondingly, the large ones are becoming larger still, and their owners are shrewder business men than those they are displacing.

The herd that started for market no longer has to get there, regardless of what beef prices may be when it arrives. Today, with improved transport, steers can be diverted or even fetched back.

Beef is big business, our rapidly-expanding Canadian population contributes to a bullish market of competitive bidding in which demand exceeds supply.

Today, the wholesale buyer of cattle on the hoof pays about $38 a hundredweight, from which his average net yield is roughly 58 per cent. The retailer buys this dressed carcass at $65.50 per 100 pounds. And what he sells to the public is perhaps 70 per cent of his purchase.

His gross profit ranges from 22 to 25 per cent, and his net, after wages, rent and assorted overhead, stands at from 3½ to 5 per cent.

Garth Graham, a cook who can make a lamb chop taste better than a T-bone, fired off these figures with speed and precision. Then he startled me by asserting that Alberta beefeaters pay 10 per cent more than we, and that Calgary and Victoria claim the highest percentage of Canada's top-grade beef.

Further, Mr. Graham believes that we here are being over-catered to as compared with other parts of the country. Our large retired element is "very picky and choosy." Meat must be much more carefully trimmed and boned in Victoria than elsewhere. And per capita, we rate as large meat-eaters.

As a retailer, he thinks we should be varying our menus with the cheaper but toothsome varieties. I asked for suggestions, and got them: beef sausage; meat loaf of beef shank and pork neck mixed; boned and rolled brisket; short ribs braised and stewed, or barbecued; beef heart; chuck steak baked moist with onions and tomatoes.

And that super-cheap Ottawa hamburger?

Graham isn't saying it contained the following ingredients. But a butcher who will stoop to such tricks can evolve hamburger from cow meat, heart, pork scrap, and who knows what.

DESTROYER STAYS ON JOB

HMCS Qu'Appelle will continue to shadow a Russian hydrographic vessel off the Queen Charlotte Islands as long as the foreign ship remains near Canadian waters, navy sources said today.

The destroyer-escort was dispatched to the area late Monday.

N-Ships Needed for Arctic Says Admiral

Ice-Breakers, Bulk Carriers, Hovercraft on List of Requirements

By PAT DUFOUR

Canada will need more ships capable of working in ice conditions, nuclear-powered submarine-type bulk carriers and hovercraft if she is to realize her full potential in the Arctic.

Rear-Admiral J. A. Charles, commander maritime forces Pacific, said Friday:

"If we are to protect our country's resources in the north, it is imperative that we co-ordinate our surveillance of the area—and have the forces in order to provide the necessary control."

He was interviewed follow*ing an Ottawa statement this* week that the naval role of the armed forces would be enlarged.

Defence department sources said that while no major installations are anticipated ashore in the Arctic, Canadian ships will likely spend more time there. This is in line with Prime Minister Trudeau's *April statement that the pro*tection of Canadian sovereignty will be given top priority.

At the same time Canada will maintain its present Atlantic anit-submarine role with NATO, although perhaps on a modified scale.

Rear-Admiral Charles noted "a tremendous interest has been generated in the Arctic with the rapid development of its resources."

He also pointed out, "Canada is signatory of a convention which lists resources on the continental shelf as belonging to the country to which the shelf is attached. Much of it is shallow and Canadian."

"A surveillance of the Arctic is being carried out, with Maritime Command Argos planes flying loop patrols about three times in two months. This is not enough. Coast guard vessels are up there, too, but, again there are not enough.

Aerial surveillance must be increased and more vessels capable of operating in ice must be provided in order to do the job properly."

The admiral stressed that federal government officials are very aware of the need for a more efficient surveillance plan, similar to ones being operated on the Atlantic and Pacific coasts.

ADMIRAL CHARLES

He also felt the government's decision to call for a year-long study of re-establishing a deep-sea shipping industry had, in part, been prompted by the development of mines and oilfields in the north.

"I can see a future for bulk carriers that travel under the sea, pipe lines and air-cushioned machines in this business."

Admiral Charles warned that, with no merchant navy of its own, Canada's economic existence is dangerously vulnerable.

"We rely on foreign ships to move our goods . . . copper, minerals, timber . . . if any of the countries to which those ships belong decided to start requisitioning their vessels we would be powerless."

He stressed that Western Canada stood to lose more than any other part of Canada should this happen.

"A million tons of shipping leaves Vancouver every month, more than from Montreal, Halifax or Seattle. The economy of Western Canada would be in very real jeopardy."

In contrast to the Western world, which relied on com*petitive shipment by sea, the* admiral said that Russia was building a tremendous merchant fleet, completely state-subsidized.

"This allows them to underbid and capture more and more of the market. I understand they are even carrying wheat from Australia."

He warned that, in the event of war, her massive merchant fleet would give Russia an edge in the control of the seas, menacing the Western world's ability to move its supporting supplies and troops.

All shipbuilding is subsidized in the United States, too, said the admiral, and other controls make it difficult for Canadian shipping to compete under current terms.

BETTING $2 on the nose in one of this afternoon's horse races at Vancouver Exhibition Park, an early patron takes advantage of the "service" offered by the first off-track betting shop to open in Victoria. Operated by R. T. Enterprises Ltd. at 727 Johnson, it is a branch directed by Chilliwack scrap dealer William Wosk. The bet is taken by Wosk associate John Pringle, left, and Victorian Vern Geisler, seated.

UNDER EYE OF LAW

Off-Track Betting Starts Despite Ban

By JOHN SLINGER

Victoria's first off-track betting shop opened on Johnson Street Friday and making a $2 bet on a horse at Vancouver Exhibition Park was as easy as dropping shirts off at the cleaners.

If city council wants to close the shop, and past actions indicate that it will, there will probably be a court battle.

William Wosk, head of R. T. Enterprises Ltd. that set up their blackboard and bet receipt rack on the indoor mall at 727 Johnson, said today in an interview that he does not intend to leave just because his business licence might not be approved by council.

Council's A committee Thursday unanimously rejected the company's application.

MAINLAND SHOPS

The Wosk operation has apparently stymied Vancouver's city officials: R. T. Enterprises has some nine shops operating in the metropolitan area.

He has been quoted as saying: "The city, the licence inspector and the police are very smart. They are waiting to see what happens. They don't want to get public money involved in a big court case."

Seventeen days ago, federal Justice Minister Turner gave the Commons notice of an emergency amendment to the Criminal Code to ban the off-track betting services.

They began opening by the hundreds in Ontario when a loophole was discovered in the Code's prohibition of off-track gambling.

It turned out to be legal to operate a messenger service which collects bets and carries them, for a fee, to the track where they are placed through the regular pari-mutuel.

ACTION ASKED

All 10 provinces have asked Turner to take fast action to close the loophole, arguing that the uncontrolled operation might give organized crime a toe-hold outside the bookmakers.

One Victoria city administrator who declined to be named said the whole issue "is sort of a balled-up mess." He blames the federal government for not having sped an amendment to the Code.

Victoria Police Chief Jack Gregory said he is not prepared to comment on R. T. Enterprises Victoria shop.

He pointed out that charges have been laid against the local operator of a shop in Abbotsford and suggested local police action will await results of that case.

RCMP in Abbotsford charged a Chilliwack man who operated the shop for Wosk with permitting a place to be used for the purpose of a common gaming or betting house.

POLICE WATCH

Chief Gregory would only say of the shop here: "We are aware of the situation and are looking into it."

The shop was opened by a man who identified himself as John Pringle and said he was an associate of Wosk's "from the mainland."

It will be operated by Vern Geisler, a Victoria man whose address in the directory listings is 2580 Prior.

Officials of the city licence department; the city solicitor and city prosecutor will meet Monday to decide a course of action, said a spokesman.

Interviewed at the shop, Pringle explained the operation: A bettor comes in and chooses a horse by number and race at Exhibition Park. He pays the amount of his bet plus 50 cents, if it is under $5; ten per cent, if it is under $50 and five per cent if it is over $50.

The bettor receives a receipt showing amount paid and what he has bet on.

CASH TO TRACK

This is phoned directly to "the correlating centre, as we refer to it," in Vancouver, and when the bets are in, a messenger heads for the track with the cash and buys tickets to cover them.

By signing the bet receipt, the bettor has authorized R.T. Enterprises to act as his agent and place a legal wager.

If, by some circumstances, the bet cannot be placed, the better gets back his bet plus fee.

If he wins, the money can be collected as soon as the track verifies the results.

SPOT Zeros In On Drugs

The Saanich police-backed teen organization SPOT has embarked on a juvenile drug education program of its own, Sgt. Bill Chisholm said today.

He said the SPOT youngsters have purchsed, with their own funds, a film on marijuana aimed at supplementing police drug lectures in junior and senior high schools next term.

The film, which cost $375, was made recently in California by Sonny Bono, big-name rock singer with the Sonny and Cher duo.

"The kids viewed the film and were impressed with the honesty and straight forwardness of it," said Sgt. Chisholm. "It goes very carefully over the subject matter, it presents both sides of the picture, and it allows the kids to make up their own minds."

He said the youngsters raised money for the film with dances at Reynolds School.

Student Limit First Of Uvic Expense Cuts

By BOB MITCHELL

A ceiling on enrolment will only be the first of a series of blows to be felt by the University of Victoria and the two other provincial universities due to short-changing in operating grants announced Friday.

The Uvic grant of $10,311,406 is almost $1.5 million less than the university's proposed budget, and $5 million less than the allotment given Simon Fraser University, an institution of comparable size.

Uvic based its budget on an estimated enrolment of 5,200 students, including 2,000 freshmen and 250 graduate students.

Those figures, said acting president Dean R. T. Wallace, must become the "absolute ceiling" for the 1969-70 session.

The enrolment ceiling at Uvic will be the first-ever for a B.C. university, and the board of governors will probably meet during the next week to discuss how to implement the limitation.

OBLIGATION TO RESIDENTS

Dean Wallace said Friday the university's first obligation is to residents of Vancouver Island, but he did not say whether enrolment restrictions would be aimed at mainland residents.

Also hit by the reduced grant are programs in graduate studies, fine arts, computer sciences and experimental education courses.

In announcing the $65 million operating grant to the three universities Friday, Education Minister Donald Brothers said the figure represents a 23 per cent increase over last year's grant.

However, Dean Wallace said Uvic would actually have less money in the coming session than last year.

SERIOUS PROBLEMS

"It won't begin to improve until people with kids realize that things have changed and there are serious problems involved in getting a university education.

"When people hear these figures they say 'Gee what a lot of money for the universities,' but they don't realize the effect of this slow starvation."

In 1968-69 B.C. government operating and capital grants to the three universities amounted to $32.39 for every man, woman and child in the province.

In Ontario it was $45.76, and in Alberta it was $60.86.

Wright said while salaries for instructors at Uvic would remain satisfactory, new faculty members would be discouraged from teaching here because new programs will mark time or be abandoned.

It was lack of provincial government support that forced UBC president Kenneth Hare to resign last February after less than a year in office.

The reduced grants also underline the necessity for formula financing over, for instance, a five-year period, which would allow the universitites to plan ahead.

Formula financing is now in effect in Alberta and Ontario.

Wright also blasted the government's "mindless favoritism" which saw Simon Fraser *receive $2,345 per student, com*pared with $1,714 per student at Uvic.

"All we can do now is hope that out of this situation of no formula financing, students, faculty and administrators can say the same thing."

'VICIOUS ASSAULT'

2-Year Term For Stabbing

Hector Joseph Guilmette, 21, of CFB Esquimalt was sentenced to two years in the penitentiary Friday for stabbing a University of Victoria student May 27.

He was also given a six-month concurrent sentence for stealing a car.

His companion in the incident, George F. Wright, 19, also of CFB Esquimalt, was given a suspended sentence for theft of the same car. He was not charged in the assault.

Both pleaded guilty a week ago.

"By this wicked and vicious assault on this man you brought him to the brink of death," Magistrate William Ostler told Guilmette.

"It's very fortunate for you he didn't lose his life or you could be charged with murder."

The victim, Orville James Brown, 23, of 3240 Harriet, is in St. Joseph's Hospital in good condition.

The magistrate told Wright that in sentencing him he erased the assault completely from his mind.

"I'm satisfied you had nothing to do with it."

He ordered Wright to post a $500, 18-month good-behavior bond.

The stabbing occurred after an all-night drinking party involving the accused, Brown, and a friend, Ronald Calhoun, 29, of 352 Gorge, to whom the stolen car belonged.

New Drug Used Here Say Young Informants

By STEVE HUME

A new drug has emerged in substantial quantities among Victoria's youthful sub-culture, the Times has learned.

Tagged DMA by young informants who claim to have recently tried, or watched others experiencing the consciousness-altering compound, the drug is so new it is unknown to RCMP experts.

Youngsters told the Times that in the past week approximately 500 capsules of DMA were circulating widely through Victoria. They have a street market retail value of $6 per capsule.

Effects of the drug, according to one source, are observable contractions of facial muscles, staring eyes, minor amounts of over-all muscular trembling and tension, a marked lack of hyperactive behavior, and rushes of heat and cold.

INJECTED

According to the source, the DMA was most popular among regular users of amphetamines and heroin. He said *these individuals were inject*ing the drug rather than taking it orally.

The junior high school and high school set, however, tended to use the drug orally, he said.

Some youngsters have said they believe the new drug is a combination of LSD, mescaline, hashish and dexedrine. Others think it may be a newly introduced form of amphetamine.

There is a distinct possibility, however, that DMA is diethylthiambutene or dimethylthiambutene, a pair of drugs so close in the chemical family their effects would probably be similar.

USED BY VETS

Diethylthiambutene is used by veterinarians as an analgesic or pain-killer.

It also has qualities which classify it as a sedative and a hypnotic.

Hypnotic drugs are divided into two general categories:

- The first grouping depresses, much like alcohol, the cerebral cortex region of the brain.
- The second grouping penetrates much deeper, depressing the thalamic region of the brain.

The thalamus, according to evolutionists, is a very primitive part of the brain's structure, and its effects over higher centres of the organ are widespread.

SUGGESTIBLE

Under the influence of a hypnotic like diethylthiambutene an individual would likely experience reduced activity and go into a highly suggestible state.

Both diethylthiambutene and dimethylthiambutene are listed under the restricted thiambutene classification of the Narcotics Control Act schedule, which would make possession illegal except as provided by the act.

Whether DMA is, in actuality, diethyl or dimethyl of the thiambutene group remains a calculated guess until the drug can undergo complex analysis under laboratory conditions.

COOL-AID

In the meantime, Cool-Aid, a youth-oriented social work group, is recommending that anyone in possession of DMA and intending to use it wait until someone with chemical expertise can determine exactly what constitutes the compound.

It is Cool-Aid policy to warn youngsters of gross latent dangers in any specific drug circulating at the time.

Recently the organization engaged in a campaign warning against a form of LSD being sold which was heavily adulterated with the drug ergotinine.

Heavy doses of ergotinine can cause convulsions.

After the Cool-Aid warning, according to several drug-using teen-agers, circulation of the bad "acid," which was characterized by an orange color, fell off steeply.

How a Doctor Practised To Deceive

By MORTON MINTZ
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The former medical director of a major drug company says the job taught him "the meaning of loneliness and alienation."

In an unusual, 25-page document, the physician, Dr. A. Dale Console, said that after 6½ years "I reached a point where I could no longer live with myself. I had compromised to the point where my back was against a wall and I had to choose between resigning myself to total capitulation or resigning as medical director."

Finally, on July 1, 1957, he left the firm, E. R. Squibb and Sons, and entered the private practice of psychiatry in Princeton, N.J.

Subsequently, he testified about the drug industry before the late Sen. Estes Kefauver's Senate anti-trust subcommittee. Last March he was scheduled to testify before Sen. Gaylord Nelson's monopoly subcommittee but, because of illness, had to submit a written statement.

Saturday, the monopoly subcommittee released the 25-page document. It consists of questions derived from the written testimony and of the 54-year-old physician's answers. Here are excerpts:

Learn Ways to Deceive the FDA

On his resignation:

I bear no malice toward Squibb. Actually, I regret the need to implicate Squibb at all, but if my testimony is to carry any weight I must choose between mentioning them or remaining silent . . . I came to the belief that Squibb was, if anything, more ethical than most.

Why he resigned:

I believe that the best answer can be found in my unfinished essay on "The Good Life of a Drug Company Doctor." Toward the end I said:

"These are only some of the things he must learn to rationalize. He must learn the many ways to deceive the FDA (Food and Drug Administration) and, failing in this, how to seduce, manipulate, or threaten the physician assigned to the new drug application (for marketing) into approving it even if it is incomplete.

"He must learn that anything that helps to sell a drug is valid even if it is supported by the crudest testimonial, while anything that decreases sales must be suppressed, distorted and rejected because it is not absolutely conclusive proof.

"He must learn to word a warning statement so it will appear to be an inducement to use the drug rather than a warning of the dangers inherent in its use . . .

"He will find himself squeezed between businessmen who will sell anything to justify it on the basis that doctors ask for it, and doctors who demand products they have been taught to want through the advertising and promotion schemes contrived by businessmen.

"If he can absorb all this, and more, and still maintain any sensibilities he will learn the true meaning of loneliness and alienation."

Inability to Admit His Limits

On doctors:

Probably the greatest fault of the average practitioner is his inability to understand and to admit to the limits of his own competence.

Unfortunately, many physicians enter into the fantasy entertained by their patients and fulfill their own infantile wishes to be omnipotent and omniscient: The average physician is not about to step off the throne that makes him God.

A heavy prescriber is a physician who writes more than 100 prescriptions per week. This is the prime target of the detail man (salesman) and in this group we probably have the least discriminating physicians in the country.

I find it difficult to believe that anyone can write that

FISHBOATS ARRESTED; TOO CLOSE TO ALASKA

JUNEAU, Alaska (UPI) — A Coast Guard cutter seized two Japanese fishing boats today in Norton Sound on Alaska's west coast.

Coast Guard headquarters here said the cutter Storis seized the vessels because they had dropped their net too close to shore. The Storis was escorting the boats to Nome where the skippers will be arraigned.

The Storis was en route to search for an air force plane missing in the Bering Sea when it was diverted to investigate a report that several Japanese fishing vessels were operating in Norton Sound.

Saigon Seeking U.S. Support Against Coalition Government

By DAVID HOFFMAN

SAIGON (WP) — President Nguyen Van Thieu's government has asked the Nixon administration to publicly oppose any coalition government with the Communists in South Vietnam prior to the 1971 elections here, reliable South Vietnamese sources reported Friday.

According to these sources, Saigon has asked also that after Presidents Nixon and Thieu confer Sunday on Midway Island, the United States publicly advocate:

- That the 1971 presidential elections be held with the current South Vietnamese government intact and in power. The elections, however, still might be supervised by a quasi-independent International Control Commission, probably with Communist representation.
- That the elections be governed by—or at least be "within the framework of"—South Vietnam's 1967 constitution. Article four of that constitution outlaws "every activity designed to publicize or carry out communism."
- That as part of any peace settlement, Hanoi publish and agree to a timetable under which the North Vietnamese army would be withdrawn from the South. U.S. forces would withdraw within the time frames specified for the North Vietnamese army, and in comparable quantities.

NONE AGREED TO

South Vietnamese officials admitted frankly Friday that not one of their government's requests has been agreed to by the U.S. mission here. Nor were officials optimistic that agreements would be forthcoming. Nevertheless, the requests are considered significant because they underscore Saigon's doubts and worries on the eve of Thieu's first face-to-face meeting with President Nixon.

As described by South Vietnamese, the official American position on Midway runs as follows:

It would be preferable to conclude the conference without issuing a joint communique. All details concerning future South Vietnamese governments, the timing of presidential elections, the possible amendment of South Vietnam's 1967 constitution are negotiable and should not be

Russia Rebuffs Attempt To Heal Rift With China

MOSCOW (Reuters) — Soviet party chief Leonid Brezhnev today rebuffed an appeal from Romania to halt condemnations of China and launched a bitter attack on Peking at the world Communist summit conference here.

Brezhnev devoted 10 pages of his 77-page speech, which lasted for two hours and 20 minutes, to a detailed assault on Peking policies and on Chinese leader Mao Tse-tung in particular.

Apparently answering Romanian President Nicolae Ceausescu's appeal Thursday for no anti-China polemics, he said it had been the intention of the Soviet delegation to refrain from attacking Peking at the summit.

"However, the events of recent times and above all the character of the decisions taken by the ninth congress of the Chinese Communist party (held earlier this year) force us to deal with this question," he said.

"A new situation has arisen which is exerting a serious negative influence on the entire international situation and on the conditions of the anti-imperialist struggle.

Communist sources said the Romanian delegation was conferring on its strategy following Brezhnev's speech.

Brezhnev charged that Peking is waging "a political struggle" against the Communist movement, trying to split and undermine it.

In a reference to recent Sino-Soviet border fighting, he said China has moved from criticism of the policy of peaceful coexistence "on to the organization of armed conflicts, to a policy undermining the cause of peace. . . ."

Quite a problem t' decide on buildin' a lot o' hospitals. Mebbe we should jist concentrate on buildin' one, fer a start.

Ottawa, Peking Tie Near

By COLIN McCULLOUGH
Special to The Times

PEKING — The Chinese are preparing to send an ambassador to Sweden in the next few days, it was learned here today, and it seems possible his arrival in Stockholm, almost coinciding with the arrival there of External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp from Ottawa, will result in negotiations over Canada's recognition of China reaching a speedy conclusion.

The Chinese side in the negotiations has been represented by Liu Chi-tsai, a minor diplomatic officer who has been acting as charge d'affaires since the Chinese foreign ministry ordered all heads of missions back to Peking for consultations during the cultural revolution more than a year ago.

LEADS TALKS

The Canadian side, which is higher ranking from the protocol point of view, includes the ambassador to Sweden, Arthur Andrew, counsellor Robert Edmunds and Blair Seaborn, head of the Far East division of Canada's external affairs department. Seaborn arrived in mid-day to lead the talks.

Sources in Ottawa today said it is "unlikely" Sharp would meet the Chinese envoy face to face but that Ambassador Andrew was handling negotiations.

The new Chinese ambassador to Sweden will presumably arrive with instructions from Premier Chou En-lai and, with Sharp in Stockholm at the same time, the talks should proceed quickly.

Diplomats in Peking assume that political questions between Canada and China were resolved easily, otherwise the talks would have broken off some time ago, and that the negotiations are now centring on trade and the necessary, but mundane, housekeeping problems involved in setting up embassies.

ONE-CHINA POLICY

The most important political point concerns the status of Formosa, but there would have been little point in Ottawa initiating talks in the first place unless it was willing to accept Peking's consistent and well-known one-China policy.

Since Formosa has the same policy—with the Nationalists claiming they are the legitimate government of China—Canadian recognition of Peking would force Chiang Kai-shek either to

Majestic Prince Second

Arts and Letters, which ran second in both the Kentucky Derby and the Preakness, galloped to an easy win in the Belmont Stakes this afternoon.

Majestic Prince, the Canadian-owned favorite, who beat Arts and Letters in the first two races in his bid for the Triple Crown, was second.

Dike, who surprised a capacity crowd by taking an early lead in the 1½-mile-classic, placed third.

Arts and Letters paid $5.40, $2.60 and $2.10; Majestic Prince, $2.40, $2.10 and Dike paid $2.10.

The winner and Prince held back of Dike until the far turn when Arts and Letters made his bid on the inside.

Making the turn for home it was Arts and Letters with the Prince taking over from Dike for second.

Arts and Letters made it an easy win at the wire, six lengths ahead.

Tossed By Short?

SPACE CENTRE, Houston (UPI) — Apollo 10 moonship commander Thomas P. Stafford said today that officials still do not know what caused the wild gyrations in America's lunar lander when it was hovering 12 miles above the lunar surface last month.

"We don't know what happened," Stafford said. "We had a malfunction in the system. I hate to say a short, but we don't know what the trouble was . . . but there definitely was a malfunction."

Stafford's comments came in the pilots' first public report on the trail-blazing flight.

He said the lunar module, nicknamed "Snoopy," was flying "solid as a rock and then suddenly everything took off."

The gyration occurred while Stafford and Eugene A. Cernan were preparing to start their return rendezvous with John W. Young, who was flying the command ship in a higher lunar orbit.

PARADE RECALLS D-DAY LANDINGS

Friday night Victoria's Canadian Scottish, vets of D-Day and the 1939-45 war in Europe, marched again to commemorate the events of 25 years before.

Striding along Government with the modern regiment, snapping a fast eyes right at the reviewing stand, standing silent as the wreaths were laid, they looked again like the warriors they were.
